Green Calls 'Mine Union Ouster Move 'Hitlerism'

A. F. L. Head Will Fight Policy Unit Action to Last Ditch.

Frey Is Denounced For Strike Remark

The Labor Situation.

William Green, advised the policy committee of the United Mine Workers of America, his own union, had voted for his expulsion, branded the action "Hitlerism."

Mass unionization of the steel industry was urged in a report financed by the Brookings Institution and Faulk Foundation.

Quiet prevailed on all fronts in the automotive industry as employers and unions prepared to iron out remaining differences.

Green Assails Move.

By William V. Nessly.

"Hitlerism" was the reply of William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, last night when he was advised the policy committee of the United Mine Workers of America, his own union, had voted for his expulsion.

The committee's action, marking another step in the long fight between Green and John L. Lewis, president of the Mine Workers, was based on Green's attitude toward the recent automobile strike in plants of General Motors Corporation. The strike was directed by Lewis as head of the Committee for Industrial Organization, whose member unions have been suspended by the federation for "insurrection" and "dual unionism."

The gray-haired, ruddy-faced head of the Federation, who has devoted to the labor movement the decades that have passed since he became a union member as a boy mine worker, showed no trace of anger as he discussed the expulsion move with newspapermen.

He made it plain, however, he would fight the decision through all the steps made possible by the union laws. Formal trial in his own local union at Coshocton, Ohio, was said to be the first step. Either side in the fight then can appeal through various steps up to the executive board of the international union. However, Thomas Kennedy, secretary-treasurer of the union, held the executive board has authority to expel Green.

Both Sides in Accord.

While the move to expel Green was the outstanding activity of the day in labor-Government circles, there were these other developments:

Representatives of both factions, the C. I. O. and the A. F. of L., united in refusing, at a Labor Department conference, to approve waiving of the 40-hour provision in the Walsh-Healey act to permit steel companies to bid on supplying steel for the Navy.

Chairman Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee, forecast modification of the act if the Navy fails ultimately to obtain the bids sought.

A. D. Lewis, representing the C. I. O., proposed a Federal investigation of the "possibility of collusion" in steel companies' failure to submit bids.

The mine union policy committee completed its list of demands for a new working contract effective April 1, and moved on to New York to present them to the operators' committee beginning tomorrow.

John P. Frey, president of the Metal Trades Department of the A. F. of L., issued a statement bitterly criticizing the automobile strike settlement, as Green had done previously.

While the miners' policy committee linked Frey with Green in its resolution denouncing their "gratuitous, insulting, anti-union, strike-breaking statements" it called only for expulsion of Green.

Green's status as federation president if he is expelled by his own union is a matter of debate. He holds honorary membership in several unions and his supporters contend such membership is sufficient to qualify him for the federation presidency.

Called Surrender.

At the time of the auto strike settlement, Green had issued a statement criticizing it as "a surrender." In the course of negotiations to end the tie-up Frey had asked General Motors for assurance, and had been given it, that Lewis' United Automobile Workers would not be granted their demand for recognition as the sole bargaining agency for all General Motors employes. Granting of the demand would have squeezed out all A. F. of L. unions in General Motors plants.

In the truce reached, Lewis' union was granted recognition as the bargaining agency for its own members, with the promise that General Motors would deal with them alone for six months. Requests of other organizations for collective bargaining are, in the meantime, to be referred to Gov. Frank Murphy of

80 Passengers Shaken; Engine Falls to Creek

Witness Tells How Huge Van Derailed Locomotive in Md. Crash.

A collision with a huge moving van sent the locomotive of a speeding Baltimore & Ohio passenger train plunging 40 feet into a creek bed late yesterday afternoon, killing two men at a grade crossing at Dorsey, Md., 7 miles north of Laurel, on the railroad's main line between Washington and Baltimore.

The dead:

Claude Beard, 44, of Frederick, Md., the fireman, was seriously hurt and removed by State police to St. Vincent's Hospital at Baltimore.

Four Coaches Derailed.

Four coaches of the train were derailed and left hanging perilously close to the edge of a bridge crossing the creek. All of its 80 passengers were badly shaken by the crash, but none, on the basis of early reports, was injured.

The body of the engineer was buried in the mud of the creek bottom beneath the locombtive. The locomotive plunged half its length into the mud.

Ely's body was torn to pieces and shattered parts of the van were scattered along the right of way for more than 300 yards. The terrific impact of the collision exploded the van's gasoline tanks and the locomotive was enveloped with flame. Witnesses told State police of the Laurel substation that the train was traveling at a speed of 70 miles an hour at the time of the crash.

Miraculously Beard, the fireman, was thrown clear of the locomotive as it rolled over in its plunge from the bridge. He was tossed into an orchard down a 40-foot embankment at the approach to the bridge. The full extent of his injuries was not immediately determined, but it was believed they were serious.

Stalled on Track.

The moving van stalled on the tracks as the train roared down on it. Witnesses said the engineer frantically pulled his whistle cord.

One of the witnesses to the wreck was Mrs. Robert Hook, a niece of the engineer, whose home in Dorsey is not more than 50 yards from the crossing. She was standing on her front porch to wave her customary greeting to her uncle.

"I heard the train whistle several times," she said. "The van had just reached the crossing. Suddenly there was a terrible crash and a flash of flame. The whole locomotive seemed to be covered with fire."

Mrs. Hook sobbed out her version of the story in near hysteria. A few minutes later she collapsed.

Harry Pope, the engineer's brother, also is a resident of Dorsey.

Former Naval Officer, 2d Indicted in U. S. for Spying in Peacetime, Enters Plea of 'Nolo Contendere' in District Court.

In a last-minute capitulation to the advice of his attorneys, former Lieut. Comdr. John S. Farnsworth, 44, yesterday surrendered himself to the mercy of Justice John M. Proctor on charges of conspiring with two Japanese diplomats to betray the military defenses of the United States.

The courtroom was packed with thrill-seekers who expected to hear secrets of international intrigue laid bare when Farnsworth, tall, erect and with head held high, entered the courtroom—the second man to be indicted for esplonage in peacetime in the history of the United States.

"I plead nolo contendere," the former naval officer, who graduated from Annapolis in 1915 and was discharged from the service in 1927, muttered almost inaudibly after Defense Attorney William L. Leahy obtained permission to withdraw a previous plea of "not guilty."

The plea, seldom invoked in criminal trials, means "I do not contest the Government's charges" and is tantamount to a plea of guilty, explained Assistant District Attorney Samuel Beach, who had called more than 50 witnesses to Washington from all parts of the Nation to assist in the prosecution of Farnsworth.

Justice James M. Proctor, after accepting the plea, directed defense and prosecution attorneys to file briefs giving him a comprehensive background of the case to guide him in passing sentence.

The maximum sentence possible under the District's indeterminate sentence law is from 4 to 20 years. The minimum sentence would be two days' imprisonment.

Moulton Gives Brookings Plan For Prosperity

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Feb. 15.—Dr. Harold Glenn Moulton, economist, advanced tonight a seven-point program, headed by a balanced Federal budget, as the essential requirements for further national recovery.

As president of the Brookings Institution of Washington, an organization for scientific research in economics and governmental problems, Dr. Moulton said his conclusions were based upon an exhaustive survey which that organization began in 1932.

The report was delivered before more than 300 business, civic and industrial leaders at a dinner given by the $10,000,000 Maurice and Laura Faulk Foundation, which financed the project.

Dr. Moulton said:

"In brief, the essential requirements for a consistent program of further recovery may be summarized as follows:

"1. The re-establishment of a balanced Federal budget as a foundation on which to build enduring progress.

"2. Continuance of the present policy of maintaining a fixed price

Bill in Senate Asks Federal Pay Increase

Second Measure to Insure Efficiency to Be Brought In Next Week.

Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, yesterday introduced a revised low-bracket pay raise bill and immediately set to work on a measure aimed at effecting greater efficiency among Government employes.

The second bill, which probably will be introduced in the Senate late this week, would set up a system of weeding out inferior employes by means of examinations.

Although details of the measure have not been worked out, Senator McCarran said a tentative proposal is to require examinations at the end of a first year's service and to select the better of 50 per cent for promotion.

A second examination would be held at the end of the second year and the 15 per cent making the best grades would be retained for promotion.

The question as yet undecided is what would be done with those who fail to pass the examination. Senator McCarran said he would be opposed to seeing them dismissed from the service. Demotion, he said, would be preferable.

There is also a question, still undetermined, as to whether experienced and present employes should be required to undergo the tests.

As McCarran made a second visit to the White House yesterday in connection with his legislative efforts for higher Government pay, it is believed that the efficiency bill will carry out some of the President's own ideas in this particular.

Senator McCarran declined, however, to divulge the nature of his conversation with the President other than to say that he was "encouraged" in his efforts to raise the salaries of the low-bracket Government workers.

He said that his revised pay bill does not alter substantially any of the major provisions of the original bill, which established a minimum yearly wage of $1,500 and provided for increases among all classes up to $3,600.

"The revised bill," he said, "merely clarifies the first measure and embraces some classes of employes overlooked in the first bill."

There is still some doubt whether McCarran will be able to persuade the Senate Civil Service Committee to hold hearings on the measure before it receives the promised recommendations of the President with regard to reclassification and related subjects.

Seven Convicts KidnapGuards, Escape in Cars

By the Associated Press.

Raleigh, N. C., Feb. 15.—A desperate band of seven heavily armed convicts roared over eastern North Carolina highways in stolen automobiles today after making a break from the Caledonia Prison Farm in Halifax County and abducting two prison officials.

The two prison officials, Capt. I. D. Hinton, personnel officer, and Steward W. L. Roberts, along with Walter H. Willard, 19-year-old Raleigh youth who was forced by the convicts to go with them as they commandeered his car, were released unharmed tonight near Vass, in Moore County.

The search immediately shifted to that section.

A small army of officers was put on the trail immediately after news of the escape became known. There was some loss of time, to drive 12 miles to report the break. County, municipal and township officers throughout the area were reinforced by 70 members of the State highway department.

Late today, the convicts and their hostages were reported speeding

Preston Gibson, Who Packed Ten Lives Into One, Dies at 57

Preston Gibson, who at 57 had lived 10 ordinary men's lives, died yesterday at a New York veterans' hospital of a heart ailment.

Gibson, son of the late Senator Randall Lee Gibson, of Louisiana, and nephew of the late Chief Justice of the United States Edward D. White, was born in Washington.

He was a newspaperman, short story writer, playwright, was married four times, three times to wealthy heiresses, served as a driver of a French ambulance during the World War and later enlisted in the United States Marine Corps as a private when the United States entered the conflict.

Gibson's first wife was Minna Field, a niece of Marshall Field and a daughter of Mrs. Thomas Nelson Page, with whom he eloped in 1900 while he was a student at Yale. He was divorced and in 1907 married Grace McMillan Jarvis, a grand-daughter of the late Senator James McMillan, of Michigan.

At this second marriage Reginald Vanderbilt, a friend at Yale, served as best man. It ended in divorce as did his third marriage, to Mrs. Benjamin Beatrice Pratt, a granddaughter of Col. H. H. Rogers, oil millionaire. He later married Evelyn Spaulding.

Gibson was termed the Society Playwright in Washington. Among his plays which were produced at the Belasco Theater here during the early part of the century were "Success," "The Vacuum" and "Derelict." Many others were produced at New York and other cities.

From 1908 until 1909 Gibson contributed daily and Sunday articles to The Washington Post. His clubs here were Chevy Chase, Metropolitan, Playhouse and Racquet and Squash.

Gibson's body will be brought here for military services and funeral at Arlington Cemetery.

U. S. Studies Plan to Tax Aliens' Cash

3 Finance Officials Are Preparing Data for Roosevelt.

Drastic Penalties Under Consideraton; Affect $8,000,000,000.

By Sidney Olson.

A proposal to slap a new and drastic penalty tax on the $8,000,000,000 of "hot money," or foreign capital, now in the United States, will be laid before the President within a few days, it was indicated yesterday.

Three Administration finance chieftains who met to study means of stemming the continued heavy inflow of gold to this country are considering this among a number of other suggestions, it was learned.

Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., Marriner S. Eccles, chairman of the board of governors of the Federal Reserve System, and James M. Landis, chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, met in the office of Secretary Morgenthau for a detailed discussion of methods to insure domestic stability despite the speculative "shuttling" of foreign funds in and out of the principal world money markets.

Named by President.

"Hot money" is the term the President used at a press conference several months ago to describe the swift and steady influx of capital from shaky foreign centers. Strictly speaking, about $6,500,000,000 of the foreign capital here is invested in American long-term securities, while the other $1,500,000,000 is short-term capital, according to the Federal Reserve Board. But although the latter total is the real "hot money," the rest of it may at any time, through withdrawal, become equally "hot."

Secretary Morgenthau was reluctant to answer "leading questions" on the extent of the discussion yesterday, preferring to remain silent until later in the week when, after further work by the three agencies' technical experts, either a joint announcement will be made or a White House statement released.

The Secretary, however, definitely indicated his personal opposition to any type of exchange control such as is now operative in Germany and other European countries, "except as a last resort." He said:

"The only need for control of exchange is when a country is hard pressed financially. We passed that phase several years ago.

"Neither has there been any dis-

Glass Calls Cummings' Court Plea 'Evasive;' D. C. Bar Attacks Plan

1936 Democratic Platform Quoted

By Edward T. Folliard.

In a tumultuous meeting last night, the Bar Association of the District of Columbia condemned President Roosevelt's proposal to increase membership of the United States Supreme Court, charging in a resolution that it would bring the court under the Chief Executive's "domination," make it "subservient to his will" and "undermine the judicial system."

The resolution was introduced by George P. Hoover, a former president of the association, who described himself as an "active Democrat."

Nine hundred of the Bar Association's 1,100 members jammed the auditorium of the United States Chamber of Commerce Building for the special meeting to consider the President's history making plan. The vote on Hoover's condemnatory resolution was by voice, but judging from the volume of "ayes" 85 per cent of the lawyers were for it.

Warning Is Ignored.

They voted "aye" despite a warning from E. Hilton Jackson that the resolution was tantamount to an "indictment" of President Roosevelt—that it was even worse than that.

"I believe," Jackson shouted, "that this resolution is a motion to impeach the President of the United States."

"Good! Good!" cried several members. "What of it."

An amendment by Jackson to strike out the paragraph containing the words "domination" and "subservient" was defeated. So, too, was a resolution by Robert I. Miller to remain quiet about the President's proposal.

The lawyers voted for the Hoover resolution despite a warning from H. Winship Wheatley, another former president of the Bar Association.

Plea by Wheatley.

"I plead with you for moderation for the good of this organization," cried Wheatley. "It is perfectly apparent that the passage of this resolution will close the doors of the executive offices to members of this organization."

Boos and hisses sounded in the auditorium, and later on Thomas Rhodes was to cry out that he would vote to condemn the President's plan "if every door in Washington was closed on me."

"All right, gentlemen," said Wheatley when he resumed his speech, "I am asking for moderation. If I read this resolution correctly, it has a clause impugning the motives of the President.

Wheatley was interrupted by a burst of laughter.

"Yes," cried one member, "that's why we are against it."

Henry I. Quinn, president of the bar association, pounded his gavel, and called on the members to show respect for Wheatley's argument.

"The American Bar Association," continued Wheatley, "and the bar associations all over the country took a position hostile to the New Deal. The lawyers of the country are ultra-conservative. They are conservative by nature."

"Right to Rule."

"But the people of this country have a right to rule. If you have any doubt about it, look at the majority Roosevelt got in November and find out. It was the younger generation that elected Congress and the President, and it seems to me that this organization ought to realize that our training has been along conservative lines."

"And, though we have been taught to regard as sacred the things that have gone before, there is a younger element in this country that has a

By Franklyn Waltman.

Blushing a deep red and gulping glasses of water to hide his embarrassment, James A. Farley, Postmaster General and chairman of the Democratic National Committee, last night was kissed publicly as a token of affection of Democratic women for him and heard himself eulogized as a man of honesty, honor, decency, good temper and courage.

Seldom has any national party chairman had the encomiums paid to him that were heaped on a smiling, bald-headed "Jim" Farley last night by President Roosevelt and Vice President John N. Garner, whose remarks were seconded and loudly cheered by some 1,600 Democratic chieftains and party workers from all parts of the country. It was a testimonial dinner for "Jim" at the Mayflower Hotel.

Not Quite at Ease.

From the beginning to the end it was Jim's party—and he was the only obviously embarrassed person there. Farley, who has doped out Presidential campaigns with a greater accuracy than any man in memory, who can address audiences in the tens of thousands without blinking an eye, and who has taken many vigorous assaults on the chin without ceasing to smile, was not quite at home last night when praise without measure was heaped on him.

He seemed glad when attention was diverted to others—when the audience arose and cheered the President, the Vice President, Mrs. Roosevelt, Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, and Secretary of State Cordell Hull, and when Gov. George H. Earle, of Pennsylvania, brought cheers with a reference to the President's plan for revamping the Federal judiciary.

The Earle reference to the President's judiciary reorganization plan, made in connection with an announcement that the Senate of the Pennsylvania Legislature would vote within an hour to approve the Nation in 'Greater Need of Attorney General,' Virginian Says.

Text of Senator Minton's address—Page 9.

By Robert C. Albright.

Aroused at what he called Attorney General Cummings' "evasive" defense of the President's bill to enlarge the Supreme Court, Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, said last night, "The country is in infinitely greater need of an Attorney General than of additional judges on the Supreme Court."

The Virginian's stinging comment came as the Administration's radio defense of its court plan was taken up by Senator Sherman Minton, Indiana Democrat. Assailing the court, Minton charged "five men" on the Supreme bench wield "absolute veto power" over legislative policies.

Glass told reporters he regarded Cummings' Sunday night radio speech "as the most evasive, disingenous and misleading statement that he had ever read on any grave public problem."

"Wet Nurses" for Justices.

He referred to the proposed six judicial appointees as "judicial wet nurses for six of the present members of the court."

Senator Minton's radio defense was based squarely on the issue of enlarging the court, shorn of all judiciary precedural reform arguments. The Indianan said the Supreme Court "is packed now by appointees of administrations gone and repudiated," and that "this bill will unpack it." He said the program takes from five justices "an absolute veto power over legislative policies of the people's chosen representatives."

Earlier a Senate Judiciary Committee poll indicated the old Sumners bill for voluntary full pay retirement of Supreme Court justices at 70, regarded by many as a strategical forerunner of the President's program, will be approved by a sub-committee today and by the full Senate Judiciary sub-committee next Monday. It already has passed the House.

The plan now is to carry the court retirement measure to the floor of the Senate next week, far in advance of any effort on a showdown on the White House judiciary bill. Some leaders in the fight against a six-judge increase candidly admit they hope thereby to promote retirement of two or three justices thus lessening demand for the President's plan.

Sumners Calls Committee.

Other developments:

Chairman Hatton W. Sumners, of the House Judiciary committee, called a meeting of his group today, but declined to disclose whether the White House judiciary program will be considered. House strategy on a bill to expedite Justice Department intervention in lower court cases involving the Constitution, recently held up at request of the President, will be discussed.

Senator Pat McCarran, Nevada Democrat, chairman of a special judiciary sub-committee considering the Supreme Court retirement bill, conferred with the President. Later he called a meeting of his sub-committee to act on the retirement measure this morning, and conferred briefly with Representative Sumners, its author. McCarran said the President favors the bill.

Senator Edward R. Burke, (Democrat), of Nebraska, outspokenly opposed to Supreme Court enlargement, proposed a Constitutional amendment to provide for compulsory retirement of Federal judges when they reach 75 years of age. The Nebraskan said there could be "NO compromise" on the President's proposal to enlarge the Court.

Representative E. E. Cox, Georgia Democrat, and chairman of an informal "steering committee" of House Democrats opposed to the President's plan, called a meeting of House opposition members for today.

As Senator Minton took the air to support in full the President's proposals, a survey by the National Broadcasting Co. revealed that the judiciary reorganization proposal "has resulted in more radio discussion than any single piece of legis-

Mother Informs on Son, Collapses as Police Arrest Red-Haired Suspect in 9 Holdups Here

"My son is the red-haired bandit and he has threatened to kill me if I expose him."

After sobbing these words to Chief of Detectives B. W. Thompson, Mrs. Richard Morley, of the 6900 block, Willow avenue, Takoma Park, Md., fainted at police headquarters yesterday afternoon.

Around her when she revived were Lieut. John Fowler and members of his robbery squad. Eagerly they pressed her for the whereabouts of her son and then sped to her home to arrest red-haired, pimply faced Richard Parks, 19, for questioning in connection with nine armed hold-ups in two weeks.

The red-haired bandit and his companion obtained $629 at pistol point in their forays on businessmen and led Assistant Detective Ira Keck to declare Sunday night: "If we don't get them soon they will kill somebody and they might get killed themselves."

Police were without a single clew to the identity of the young bandits until Mrs. Morley appeared at the Detective Bureau and nervously told a clerk:

"I would like to see the inspector."

Heartbreak and fear were written on the mother's face as she was ushered into Thompson's office to inform on her son. When she fainted Thompson shouted for his aides to bring water and the robbery squad.

Assured by Thompson that no harm would befall her, Mrs. Morley left police headquarters with a police escort for an undetermined destination. She did not return to her home.

Later detectives arrested Joseph Silvia Daneri, 21, of 114 Quincy place northeast, who admitted, police said, being the driver of the car in the holdups. He was arested in a delicatessen operated by his father.

Daneri told police that it was he who stole the car of William Shelby, former chief of detectives. He said he didn't know who owned the car until he read it in the papers the next morning.

Three detectives later went to the home of James (Jake) Pheips, at 59 Randolph place northwest, to question him in regard to the holdups. They were met at the door by the youth's grandmother, who called to him that there were some gentlemen to see him. He called back that he would be right down.

The detectives waited a few minutes. Then they went upstairs. An open window showed that Pheips had escaped. In his room, the detectives said they found five rifles, a sawed-off shotgun and four automatic pistols, two of which were in pockets of a suit belonging to the man they sought.

House Receives Fiscal Measure For 1½ Billion

Largest Supply Bill for Postoffice, Treasury Is Introduced.

By the Associated Press.

The biggest Treasury-Postoffice Department appropriation bill in history started on its way through Congress yesterday. It carries $1,500,955,000 to finance the two departments for the next fiscal year.

House leaders hoped to complete action and send the measure to the Senate late this week.

On the other side of the Capitol the Senate Appropriations Committee, in approving the billion-dollar independent offices appropriation bill, struck out a House rider designed to prevent Congressional investigating committees from using regular employes of Government departments.

Elimination of the rider foreshadowed a bitter conflict between the two Houses.

Besides routine expenses, the Treasury-Postoffice bill would provide $750,000 for a trans-Atlantic airmail service to begin about November 1. Negotiations have been under way with foreign governments for an agreement under which an American and a British company each would make two trips weekly, flying a southerly route in the winter and a shorter northern route when weather conditions permit.

Large Return Foreseen.

In reporting the bill, the House Appropriations Committee said the proposed service "seems to promise more return for the expenditure than any foreign air-mail service of this country" although it would have to be subsidized for some time. It would bring this country within 24 to 30 hours flying time of London.

Like the two preceding appropriation measures this session, the bill carries a "rider" prohibiting the use of any of the funds to pay departmental employes lent to Congressional investigating committees.

Although a compromise was reached with the Senate on a similar clause in the relief-deficiency bill last week, controversy over the rider delayed passage of the measure so long it almost was necessary to suspend relief payments.

Although the appropriations committee lopped $15,041,067 from the budget estimates for both departments, the total exceeds last year's figure by $234,900,149. An increase of $235,000,000 in the appropriation for the social security act's old-age pension reserve accounts for the increase.

Item Increases Annually.

Under the law, this item increases annually, but during hearings on the bill, Secretary Morgenthau said the bulk of the money would be invested and used to absorb the public debt.

"If the law stands as it is," he testified, "in the next 17 years or so various laws, such as social security, sinking fund and so forth, will absorb about $30,000,000,000 worth of public debt * * *."

The bill would provide a total of $718,485,790 for the Treasury and $782,469,361 for the Postoffice Department.

In addition to $500,000,000 for the old-age reserve account, the major items in the bill included $24,648,000 for the Coast Guard; $993,810 for the Secret Service; $20,746,980 for the Public Health Service and $7,500,000 for the mint.

Major postal items in the bill were $138,000,000 for letter carriers' salaries; $56,750,000 for railway mail service and $14,250,000 for contract airmail service.

9 C.M.T.C Youths Win Merit Awards

Designated by Corps Area Commanders as the outstanding trainees of Citizens' Military Training Camps last year, nine citizen soldiers will receive the John J. Pershing gold medal for Distinguished Attainment in Military Education. The presentations will be made Thursday by Secretary of War Woodring.

The nine men represent all section of the country, and are awarded the medals and a trip to Washington by the Civilian Military Education Fund in recognition of the C. M. T. C. as a citizenship training agency. The Third Corps Area, which includes Washington, is represented by Matthew Huttner, of Charleroi, Pa.

Other recipients of the medals will be Victor A. Lebednick, Nashua, N. H.; Howard F. Allen, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Alfred H. Page, Memphis, Tenn.; James Lee Cochrun, jr., Akron, Ohio; Alford W. Dubs, Waukegan, Ill.; James F. Redmond, Kansas City, Mo.; Edwin O'Conner, jr., San Antonio, Texas;

Supreme Court Has Declared 77 Congress Acts Invalid—11 by 5-to-4 Decisions.

By Franklyn Waltman

WALTMAN.

In the brief period which has elapsed since President Roosevelt sent his court revamping program to Congress, one thing has become abundantly clear. It is that a great deal of hysterical propaganda is being poured into the country, on both sides of the controversy, and that there seems to be an inclination to "hop and skip over truth and perch upon assertion and call it truth," as Caesar Rodney long ago told Congress.

Analysis of President Roosevelt's contentions regarding congestion in the Federal courts and the relationship between such congestion as exists and aged judges demonstrated that Mr. Roosevelt so exaggerated and over-drew the picture that the country should become wary of generalizations and declarations unsustained by verifiable facts. Even Attorney General Cummings sought to perpetuate the myth—after it had been exploded—that serious congestion exists throughout the Federal judiciary and that "closely allied with this problem is the situation created by the continuance in office of aged or infirm judges."

What the President has proposed is too serious a step to be considered lightly or to permit formation of snap-conclusions. Before the debate really starts it would be wise to "take a look at the record," as Al Smith used to say. The country also might emulate Rudyard Kipling's maxim: "Take nothing for granted if you can check it." It is in that spirit that this writer has—and shall continue—to ferret out the basic facts in this controversy, to the end, as Charles Warren, the historian, has expressed it, that "declamation must bow before history and actual cases."

In the hysterical outbursts of advocates of the President's plan during the last week much has been said about the Supreme Court nullifying Congressional enactments and that frequently this is done in 5-to-4 decisions. So wild are some of these assertions that they leave the impression that the Supreme Court has killed hundreds of Congressional enactments and in many instances by 5-to-4 decisions. Thus it is argued we are ruled by a judicial oligarchy—whose decisions frequently turn around one man—and that progress has subsequently been thwarted.

Aside from the obvious fact that the United States has made a great deal of progress—more than any other nation—during the 148 years since we have had the Supreme Court, the record does not bear out such contentions. Actually the Supreme Court has declared only 77 acts of Congress unconstitutional — slightly more than one every two years—and in at least of ten of these cases it was the application of the act, rather than the staute itself which was held invalid. Moreover many of these acts were comparatively inconsequential and would have had no effect on the life of the country had they stood.

In declaring these 77 Congressional acts unconstitutional, the Supreme Court divided 5-to-4 but 11 times. It has upheld 17 Congressional enactments by 5-to-4 decisions, if the gold clause case is included. Thus in passing on the constitutionality of Congressional acts there have been only 28 5-to-4 decisions and a large majority of these has been on the side of Congress.

The above facts have been taken from "Congress, the Constitution and the Supreme Court," by Charles Warren, the recognized and authoritative historian of the high tribunal, and since the New Deal started, from the court's records, originally written in 1925, this work was revised and brought up to date in the fall of 1935.

Mr. Warren found that the total number of Congressional enactments declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court from 1789 to 1935 was 73. He adds that "it is to be especially noted that, of this total of 73, there were a number of cases in which it was not the act of Congress, in itself, which was held invalid, but in which a valid act was applied by Government officials in an unconstitutional way or to a class of persons or subject matter over which the United States had no authority under the Constitution.

"In at least ten cases (of which six were since 1924), chiefly involving Federal taxes, it was the attempt by Government officials to impose a tax on State authorities or State resources, or on Federal judges' salaries, which was held invalid and unconstitutional, and not the act of Congress under which the attempt to tax was made. If we eliminate these ten cases, the number of cases actually holding the act of Congress itself unconstitutional is reduced to 63 (averaging less than one a year since the Civil War)."

Mr. Warren included in his tabulation five New Deal enactments—the hot oil case, the gold clause case (held unconstitutional by a vote of 8 to 1, but in which the Government was held not obliged to pay damages by a five-to-four decision), the railroad retirement act, the NRA, and the Frazier-Lemke mortgage moratorium case.

Since 1935 the Supreme Court has declared unconstitutional four more New Deal acts—the AAA, the municipal bankruptcy act, the Guffey coal control act and the act granting Federal charters for building and loan associations. These 4 added to the 73 tabulated by Mr. Warren, makes a total of 77.

Mr. Warren found that from the beginning of the court to 1935 there were only 10 cases in which the court divided 5 to 4 in holding a Congressional act unconstitutional—8 prior to October, 1924, and 2 in the next 11 years. One of the latter was the New Deal railroad retirement act. Since the Warren tabulation was made, the court has held one act of Congress unconstitutional by a 5-to-4 decision, the municipal bankrutcy act. Thus the total of such decisions is 11.

From all the current clamor and declamation one would suppose that most of the New Deal acts struck down by the court were determined by 5-to-4 decisions. Actually only 2 of these acts have fallen by 5-to-4 decisions. In the NRA, the Frazier-Lemke and the building and loan association cases the court unanimously decreed their unconstitutionality. The hot oil and the gold clause cases the court divided 8 to 1. On the Guffey coal control and the AAA acts the court divided 6 to 3.

Mr. Warren found that up to the summer of 1935 the court had upheld Congressional acts in 17 5-to-4 decisions, including the gold-clause case. Actually the court, by a vote of 8-to-1, declared that act unconstitutional, but held by a 5-to-4 decision that the Government was not liable for damages.

In the first 135 years of the court's history—up to 1924—Mr. Warren found that of the 55 Congressional acts found unconstitutional, 8 were by 5-to-4 decisions; 4 in which three judges dissented; 12 in which only two judges dissented; 7 in which one judge dissented. In 24 of the decisions the court was unanimous. Since 1924 the court has declared eight Congressional acts unconstitutional, without any dissenting votes—thus unanimously; three with only one dissenting vote; two with two dissenting votes each; six with three dissenting votes and three with four dissenting votes.

Thus to summarize: Of 77 Congressional acts declared unconstitutional, 32 of the decisions were without dissenting votes or unanimous; 10 were with one dissenting vote; 14 were with two dissenting votes; 10 were with three dissenting votes and, as has been said, 11 were with four dissenting votes. Thus two-thirds of the Congressional enactments decreed valid were so held by the court with two or fewer of its members dissenting. Draw your own conclusions from these facts.

'Vest-Pocket Sheep' Raised in Germany

Berlin, Feb. 15 (AP).—Germany, creator of vest pocket battleships, turned her attention today to "vest pocket sheep."

To augment the nation's wool supply, small land owners are being encouraged by the government to raise Angora rabbits.

Senate Inquiry Seen Cutting G.M. Espionage

Anderson Tells Liberties Committee He 'Advised' End of Spying.

By the Associated Press.

The Senate Civil Liberties Committee heard testimony yesterday that its investigation had resulted indirectly in the "wiping out" of labor espionage in General Motors Corporation plants.

Harry W. Anderson, labor relations director for the auto firm, told the committee that he had "advised" all factory managers last month to break off their arrangements with industrial detective agencies, and that it was "a fair assumption" his advice had been followed.

"I had been opposed to that kind of thing for a long while," he testified, "and this investigation gave us an opportunity to wipe it out."

He described the corporation's change in policy a few minutes after Chairman La Follette (Progressive), Wisconsin, had submitted a chart showing General Motors paid $839,764 for detective services between 1934 and July 31, 1936.

Payments included $419,850 to the Pinkerton National Detective Agency, $138,205 to Industrial Standards Corporation of Chicago, and smaller sums to 13 other firms.

Anderson testified he recently had established his own labor information service, hiring three former Federal employes — John Pierce, formerly of the United States Marshal's office in Detroit, and William Larson and a "Mr. Cunningham," both former Justice Department agents.

No "Undercover" Work.

Asserting they would not work "undercover" nor buy information from factory spies, Anderson said these men would "circulate through towns where our plants are located" to gather data on public opinion and employe relations.

"If this kind of information is necessary, we prefer to get it through our own employes rather than through outside agencies," he explained.

Merle Hale, Anderson's predecessor as labor relations director, told the committee he had first arranged for detective service in March, 1934, when an organizing drive was launched by the American Federation of Labor.

Roosevelt Tribute to Farley

This dinner to Jim Farley is on the part of all of us a very personal affair. It is not one of the those official banquets with a formal list of formal speakers, talking on formal subjects into small hours of the morning. It is not a political gathering, or a party gathering, or a victory gathering, or even a gathering to hatch some mysterious plot or pull off a coup d'etat.

The only label appropriate for this occasion is "Jim Farley and his friends." Many of us have known him through the years. Some of you have been associated with him for only a short time—but all of us have a common regard, a common affection for Jim Farley, which transcends formality because it is based on the man himself.

History has recorded, and will continue to record, a great many interesting facts about Jim. In due time history will talk out loud about his younger days of local public service to his town and his county and his State. It will talk about his organization of campaigns; it will speak of his fine service as the administrator of an important department of the Federal Government. It may even add his name to the distinguished list of major prophets. Even as the name of William Jennings Bryan sometimes suggests the arithmetic of 16-to-1, so perhaps the name of Jim Farley will suggest the more modern arithmetic of 46-to-2.

But when history is written, after all of us have passed from the scene, there will be something more important than the chronicle of success in accomplishment. Loyalty will be written there—that loyalty to friends which results in loyalty from friends.

Honor and decency will be written there—the honor and decency which have done much to raise the standards of public service in our Nation.

Good temper will be written there—the kind of good temper which is based on a sense of perspective, a sense of humor and a sense of forgiveness. In all my years of association with Jim Farley I have never once heard him utter one mean syllable about any human being. I have never heard him suggest reprisal—except once—when after a particularly and vicious and mean attack he said to me—"that fellow's mother ought to spank him."

On the Saturday before election, in speaking to the workers at headquarters, I praised Jim Farley for the way he had taken things on the chin and had come up smiling every time. That means courage, and there is not a man in the United States who has more deep-seated, thoroughgoing courage than he.

Back of it all ultimate history analyses the cause of human actions and human qualities. It will, I think, agree with my analysis when I say Jim Farley is not just a Democrat with a big "D"—he is a Democrat in the sense that he has faith in his felowman. He likes to believe that men and women are fundamentally decent, fundamentally honest, and that if they are given a chance through democratic processes, their decisions will be fundamentally sound. Because of this belief he has made, and I hope through all the years to come will continue to make, a definite contribution to the success of the democratic processes of American institutions.

Jim would not like it if I were to say, "We love him for the enemies he has made," but I can tell him that we love him for the friends he has made—men and women and children, regardless of party, in every community of every one of our 48 States, including Maine and Vermont.

I ask you to join with me in wishing health and happiness through all the years to come to my friend and your friend, a faithful servant of the people of our republic, Jim Farley.

2 Children Escape Death Under Train

Two colored children miraculously escaped death yesterday morning when they were struck by a Pennsylvania electric freight train while they were en route to school in the 1300 block of Kenilworth avenue northeast.

The children were taken to Casualty Hospital where they were identified as Eloise Owens, 12, 4420 Douglas street northeast, and Joseph Thomas, 7, 4400 Douglas street. Eloise was released after treatment, but Thomas, who suffered a possible fractured skull, was admitted for observation.

Police were told the children were walking toward the Deanwood school and had waited for a northbound train to pass and had stepped into the path of the freight which was going south.

They stepped off the tracks in time to avoid being struck by the engine but were sideswiped by a boxcar and thrown nearly 30 feet.

New Yorker Named Director of REA

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt nominated John M. Carmody, of New York, yesterday to be administrator of the Rural Electrification Administration.

Carmody, who succeeds Morris L. Cooke, of Pennsylvania, has been acting head of the agency.

Other nominations included that of Col. Francis B. Wilby, Engineer Corps, to be a member of the Mississippi River Commission.

Brig. Gen. John Elmer Stoddard, of the Georgia National Guard, was nominated brigadier general, Adjutant General's Department, National Guard of the United States.

Flier Admits He Aided Karpis Gang in Theft

Cleveland, Feb. 15 (AP).—John Zetzer, 37-year-old garage mechanic and aviator, of Port Clinton, Ohio, pleaded guilty in Federal court today to being an accomplice after the fact in the $46,000 mail train robbery at Garrettsville, Ohio, November 7, 1935.

Worker Trapped Under Pier Swims To Surface, Saved

Trapped under a concrete pier with only 6 inches of air space above the water of the Potomac River, oJhn W. Mills, 53, of 1008 Twenty-fourth street northwest, was saved from drowning by fellow workers yesterday.

Mills fell into the black waters after he tripped over a rope on the Smoot Sand and Gravel Co. pier at the foot of Thirty-first street northwest. His fall carried him under the pier and the blackness caused him to lose all sense of direction.

Edward S. Herrman was working atop a gravel screen 30 feet above the pier when Mills, an engineer, toppled overboard. He hurried to the waters' edge and heard Mills scream.

"Get me out. Get me out."

Mills was rescued when Herrman and two other workers pried open a trap door in the pier and afished a light into the darkness. Unable to get through the small trapdoor Mills, who weighs 250 pounds, dove deep into the frezing water and came to the surface beyond the pier. He was pulled to safety by the men.

Taken to Emergency Hospital he was treated for shock and exposure. His condition was said to be satisfactory.

Naval Officer Admits Guilt Of Espionage

nett declared emphatically that no promise of a light sentence was offered in exchange for a guilty plea. Beach said the Government had ample evidence to secure a conviction and accepted the nolo contendere plea only to avoid expense of a lengthy trial.

Beach was prepared to show that as a result of Farnsworth's activities, invaluable naval secrets had found their way to Japan forcing far-reaching revision of the American Navy's battle fleet tactics.

Plans and performance records of the airplane carriers Saratoga and Ranger had been obtained by Farnsworth, Beach declared, together with minute data on the effectiveness of guns on every warship in the United States Navy.

Since Farnsworth's arrest new courses have been prepared for the Naval War College at Newport, R. I., and confidential code books and signals have been entirely revised.

Beach said he was prepared to show a jury that Farnsworth had been paid $20,000 to betray his country.

Refused Advice.

When he was brought to the courthouse from the District Jail, Farnsworth emphatically refused to heed the advice of his attorneys to plead guilty. He declared he was looking forward to cross-examining the naval officers who had been called to testify against him.

The trial was scheduled to start at 1:30 o'clock, but when Justice Proctor entered the courtroom Farnsworth was still conferring with his attorneys. Justice Proctor adjourned court until 2:30 o'clock. Just before the court was to reconvene, it was learned that Farnsworth had capitulated and would enter the nolo contendere plea.

In contrast to the abject, trembling figure on the verge of a nervous breakdown which he presented following his arrest last July by Department of Justice and Naval Intelligence agents, Farnsworth appeared composed and in good health when he entered the courtroom. His iron-gray hair was clipped in military style and his blue suit was neatly pressed. He had shaved the natty waxed mustache he wore last July.

Was Brilliant Engineer.

Until his discharge in 1927 for alleged scandalous conduct, Farnsworth was regarded as one of the most brilliant naval engineers in the service. It was this brilliance, Beach contended, that enabled Farnsworth to betray intricate naval secrets. He needed only a glance at confidential plans to be able later to trace them from memory, he said.

Indicted on conspiracy charges with Farnsworth were Commander Yosiyuki Itimiya and Lieut. Comdr. Okira Yamaki, former Japanese naval attaches here who returned to Tokyo prior to Farnsworth's arrest.

Bacon said Farnsworth received $300 a month and expenses for his espionage activities and communicated with Yamaki and Itimiya in code. The consporators always used the code name "Morgan" in telephone conversations, Beach said, and when they agreed to meet each other at the "club" they would meet at Chevy Chase Circle.

Second Indictment Pending.

A second indictment specifically charging Farnsworth with turning over to the Japanese a confidential naval publication known as "Service of Information and Security" is pending against Farnsworth. Garnett said he would not determine whether to press for action on that charge until after Farnsworth has been sentenced on the first count.

Farnsworth's espionage activities, Beach said, started early in 1933 and continued until the spring of last year when the Japanese ceased paying him. Desperate for money, Farnsworth attempted to sell a series of articles on espionage to a newspaper syndicate. This led to his arrest.

Leahy explained that under the nolo contendere plea a convicted person is not deprived of his civil rights, nor can he later be held accountable in a civil action growing out of evidence introduced in the criminal trial.

Woman Pays U. S. For Food Stolen During World War

The Treasury Departments "conscince funf" yesterday was augmented by $10 when the War Department turned over to it an anonymous contribution from a Canton, Ohio, woman repaying the Government for food stolen from an Army kitchen, she had received during the World War.

Signing herself "One who tries to live square," she said she had "met a soldier from camp and commenced to keep steady company with him. He was on kitchen duty and often brought me something from camp to eat. At the time I never thought that he should not of taken what belong to the United States and give it to me, but I have often thought of it since, so I am enclosing $10 in this letter to pay for these things which I never thought was wrong at the time."

Scientist Investigates Glacier Threatening Alaska Highway

'Reborn' Ice Field Has Moved Three and a Half Miles Since October; Roadhouse and River in Its Path.

(Returning to Fairbanks by airplane after three days' study of the strange rebirth of the ages-old Black Rapids glacier, Otto William Geist, specially employed by the University of Alaska, yesterday gave the Associated Press the following account of the phenomenon which threatens to cross the Big Delta River and bury a roadhouse and the Richardson highway, Fairbanks' vehicular connection with the outside world. Geist formerly had charge of territorial University Anthropological explorations on St. Lawrence Island.—Editor's note.)

By Otto William Geist,
Of the University of Alaska.

Fairbanks, Alaska, Feb. 15 (AP).—Groaning, booming and thundering on a rough 30-mile mountain moraine bed, Black Rapids glacier presents one of the most spectacular sights of modern times by its sudden "rebirth."

The glacier is spreading into the valley alongside the Big Delta River (about 125 miles south of Fairbanks). The river is 2 miles wide at that point. But, as the glacier enters the valley 2 miles above the Black Rapids Roadhouse and on the opposite side of the river, it does not seem likely it will reach the roadhouse, but will break up and scatter.

The roadhouse, where we put up nights, shook perceptibly, and we could hear the distant moaning glacier from there, especially on stilly nights. The glacier groaned for all the world like a gigantic dredge.

Moves 3½ Miles.

The movement of the glacier is not perceptible to the naked eye, but it is progressing irresistibly, and is estimated to have moved 3½ miles since October.

Heavy rains, shortly before, possibly released soft material along the contact points, which, with water, lubricated its giant groove.

Another phenomenon seems to have occurred by reason of the present glacier having moved over the top of an older glacier, maybe antedating the present one a million years.

The Black Rapids glacier is bifurcated, or branched. One fork now is moving into the other, grinding and crunching at a point 5 miles back from the face of the combined body. The intersection is the scene of a giant upheaval.

Moves Over Valley.

One of the strangest phases of this glazier is that it is moving out over a valley, where trees, flowers and moss are growing.

Most of the glaciers I have witnessed in the past have been along the seacoast, where cracking sections toppled into the sea.

Family Ignores Danger.

Fairbanks, Alaska, Feb. 15 (AP).—Although packed for instant flight, a family in the path of a rampant glazier spoke lightly of their danger tonight as the rumbling ice mass inches toward their roadside inn.

"We are not afraid," said Mrs. H. E. Revell. She and her husband and son operate the roadhouse a mile from the glazier's face. Strong wind and subzero weather prevailed today as the ancient Black Rapids glacier, loosened by rains, gouged its way down the Big Delta River Valley 125 miles south of here. The ice threatened to dam the river, engulf the roadhouse and block this city's highway connection with the outside world.

'Letter to Editor' Holds Writer in Court Attempt

Boydton, Va., Feb. 15 (AP).—Dr. H. C. Coleman, South Hill optometrist, was in contempt of the Mecklenburg Circuit Court when a letter written by him criticizing court procedure was published in the Richmond Times-Dispatch, Judge Julien Gunn, of Richmond, ruled today.

The court meted out no punishment, however, because Dr. Coleman filed a disclaimer in which he said he had no intention of reflecting on an individual court, but rather intended his letter to the paper as criticism of the entire judicial system in the State.

"3. Extension of the program of reciprocal trade agreements as the most practical means of reducing artificial barriers to commerce and reopening the channels of international trade.

"4. The preservation of the generally favorable ratio of prices and wage rates, in the interest of progressively expanding the real purchasing power of workers, * * * placing emphasis upon price reductions as a means of carrying benefits of technological progress to all groups.

"5. The maintenance, in general, of prevailing hours of labor * * *.

"6. The elimination of industrial practices and policies, private and public, which tend to restrict output or to prevent the increase of productive efficiency.

"7. Shifting the emphasis in agricultural policy from restricted output and rising prices to the abundant furnishing of the supplies of raw materials and foodstuffs."

Moulton said 20 per cent of the present national income would be absorbed by taxation if the Federal budget were to be balanced at a level of expenditures approximating $6,000,000,000, with State and local expenditures remaining at their present level.

He also advised the actual deterioration of plant and equipment during the depression be made good; an increase in productive capital in line with the growth of population, and expansion of output of consumption goods in accordance with the increased population.

N. Y. Hotel Union Offers To Delay Strike 2 Days

New York, Feb. 15 (AP).—A 48-hour truce in the hope of settlement of hotel employes' demands was offered six major New York hotels today by union chiefs.

Telegrams to managers of the Waldorf-Astoria, Biltmore, Commodore, New Yorker, Pennsylvania and Roosevelt warned, however, that "unless you display some willingness to arbitrate these grievances, the union shall have no other alternative but to proceed with the strike."

Lynch Chosen Infantry Head By Roosevelt

Colonel Advanced to Rank of Major General; Col. Martin Promoted.

Col. George A. Lynch yesterday was nominated by President Roosevelt to be the Army's chief of infantry for the next four years with the rank of major general. The nomination, made on the recommendation of Secretary Harry H. Woodring, was sent to the Senate for confirmation.

At the same time the President nominated Col. Frederick L. Martin to be brigadier general (temporary) of the Air Corps. Col. Lynch, now stationed at Tientsin, China, will succeed Maj. Gen. Edward Croft, whose term expires May 23, while Col. Martin will succeed Brig. Gen. Henry C. Pratt, appointed a brigadier general of the line.

Col. Lynch, who served as Brig. Gen. Hugh Johnson's assistant in the NRA administration, has spent the last two years commanding the United States Army troops and the Fifteenth Infantry at Tientsin, China, co-operating with the heads of military units from other countries in maintaining communication between Peiping and the sea.

Appointed to West Point in 1899 from Iowa, Col. Lynch was detailed to service in Washington from 1912 to 1914 as inspector-instructor of the local National Guard. During the war he served as chief of staff of the Eighteenth Division, including duty with that unit in France until August, 1918, when he was stationed at General Headquarters, A. E. F.

War College Graduate.

Awarded the Distinguished Service Medal for revision of infantry drill regulations, Col. Lynch was graduated from the Army War College in 1930. His previous assignments have included duty in the Philippines, at Governors Island, N. Y., as assistant chief of staff, G-2, Second Corps Area, at Fort Snelling, Minn., and with the operations and training division, General Staff, in Washington.

Col. Martin, nominated for brigadier general in the Air Corps, was born in Washington Grove, Md., and is one of the Army's best known aviators. Commandant of the around the world flight of the Army in 1924, Col. Martin crashed on a mountain side in Alaska. Although only slightly injured, he and his mechanic walked through Alaska wilds ten days before reaching the nearest settlement.

Holds Congressional Medal.

A graduate of Purdue University in 1908, he was commissioned a second lieutenant in the Coast Artillery Corps in the fall of the same year. He was promoted through the various grades, ranking as colonel (temporary) in 1935.

Following duty in Hawaii, he was stationed in Washington in 1918 as Chief, Material Supply Section in the office of the Chief Singal Officer and Director, Military Aeronautics. After service in France in the Supply Section, Paris, he returned to duty at Kelly Field, Texas, and later at Chanute Field, Illinois. In 1921, he was appointed commanding officer of the latter field. His recent assignments have included Chief, Inspection Division, Office Chief of Air Corps, here, Commandant, Air Corps Advanced Flying School, Kelly Field and Commandant, Air Corps Primary Flying School, Randolph Field, Texas.

He is a graduate of the Army War College and the Command and General Staff School. For his part in the Army 'round-the-world flight, he was awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor.

F. B. I. Seeking Missing Cashier As Embezzler

Seipp Charged With Taking Over $600 From Upper Marlboro Bank.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Feb. 15.—The Federal Bureau of Investigation today took up the hunt for Walter Edgar Seipp, missing cashier of the County Trust Co. Bank at Upper Marlboro, following the issuance of a warrant for his arrest.

S. C. Simon, special agent for the department, swore out the warrant before United States Commissioner James K. Cullen. It charged that Seipp "embezzled, abstracted and wilfully misapplied" funds of the bank.

United States Attorney Bernard J. Flynn said Seipp has been definitely accused of taking between $600 and $700. He added that "it is probable, however, that the actual amount will be up in the thousands."

Seipp disappeared on February 8, the day State bank examiners arrived to make a routine check of the institution's accounts. The examiners have been checking over all the funds and trust accounts in the bank to learn how much is missing.

Federal Prosecutor Flynn said Seipp obtained funds by writing out personal checks when he had no money in his account. Flynn placed the time of these actions between last Decebber 3 and February 12.

The bank, a branch of the County Trust Co. of Maryland, is a member of the Federal Reserve system and carries Federal deposit insurance. Lansdale G. Sasscer, president of the State Senate, is head of the branch bank and State Senator J. Allan Coad of Leonardtown is president of the parent institution.

Seipp has been cashier of the Upper Marlboro branch for about 15 years and had been associated with the bank since he started to work. He is 42 years old and has a wife and three children.

King and Family Move Into Palace Unceremoniously

London, Feb. 15 (AP).—King George VI, Queen Elizabeth and their two little princesses today moved bag and baggage into their new home—Buckingham Palace.

The vaulted corridors of the palace, which was the world's most famous bachelor hall during the brief reign of Edward VIII, echoed to the voices of children for the first time in many years.

The royal moving day was accomplished with the least possible ceremony. Only a few spectators were on hand to see England's rulers leave their old home at 145 Piccadilly.

President Plans Trip.

By the Associated Press.

Senator Sheppard (Democrat), of Texas, said after a call at the White House yesterday that President Roosevelt was seriously considering a fishing trip off the Texas coast early in April. He said also there was a possibility the President might attend the Pan-American-Texas Centennial Exposition at Dallas.

"Thomas Re-grew My Hair"

Says Mr. Donald McClelland

• • These photographs show three views of Mr. McClelland before he started Thomas treatment, and three views taken 5½ months later. Note that all of the bald spots have been completely filled in with new, vigorous, growing hair. Mr. McClelland's baldness was of the type known as "alopecia areata".

All of the 14 local causes of baldness (responsible for almost 90% of all baldness) respond to the Thomas method of treatment. Dandruff disappears; abnormal hair-fall stops; and hair growth is promoted on the thin and bald spots. Guess work is banished when you place your scalp problem in the hands of a Thomas expert. He first determines the exact cause of your hair loss, and then adapts the reliable, proved Thomas treatment to overcome that cause. Your scalp is soon restored to a normal healthy condition, conducive to the natural growth of hair.

More than 1600 other persons are benefiting each day from Thomas treatment. You, too, can have a good head of hair. No charge is ever made for consultation or a complete scalp examination (always in private). Call today and learn the truth about your hair and scalp.

Naval Officer's Wife Reports CriminalAttack

Doctor Refuses to Testify in Honolulu Case; Clew Found in Garage.

By the Associated Press.

Honolulu, Feb. 15.—A reported criminal attack upon a Naval lieutenant's wife sent police hunting tonight for an unidentified white man who dropped an initialed handkerchief in the garage where she said she was assaulted.

A doctor who examined slight 24-year-old Mrs. Bennett S. Copping said she had not been attacked.

Mrs. Copping told Police Captain Don Hays she was seized early today in her residential apartment building when she stepped outside her room, was dragged 75 feet across an open yard and into the garage.

[Mrs. Copping, mother of a 6-year-old girl, said the attack occurred following a drinking party in the Copping apartment, the United Press reported. Police said investigation of the apartment showed the floor strewn with whisky bottles and broken glasses. The Coppings declined to name those who attended the party. They formerly resided at Vallejo, Calif.—Editor's note.]

The woman, whose husband is attached to the submarine S-28, was questioned all day by officers and underwent two examinations.

After the first, Dr. Henry M. Akina, assistant city-county physician, said he found no evidence Mrs. Copping had been harmed and that he would not testify in support of an attack charge.

Police searching the garage found a man's handkerchief bearing the initial "H." The handkerchief was believed to have Navy laundry marks. Police said they had ordered laboratory tests.

Lieut. Copping refused to comment when asked for a statement as he left the police station after questioning.

"Better let Hays do the talking," he said.

No Dirt on Coat.

Hays said Mrs. Copping's throat, lower arms and feet were bruised, but there was no dirt on the house coat she wore. The yard was slightly disturbed, he said.

Hays said Mrs. Copping returned to her room about 5:15 a. m. and told Copping she had been attacked. He at first did not believe her, but later called police.

She said a gag prevented her screaming.

Hays, who said police had been investigating a series of parties in the apartment building, declared Mrs. Copping described her assailant as about 5 feet, 11 inches tall and dark haired.

Recalls Massie Case.

The case recalls the celebrated murder trial in Honolulu growing out of an alleged attack on Mrs. Thalia Fortesque Massie, wife of Lieut. Thomas Massie, U. S. N., and now a resident of Washington.

Joseph Kahahawei, the native accused of attacking Mrs. Massie, was lynched under mysterious circumstances.

Four persons were tried for his murder—Mrs. Granville Fortesque, mother of Mrs. Massie; Lieut. Massie, and two Navy enlisted men, Albert O. Jones and E. J. Lord.

After a sensational trial lasting a month, the four were found guilty and sentenced to 10 years in prison. However, Gov. Lawrence M. Judd commuted the sentence to one hour in each case. Later all four were pardoned.

Lieut. (junior grade) Bennet S. Copping was born August 23, 1904, in Antlers, Okla., and was appointed to the Naval Academy in 1921 from his home State. A graduate in 1925, he was advanced to his present rank in 1928, and was stationed on the submarine S-34 during 1934 and 1935.

A graduate of the Naval War College correspondence course in strategy and tactics, he is officially qualified for command of submarines and is on the Navy's promotion list. He is also a graduate of the Navy's course in submarine inspection and optics.

Prince of Denmark Granted Divorce

Copenhagen, Denmark, Feb. 15 (AP).—Prince Erik of Denmark and his wealthy Canadian-born wife were legally separated today by King Christian's order.

Divorce proceedings begun more than two years ago culminated in an annulment by the monarch, the first cousin of the prince.

Erik and his wife—a granddaughter of the Ottawa Valley lumber king, J. R. Booth—lived for a time near Pasadena, Calif., after their brilliant marriage in Ottawa February 11, 1924.

At the time of his marriage, Prince Erik, now 46, renounced for himself and descendants all rights of succession to the Danish throne. His wife, 39, will renounce her titles of Princess of Denmark and Countess of Rosenborg. The annulment announcement made no mention of the future of their two children.

Huge Religious Pageant Called New Passion Play

London, Feb. 15 (AP).—Production of a religious pageant, "The King of Glory," with more than 1,000 performers, in Albert Hall was hailed tonight by church officials as the possible beginning of an English Passion Play similar to Oberammergau's institution.

The story of Christ's life, told with a huge cast of characters and accompanying music, was the theme of the pageant which church circles saw as a first result of the Archbishop of Canterbury's recent plea for a return to religion. An audience numbering thousands saw the production, which included a choir of over 800 voices.

9 Oil Executives Deny Trust Law Conspiracy

New York, Feb. 15 (AP).—Nine of 14 prominent oil company executives charged in Federal indictments in Madison, Wis., with conspiracy and violation of the Sherman anti-trust law, pleaded not guilty and waived extradition before a United States Commissioner here today.

Bail of $5,000 each was posted for their appearance March 3 in Madison. The other men indicted from this district are expected to take similar action soon.

Single Steel Industry Union Is Urged in Brookings Report

By the United Press.

Pittsburgh, Feb. 15.—Industrial, Nation-wide organization of steel workers for means of collective bargaining was recommended tonight in a three-year study of the steel industry made by the University of Pittsburgh and financed by Brookings Institution and the Faulk Foundation.

Forecasting "bitter struggles for labor organizations in the iron and steel industry," the report was made public in a summary contained in a speech of Dr. Ralph J. Watkins, director of the bureau of business research of the University of Pittsburgh, before a Faulk Foundation dinner, recommending:

1. Steel workers should be organized.
2. The logic of the industry's operation is such that vertical rather than craft organization is called for.
3. Collective bargaining should be on a national basis and not on a plant basis.
4. Organization of steel workers should be in accord with the principles of industrial democracy.

The steel company union plans for collective bargaining developed as a resut of the NRA, the report said, and the great majority of the plans "were favored and fostered by the companies in order to forestall unionization." The plan was liberalized later, however, to discover workers' grievances and improve labor relations, but "still fell short," he said.

Vertical rather than craft organization was favored because "integrated operations extending from blast furnace to the finished rolled steel product constitute the economic unit.

Collective bargaining on a national basis instead of a plant basis was recommended.

Tension Easing At Riot Scene In G. M. Strike

By the Associated Press.

Anderson, Ind., Feb. 15.—Hiding their feud, which flared into violence Saturday and brought military rule to Anderson, union and nonunion automotive craftsmen marched peacefully today to their jobs at the Guide Lamp and Delco-Remy divisions of General Motors.

With tension easing, Col. Albert H. Whitcomb granted permission to the United Automobile Workers of America to hold two meetings, their first under the military rule, and to distribute their publications. Col. Whitcomb commands the troops.

National Guardsmen, bayonets fixed, patrolled the streets around the two plants as about 2,400 employes resumed work in the Guide Lamp factory, scene of a recent "sit-down" strike, and about 7,000 workers returned to jobs in the Delco-Remy plant.

The guard was increased tonight as shifts in the factories changed.

Col. Whitcomb said his troops reported no disturbances.

Union leaders, after obtaining Col. Whitcomb's approval, planned a meeting of their strategy board and a session of their woman's auxiliary.

Parley Set for Today.

Detroit, Feb. 15 (AP).—General Motors Corporation, many of its production lines already humming in a drive to regain output lost during prolonged strikes, will seek tomorrow a final settlement of issues with the United Automobile Workers of America.

Only two of eight union demands—collective bargaining and union recognition—were settled in the agreement that ended the strikes Thursday. Six others remain for negotiations starting tomorrow morning.

Developments on the automotive labor front today brought wage increases for hourly workers of two body manufacturing concerns not connected with General Motors. The Briggs Manufacturing Co. put into effect today an indefinite increase, based on merit, for some 27,000 hourly-rate employes. The Murray Corporation of America announced it would increase hourly wage minimums tomorrow to 75 cents for men and 65 cents for women, and grant a 5 per cent increase to all workers now earning these minimums or more. The action affects about 10,000 employes.

General Motors counted some 75,000 employes back at work in its automotive plants and pushed toward its goal of restoring full-capacity operations next week.

General Motors announced increases for its wage earners last week, as did Chrysler Corporation and the Packard Motor Car Co.

The union demands to be considered by tomorrow's conferees as agreed upon in the strike settlement were listed by Homer Martin, U. A. W. A. president, on January 4 as:

"Abolition of all piece work systems of pay, and the adoption of a straight hourly rate in its place.

"Thirty-hour week and six-hour work day and time and one-half for all time worked over the basic work day and work week.

"Establishment of a minimum rate of pay commensurate with an American standard of living.

"Reinstatement of all employes who have been unjustly discharged.

"Seniority, based on length of service.

"Speed of production shall be mutually agreed upon by the management and the union committee in all General Motors plants."

Hoffman Warns C. I. O. Against Shop Seizures

By the Associated Press.

Trenton, N. J., Feb. 15.—Gov. Harold G. Hoffman warned organizers for John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization today he would use "the entire resources of the State" to prevent seizure of company property through "sit-down" strikes.

His statement, issued a few hours after formation of the North Jersey Council for Industrial Organization, brought from Julius Emspak, 32-year-old C. I. O. leader, a challenge that the committee would "move in on" New Jersey and "use every weapon at our disposal."

Emspak, charging New Jersey was "a huge open-shop territory drawing anti-labor shops and factories from adjacent States," said the C. I. O. had enlisted "about eight or nine" New Jersey unions, and expected "three or four more before the end of the week."

Gov. Hoffman, promising co-operation with labor "to obtain greater benefits for itself and its members," said seizure of company property by striking employes would be "absolutely lawless and its occurrence and continuation in disregard and contempt of law and order would be impossible to tolerate."

Plan Is Attacked In Mass. Assembly

Boston, Feb. 15 (AP).—After a three-hour committee hearing before the largest gathering of the current session, the rules committee of the Massachusetts Legislature voted 11 to 4, on party lines, today to sponsor a resolution attacking President Roosevelt's proposal to increase membership in the Supreme Court.

The resolution, slightly modified from the form in which Horace T. Cahill, Republican speaker of the House, offered it, will come before the House for debate late tomorrow. Republicans command a majority on the rules committee and in House and Senate.

Roy Howard Predicts Defeat of Court Plan

Ogden, Utah, Feb. 15 (AP).—Roy W. Howard, publisher of Scripps-Howard newspapers, said during a pause between trains last night:

"President Roosevelt's plan to 'pack' the Supreme Court should and probably will be defeated."

Green Assails Union's Action As 'Hitlerism'

Michigan, who negotiated the settlement.

The mine union resolutions called attention to the fact that prior to the activity of the United Automobile Workers "very little organization, no collective bargaining and no recognition of any trade union was in effect in the automobile industry, especially under General Motors," and then declared that the collective bargaining agreement reached with General Motors "is practically the same as most every other contract in existence in the country." It bitterly charged that Green and Frey, while the struggle was under way, "did everything in their power to assist General Motors in their effort to divide, destroy and render impotent the United Automobile Workers and those associated with them."

Termed "Treason."

It termed the tactics and statements" of Green and Frey "treason and a betrayal of labor," and expressed resentment at Green's reference to the settlement as a "surrender," in view of the fact that "the agreement provides for collective bargaining and consideration of the additional demands of the auto workers for wages and working conditions" and has been approved by the auto workers' union. It charged that Lewis' statements showed he "has lost all of the principles and ideals of labor" and * * * "is certainly an enemy of the real progressive representative trade unionism in this country.

Commenting on the resolution, Green declared:

"In Germany, I think, Hitler sends them to a concentration camp when they oppose his will. Here they expel you from the union."

Pointing out that he had been a member of the union ever since it was formed in 1890, and had been a member of the Progressive Miners Union before that, he said:

"I could consider expulsion by those who control and dominate the union an act of persecution and reprisal."

Will Fight Ouster.

Asked what he intended to do about it, he replied:

"I would vigorously protest giving up my membership because I have committed no act that would justify it."

He justified issuance of the statement criticizing the auto strike settlement "because the membership of the federation expected me to express my opinion as to its meaning." He held the action was customary, though he did not recall specific previous instances in which he had criticized settlements. He praised the settlement reached Sunday by which the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, another Lewis union, had received substantial pay increases, and he expressed the hope that the mine union, directed by Lewis, "will obtain a fair and just settlement" in its coming negotiations for a new contract. He repeated, however, his contention that Lewis had "backed down" in his exclusive bargaining demand in the auto strike.

Frey's statement upheld this contention, asserting that "the effort of a 'militant minority' to force their will upon an unwilling majority has resulted in complete failure."

Edward F. McGrady, Assistant Secretary of Labor, conducted the conference on the Walsh-Healey act, which requires that contractors doing business with the Government observe certain wage and hour standards. Steel concerns have said they are unable to alter their production schedule to observe the 40-hour week. As a result, construction work on six destroyers and three submarines for the Navy has been held up for lack of steel.

Council Backs Green.

McGrady, after representatives of both labor factions had refused to waive the 40-hour provision, planned to again contact the American Iron and Steel Institute in efforts to end the apparent impasse.

The executive council of the federation, in its meeting here yesterday, approved a recent statement by Green in opposition to the recommendation by Secretary of Labor Perkins that her department be granted the power to subpena in labor disputes.

The council also commended the La Follette committee's investigation into charges of civil liberties violations, and called on all State labor federations to press for States legislation to regulate employment of private detectives in labor-industrial activities. A model bill is being prepared to be sent to State federations.

Police Arms Training Sought in House Bill

A bill to make provision for small arms training for Washington police was introduced yesterday in the House by Representative Kenney (Democrat), of Maryland. It carries a $5,000 authorization.

Besides seeking to establish a range for pistol practice, the bill specifies that $500 of the appropriation shall be used to hold an annual match.

Lincoln Park Body Asks Pay Rise for D. C. Commission

The Lincoln Park Citizens Association last night adopted a resolution favoring an increase in salary for the District Commissioners. No amount was named. The Commissioners now receive $9,000 a year.

This resolution, the first of its kind to be adopted by a citizens' association, was introduced by Joseph L. Gammell, whose resolution in opposition to the legalization of horse racing was also adopted.

A gold-headed cane was presented to John W. Barse, charter member of the association, who will soon celebrate his eighty-fourth birthday. Barse, who at the first meeting of last fall brought in 23 new members, will be nominated by the association for the citizen federation's first citizen award.

Addresses praising Barse's work in the interest of the city and the community were made by Gammell, Alfred D. Calvert, John T. Kern, W. P. Loving and other members of the association.

3 Trusties Escape Occoquan Driving Workhouse Truck

William Frederick Tear, 31, who police say is a relative of Teddy Tear, Warring gang member recently convicted in the O'Brien liquor-racket shooting, escaped yesterday from the Occoquan workhouse with two other prisoners.

Tear's companions in the jail break were William Mills, 37, and Taylor Blackwell. All three were trusties and rode away from the workhouse reservation in a truck which Tear drove in his duties at the institution where he was serving a 180-day sentence for a white slavery violation.

Mills worked on the truck with Tear. The pair were said to have driven to where Blackwell was working on a road and picked him up. The truck had not been located late last night. Teddy Tear is a brother of Richard Tear, whose fiancee, Corinna Loring, was murdered more than a year ago near her Mount Rainierf, Md., home.

The fugitives, nearly all serving long terms and three of them convicted murderers, armed themselves with a number of pistols from the prison gunroom and a guard's shotgun while covering the officers with a pistol believed to have been smuggled to one of their number.

They then forced Hinton and Roberts to accompany them in a truck, which was abandoned 12 miles south of Halifax on Highway 561, leading toward Louisburg. There, Chairman Capus Waynick, of the State penal department said, they seized two automobiles and forced Willard to go with them. About 25 miles farther west, Willard's automobile was wrecked and all piled into the other.

The convicts were listed as Ralph Page, serving life as a murder accessory; Clark York, 45 years for bank robbery and 30 years for murder; Arthur Pettit, 45 years for bank robbery; Bill Payne, 40 years for robbery; Robert S. Smith, 15 years for murder; J. W. Turner, 10 years for robbery, and C. F. Yeager, 10 years for breaking and entering.

Public Opinion Way to Peace, First Lady Says

Declaring that informed public opinion can point the way to permanent peace, not only throughout the world but within the Nation, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt yesterday urged 600 women attending the annual Peace Day luncheon of the Women's Council of the Washington Federation of Churches to discard old prejudices, forego hasty judgments, and study all sides of debatable questions "before we make up our minds which side we shall support."

Thoughtful action, patience and consideration of all points of view concerned will lay the foundation for a type of informed public opinion that will circumscribe war, she asserted. "We should set ourselves the task of learning first about situations close at hand that make for strife," she continued. "We must free ourselves from fears and sacrifice our time and comfort toward making up our minds not only what we think, but why we think it. Then—and only then—shall we be able to make the proper use of public opinion, the most powerful instrument in a democracy."

Paved With Understanding.

The path to peace is paved with understanding, she implied. "An understanding," she said, "based on objective thinking and the ability to look at the whole question of peace from a practical point of view that takes into consideration the wants and needs of other persons, of other nations."

Suggesting that women who want world peace must realize that what they accomplish will have its basis in their thinking, Mrs. Roosevelt averred: "I am not afraid of the thought of this country, but I am afraid the women will not think, and I am terribly afraid of what they may do without thinking." Warning her listeners to "beware of the apathy that comes with comparative security," she pointed out that "only when people are not facing a crisis do they have the proper opportunity to extend the friendly hand to others and to lay the foundation of study and objective thinking that will make for understanding and avert war."

Miss Schain Speaks.

Miss Josephine Schain, of New York, chairman of the national committee of the Conference on the Cause and Cure of War, was the other guest-speaker for the occasion. She reviewed the happenings at the recent annual peace conference of her organization in Chicago, mentioned some of her observations gleaned at the South American Peace Conference, and discussed in detail "Practical Questions Involved in the Problem of Peace." World peace, she stressed, depends to a large etxent on each nation making a choice of policy. "Whether this is to be a policy of isolation—such as we have followed the last few years—or a policy of world cooperation—such as we should follow—is a matter for the people of a country to decide," she went on. "We are now coming to realize that countries are interdependent and that permanent world peace depends first of all on the establishment of some permanent international organization. The solution to war can be found only on a world basis."

Mrs. W. L. Darby, wife of the executive secretary of the Washington Federation of Churches, presided and introduced Mrs. Eugene V. Pugh, president of the Women's Council of the W. F. C., who presented the speakers and the following honor guests: Dr. C. E. Hawthorne, president of the Washington Federation of Churches, who delivered the invocation; Mrs. C. E. Hawthorne, Mrs. Harper Sibley, Senator Gerald P. Nye, Mrs. Wilbur La Roe, Dr. W. L. Darby, Mrs. F. E. Edgington, Mrs. B. W. Meeks, Mrs. Joy Elmer Morgan, Mrs. W. N. Streeter and Mrs. Bennet Champ Clark.

Ex-Rep. Greenway Praises Unselfish Service of Congress

Arizona Woman, Here on Brief Visit, Attends Mrs. Roosevelt's Press Conference; Says She Enjoys Taking Life Easy.

Mrs. Isabella Greenway, former Representative from Arizona, believes "it would be a revelation to most people if they could learn the truth about how unselfish members of Congress have to be to do their duty."

Now visiting in Washington, Mrs. Greenway was a visitor at Mrs. Roosevelt's press conference yesterday when she revealed that she would like to "take up a career of explaining to people how self-sacrificing Congressmen and Congresswomen are and pointing out some of the demands continually pressing in on them." She is now enjoying her semi-leisure, she said, because she can plan her activities without having to decide each morning, on arising, how her time can be spent to the best advantage. Recalling some of the phases of her experiences in Congress, she asserted that "if constituents sent their Representatives to Washington with the proper amount of confidence in them, decisions made on important questions would be received 'back home' with more tolerance, more understanding."

Mrs. Greenway said she was finding it "a delightful experience" to get acquainted with her relatives and friends all over again, and to keep in close touch with her children and grandchildren now living in New York, where she is spending most of her time. She reminded the women of the press that she voluntarily retired from public life at 50, "while there were still enough years left to enjoy," and she expressed the opinion that "every person who has the privilege of giving public service comes to a time when he must decide whether to make a career of such service." She said further that she realized from the first, and knew that most of her constituents realized "my service was never of career quality."

Proof that she has not lost interest in public questions was borne out by the fact that she spent many hours yesterday on Capitol Hill. "I can hardly wait to get down there to see what's happening," she averred at the press conference. "I'm as interested as ever in what Congress is doing," she continued. "But it is something of a relief to be able to plan my own life without pressure."

Much of her time, she revealed incidentally, is taken up with where she owns a large ranch and managing her property in Arizona, a hotel, and huge herds of cattle. One of her biggest problems this winter, she said, was trying to get food to 2,300 cows that have been "snowed in" in northern Arizona for several weeks.

She will return to New York today.

Supreme Court To Pass on AAA Levy Refunds

Constitutionality of U. S. Payment Restrictions to Be Tested.

By the Associated Press.

The Supreme Court agreed yesterday to pass on a test case to determine the constitutionality of legislation restricting Government refunds of the old AAA's processing and floor stock taxes.

At issue is a provision of the 1936 revenue act. It declares that processors seeking refunds must prove they bore the expense themselves and did not pass it on to consumers. Collections of the taxes totaled more than $1,000,000,000 before the AAA was invalidated.

In a decision on January 13, 1936, the Supreme Court ruled that $200,000,000 of this amount, which had been impounded in Federal courts, must be returned to the taxpayers. It declined to pass at that time on the legality of the proof required for recovery if the taxes actually had been paid into the Federal Treasury.

The case the high tribunal consented to review was brought by the Anniston (Ala.) Manufacturing Co. in an effort to recover $270,000 of processing and floor stock taxes. It lost in the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals.

Only one opinion was read at a brief session yesterday before the Supreme Court adjourned for two weeks to work on opinions in cases which have been argued. These involve constitutionality of the national labor relations act and the railway labor measure, both of which guarantee collective bargaining to workmen.

In the one opinion, delivered by Justice Brandeis, the court held the Government could collect income taxes on $5,456 which it contended the Midland Mutual Life Insurance Co. of Columbus, Ohio, received as interest when it foreclosed on certain property in 1930. Justice McReynolds dissented.

The justices refused to review cases brought by five Texas rice millers and by the Sheridan (Wyo.) Flouring Mills

Parties Attack Hayashi Plans As 'Abstract'

Diet Opposition Menaces New Japanese Premier's 'Stop-Gap' Cabinet.

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo, Feb. 15.—Opposition from Japan's two major political parties endangered Premier Senjuro Hayashi's two-week-old cabinet tonight.

Spokesmen for the Minseito and Seiyukai parties, which together have a majority in parliament, assailed as "abstract" the premier's initial outline of his policies, in which he promised continuation of military preparedness without aggression toward other nations.

Members of the diet, assembled for the first time since January 21, when a crisis developed which led to the fall of the Koki Hidota government, heard Matajiro Koisumi, Minseito leader, declare:

"We cannot recognize the Hayashi cabinet as a strong administration capable of coping with the current political situation and enjoying unified support."

One thing he demanded was a future statement by the government on its views toward freedom of speech.

Etsujiro Uyehara, leader of the Seiyukai, took up the cudgel in the anti-government attack.

Quoting a recent interview in which Hayashi said Emperor Hirohito was "responsible for the administration," Uyehara asserted the government must not involve the throne in politics inasmuch as "the constitution specifies the emperor is sacred and inviolable."

"The Hayashi government must assume full responsibility for its own policies and acts," he said.

Hitler Orders Self-Rule for Reich Church

Finds Committee Has Not Achieved Unity, Provides for an Election.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Feb. 15.—Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler put Evangelical church affairs back in the hands of the church's electorate tonight.

Asserting an officially appointed Reich church committee had "not succeeded in bringing about unity in the German Evangelical Church," Hitler issued a decree ordering the church to choose its own synod to conduct its activities.

The decree, issued from Der Fuehrer's home at Berchtesgaden, near Munich, declared:

"The church shall henceforth make its own constitution and therewith bring about order in complete freedom and according to the wishes of the church members."

Provides for Vote.

"I empower the Reichsminister for church affairs (Hans Kerrl) to this end to prepare for an election of a general synod and take all necessary measures."

Hitler's order, informed Protestant sources said, came on the heels of flat refusal by the Evangelicals to accept a plan by Kerrl to run the church through a state commissioner.

It was understood the Nazi minister had intended to announce today the appointment of a single State officer ot take the place of the church council which resigned Saturday, thus creating virtually a state church.

Reliable Protestant informants declared the churches adamantly refused to accept this plan, and reports reaching Berlin indicated thousands of Lutheran and Reformed pastors were ready to defy Kerrl.

Plan Protested.

Foreign Minister Baron Konstantin von Neurath and ohter Protestant members of the cabinet also warned against an unfavorable impression which would be created abroad if a Nazi-dominated state church were created, it was understood.

Anti-Nazi feeling, meanwhile, was reported aroused among Catholics in Bavaria.

When Michael Cardinal Faulhaber, Archbishop of Munish, expressed hope the government would live up to its concordat with the Holy See—under which it promised to allow nonpolitical church activities to continue—there were derisive shouts of "phui!"

The cardinal declared the Nazis had frequently violated the concord assigned in 1933.

Fidelity Reports Study Is Started By FHLB Board

The legal department of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board yesterday began study of final examiners' reports on the affairs of the closed Fidelity Savings & Loan Association with a view to reopening the bank.

It is expected the legal study will be finished this week and recommendations suggested to the FHLB next week. The board will review all reports and then submit a plan for reopening the bank, closed since last July, to J. F. T. O'Connor, Comptroller of the Treasury, in charge of District of Columbia banks.

No statement has been issued as to the stability and value of assets of the Fidelity since it was closed. Treasury officials made one survey, but issued no information. The FHLB survey followed two months ago.

If the bank is to be reopened, the depositors will be protected up to $5,000 by Federal deposit insurance. FHLB, an agency dedicated to the preservation of shaky banks, is believed to be ready to bolster Fidelity with loans if the bank's condition will reasonably warrant them.

Kansas Bill Outlaws All Alcoholic Drinks

Topeka, Kans., Feb. 15 (AP).—The sale in Kansas of any beverage containing any alcohol would be prohibited under a bill passed today by the State House of Representatives, 84 to 37.

The bill makes illegal "all beverages which contain any per cent or fraction of a per cent of alcohol by weight or volume." It now goes to the Senate where its fate is uncertain. The Senate passed a 3.2 per cent beer bill two years ago.

Pope Hopes to Conduct Rites of Golden Rose

Vatican City, Feb. 15 (AP).—Aides of Pope Pius XI, thankful for the restored use of his legs, said tonight they expected he could perform the Blessing of the Golden Rose March 7, one of the most beautiful papal ceremonies.

The holy father, throughout his illness, never has abandoned hope of holding the ancient rite. The Golden Rose, for more than 1,000 years awarded to sovereigns and others whom the Popes wished to honor, is to be presented to Queen Elena of Italy in observance of the fortieth anniversary of her marriage to King Vittorio Emanuele III.

Finns Elect Kallio As President; Wife Will Stay on Farm

By the Associated Press.

Helsingfors, Finland, Feb. 15.—Kyosti Kallio was elected president of little, debt-paying Finland today, but his wife won't move into the presidential palace with him.

She is too busy running the Kallio farm, which she has managed successfully for many years while her husband engaged in affairs of state. Under present plans, she will remain there.

Kallio, premier of Finland since October 6, 1936, will resign that post to become chief executive. He was elected today by the electoral college.

The 300-member board elected Kallio to succeed 75-year-old President Pehr Evind Svinhufvud on the second ballot, after former President Kaarlo Juho Stahlberg had missed getting a majority by just one vote on the first ballot. The president serves six years.

Girl Cap Pistol Bandit Seized During Robbery

New York, Feb. 15 (AP).—A 25-year-old woman, who police say robbed several restaurants at the point of a cap pistol, was arrested today.

She said she was Norma Parker, a housemaid, and that she was born in New Orleans. Overpowered by Thomas Cosopus, night manager of a restaurant on Columbus avenue, she was captured at 5 a. m.

Harbord Says U. S. Isolation Dubious

New York, Feb. 15 (AP).—In a plea for preparedness, Maj. Gen. James G. Harbord today voiced a warning that "if there is ever another big military explosion, no matter where, the dangers it generated would threaten every land in the small and closely interrelated world of today."

Gen. Harbord declared that America's hope of remaining aloof from any European conflict by clinging to a policy of isolation was affected by activities which, he said, "are full of doubtful or twilight zones."

"The difficulties of a neutral position for the United States in event of an important war are well known," he said, in an address at the Women's National Republican Club.

One in Each 1,000 Is a Dope Addict

Chicago, Feb. 15 (AP).—Dr. R. L. Sensenich cited estimates that one of each 1,000 inhabitants of the United States is a narcotic addict today in urging increased facilities for treating such cases.

The speaker, a resident of South Bend, Ind., and former president of the Indiana State Medical Association, advocated greater expert care—at public expense, if necessary—in an address before the American Medical Association's Congress on Medical Education.

Sweden Buys Nazi Motors.

Berlin, Feb. 15 (AP).—The Brandenburg Motor Works, which manufactures many of Germany's airplane motors, announced today receipt of an order from Sweden for aircraft motors for military use.

The report said the factory was exporting motors to 12 countries at present.

Mrs. Wall Funeral To Be Held Today

Funeral services for Mrs. Allen Wall, 89, widow of Allen Wall, will be held today at 2 p. m. in the home of her daughter, Mrs. Charles Taylor Carter, 1641 Harvard street northwest. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

For many years active in church work here, Mrs. Wall was a member of the Westminister Presbyterian Church and for some time had been a board member of the Presbyterian Home for the Aged.

Besides her daughter, Mrs. Wall is survived by a son, Dr. Joseph Stiles Wall, of this city; three grandchildren, and two great-grand-children.

PALL MALL

THE MODERN BLEND

The only blended cigarette without a "skeleton in its closet"

Since the reign of Queen Victoria, the famous Turkish Pall Malls have derived their flavour and won their favour solely by a simple blending of the finest Turkish tobaccos, and from nothing else.

The new Pall Mall, at 15¢ for 20, is true to this traditional simplicity. It uses only the finest domestic tobaccos, enriched by choice Oriental types, with no artificial flavouring, sweetening or medication. You will find their straight tobacco flavour distinctive, pleasant and without disagreeable after-taste.

Deadlines Set For Isolating War in Spain

Powers to Start Blockade March 6; Portugal Still Opposed.

By the Associated Press.

London, Feb. 15.—Representatives of Europe's major powers tonight set two deadlines in their drive to confine the Spanish civil war to Spain.

Sitting as a sub-committee of the international "Hands - Off - Spain" committee, they decided:

1. The ban on the flow of foreign volunteers to Spain must be made effective at midnight Saturday, February 20.

2. Plans for complete isolation of the war, including the stationing of neutral observers and a naval blockade, must be perfected by the same time and must be brought into operation by midnight March 6.

The full non-intervention committee was called to meet at 3:30 p. m. tomorrow to ratify the decisions.

The sub-committee, composed of representatives of Great Britain, France, Italy, Germany, Russia and Portugal, acted in face of Portugal's continued refusal to co-operate in the complete control plan.

Portugal's delegate said he awaited a decision by his government, which has turned a deaf ear to the plan thus far.

Informed sources asserted there was little doubt the full committee would ratify the sub-committee's decision.

If Portugal continued in her refusal to participate, they declared, the other powers would go ahead in arranging to blockade her coast as well as that of Spain to make the plan effective.

The naval patrol program resulted from the refusal of both the Valencia government and the Insurgent administration to permit neutral observers to be stationed on their territory.

Ships to Be Halted.

The ships, while having no authority to stop and search suspected ships, would report their movements to the international committee and governments would be asked to penalize the owners.

Ships en route to Spain would be compelled to stop at certain ports where committee representatives would examine them to ascertain that they contained neither war materials nor volunteers.

French Premier Leon Blum's suddenly belligerent stand regarding Italian aid to the Spanish insurgents was believed to have influenced the sub-committee to take serious action.

Blum, in Paris, warned Italy that France will not tolerate the "open invasion of Spain," asserting French patience is being taxed near the point of independence of action.

Two British destroyers, the Havock and the Gypsy, fired on an airplane, "believed to be an insurgent Spanish plane," which attempted to bomb them off the coast of Algeria, London official sources said.

Britain Protests.

Whitehall then dispatched immediate vigorous protests to insurgent authorities at Palma, Mallorca and to the seat of the insurgent administration at Salamanca, Spain.

Official sources described the attacking plane, which dropped six bombs near the war vessels but caused no damage, as "apparently a Junkers (German) machine." The Havock and Gypsy were stationed near Cape Tenez en route from Gibraltar to Malta to join their squadrons, naval sources said.

Socialist Premier Blum's warning to Italy came with the Spanish insurgents' successes of the last ten days.

22 Valencians Killed.

Valencia, Spain, Feb. 15 (AP).—The temporary capital of Spain today counted 22 dead, 55 injured and untold property damage after an insurgent cruiser sent 35 shells crashing into the refugee-packed city in a night attack. Rescue workers searched the ruins for more dead.

(The railway between France and the autonomous republic of Catalonia, dispatches from Perpignan, France, said, was shattered by bombardment of insurgent aircraft.)

Dynamiters Lead Leftists.

Madrid, Feb. 15 (AP).—Dynamite throwers, disrupting a tank attack with their primitive but powerful munitions, led government troops to a victory today in defense of the Valencia highway, the war office reported.

Cerruti Reassures Blum.

Paris, Feb. 15 (AP).—Italian Ambassador Vittorio Cerruti, warned by Premier Leon Blum that France would not stand for "open invasion of Spain," was understood tonight to have assured Blum that Italy has no territorial or other ambitions in Spain.

Sources close to the French Premier said Cerruti declared Italy's help to the insurgents was not official but was designed to offset foreign aid given the Valencia government.

On the heels of the talk came an announcement from the ministry of marine that France's eighth destroyer, Cassini, had left Brest for Lisbon, capital of Portugal.

Parole Denied Lawyer In Dillinger Gang Case

Arthur D. Wood, chairman of the Federal Board of Pardons, said yesterday the Justice Department had refused to approve release of Louis Piquett, a Chicago lawyer, serving a two-year sentence at Leavenworth Penitentiary. He was sentenced for harboring a member of the Dillinger gang, according to the Associated Press.

Piquett entered the Federal penitentiary July 27, 1935, and was eligible for parole last January 8. The board refused his application after studying a report based on a hearing January 22.

Delaware Senate Hits Court Reorganization

Dover, Del., Feb. 15 (AP).—Republican majority members of the Senate, over the protest of Democrats, today adopted a resolution describing President Roosevelt's plan to reorganize Federal courts and possibly increase the membership of the Supreme Court as "a violation of the fundamental principles of our Government."

Any change in the court, the resolution said, should be made by constitutional amendment after submission to State Legislatures or to the voters at large.

The President devoted a brief address wholly to Farley. Greeting those present as "fellow Americans," the President said the dinner was to those attending it "a very personal affair." Speaking for a moment extemporaneously, Mr. Roosevert asserted that in 140 years during which the American Government has been run by two great political parties, "none had contributed more or shown greater responsibility than Jim Farley."

The President praised the man who twice has engineered him to national victories as a loyal friend, as one of "honor and decency," and of "good temper which is based on a sense of perspective, a sense of humor and a sense of forgiveness."

Never Said a Mean Word.

"In all my years of association with Jim Farley," the President asserted, "I have never once heard him utter one mean syllable about any human being."

The President praised the manner in which Farley "had taken things on the chin and had come up smiling every time," and he added: "That means courage, and there is not a man in the United States who has more deep-seated, thoroughgoing courage than he."

He described Farley as a man who has "faith in his fellowman," as one who "likes to believe and does believe that men and women are fundamentally decent, fundamentally honest, and that if they are given a chance through democratic processes their decisions will be fundamentally sound."

Earlier in the dinner Vice President Garner referred to the Cabinet officer as "politically honest" and added that "if you are honest in politics you will be honest in everything else."

Embarrassed by Kiss.

Farley sat through these encomiums, face lowered and somewhat abashed. He fidgeted as the speeches were being made. But his most embarrassing momet came when Miss Mary Dewson, vice chairman of the Democratic National Committee, was called on for a few words. She said that all the Democratic women thought "Jim" was "grand." She enticed him to arise and come to her side at the rostrum to permit her to pin a rose on him as a token of the affection of the party women.

"There is one thing more I wish to do to show our affection for you," Miss Dewson asserted.

Placing both hands on the tall Farley's shoulders, she planted a big kiss on his cheek. The audience which had both dined and wined well and was in a jovial mood, howled its delight. Farley's face went red—a deep red—from his neck to the top of his bald head. He stuttered something and the blush deepened. Quickly taking his seat, the Postmaster General reached for a glass of water, gulping mouthfuls. It was several minutes before his face assumed a normal tint.

Responding to the President's words, Farley asserted that he appreciated the generous things that had been said about him and that so many persons had come so far to honor him. He said he would always be grateful for Miss Dewson's kiss and everything else. Standing with the President's arm around his shoulder, he commenced heaping praises on others, attributing to Miss Dewson a great share in the November victory. Of Charles Michelson, the committee's publicity director, he said that "none at headquarters had contributed more to the splendid result."

He said he did not regard the dinner as "a personal tribute" but rather as "a symbol of your appreciation of what the many men and women throughout the country did to keep our great President in office."

Turning to the President, he said Mr. Roosevelt always had been an inspiration to him and that "while the breath of life is in me I shall assist you to the extent of my ability so that I can ever enjoy your confidence and good will."

Distributed to the dinner guests was an elaborate souvenir program, which cost $2 each to print, devoted to photographs of Farley and his family, excerpts from speeches he had made and facsimiles of John D. Rockefeller's letter praising him after the election and of newspaper clippings which reported his prediction that Mr. Roosevelt would carry all but two States.

Vice President Garner was toastmaster at the dinner, being introduced by Lawrence Wood Robert, jr., secretary of the Democratic National Committee and chairman of the testimonial dinner committee. After a few remarks of eulogy the Vice President ordered the calling of the role of States, Democratic Governors, Senators and committeemen being asked to arise.

New Deal Plans 25 - Year Spread Of National Debt

By the United Press.

Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., has informed Congress the Administration proposes that the $34,000,000,000 national debt be retired over a quarter of a century to avoid imposing an unduly heavy burden on taxpayers in any single year.

Testifying before the House Appropriations Committee on the Treasury - Postoffice supply bill, Morgenthau emphasized that continuance of the present social security tax schedules would enable retirement of $30,000,000,000 of the national debt by 1955.

He urged prompt continuance of so-called nuisance taxes, which now yield the Treasury $500,000,000 annually. At the same time, he painted a glowing picture of continued economic recovery, but warned Congress that it must assume responsibility for an unbalanced Federal budget if it made appropriations in excess of budget requirements.

Dutch U-Boat Arrives After Stormy Voyage

Waves Tossed 240-Ft. Craft About Like Pencil, Officers Assert.

Her jaunty crew of blond Dutchmen on a motionless deck for a change, and smoking cigarettes for a change, the Royal Dutch submarine O-16, sleek green-grey and latest in the fleet, slid up to a pier at the Navy Yard yesterday for a week's visit in Washington.

Storms flipped the 240-foot craft about like a pencil during a 24-day passage from Den Belder, the Dutch naval base, officers said yesterday, but they made the crossing without mishap or casualties despite storms and hurricanes.

Through all the tumult the undersea mariners didn't have a glass of schnapps or beer, for regulations prohibit the presence of alcoholics on board. They are permitted to smoke cigarettes above deck, but not below. With the waves so rough, they were deprived of even that minor pleasure.

Three hours a day the O-16 submerged in order to let Dr. F. A. Vening-Meinesz of the faculty of Utrecht University make oceanic observations. He is particularly interested in the effects of the law of gravity upon submarines, and has made previous studies aboard American submarines in the West Indies.

Lieut. Comdr. G. G. W. Van Wanning, skipper of the Dutchman, told Lieut. Comdr. Lyman S. Pery, U. S. N., that storms beset the O-16 on the trans-Atlantic adventure as soon as she slipped her cable at Den Holde.

A delegation of Netherlands and Navy dignitaries in bright uniform was on hand to greet the smartly caparisoned Dutch officers who stepped ashore a moment after she hit the dock, about 9:15 a. m.

Baron van Breugel Douglas, counselor of the Netherlands Legation here; Lieut. Comdr. Perry; Commander John J. Malloy, Navy Medical Corps; Second Lieut. Clark Lynn, jr., aid to Brig. Gen. Charles D. Roberts, U. S. A., were on shore. They were invited aboard and went below.

right to rule. We ought to uphold the President and not put stumbling blocks in his way"

William A. Roberts, former People's Counsel, was one of the young lawyers to support Wheatley. He pointed out that, in the Harding Administration, the American Bar Association urged the appointment of two additional Supreme Court judges.

Philip Austin was another lawyer who appealed to the association to support the President. In the course of his talk, he said that Supreme Court justices were not "legal giants," but got into the court through "political drag."

An indignant member, August Moran, demanded that Austin's remarks be stricken from the record as "unbecoming" a member of the Bar Association. President Quinn overruled him. A little later, however, a lawyer in the rear of the hall made a formal motion to have Austin's remarks stricken, and it was adopted overwhelmingly, although with considerable laughter.

Condemn Court Plan.

Two lawyers, claiming to be youthful enough to speak for the younger generation that Wheatley had alluded to, spoke in favor of condemning the President's plan. They were Albert Mickler, a "liberal Democrat" from Florida, who asked the association to "mince no words," and W. J. Rowan, who warned against a policy of "pussyfooting" on such a grave issue. They were joined by Frank Nesbitt, who charged that Roosevelt was trying to "change umpires" in the middle of a game, and picking one he knew to be favorable to the home team.

Attorney Hoover, in introducing his resolution, said it was obvious that President Roosevelt was trying to put men in the Supreme Court who offset the votes of Chief Justice Hughes and Associate Justices Van Devanter, McReynolds, Sutherland and Butler. But, he said, it was necessary for him to "camouflage" his real purpose, so he based his argument for a change on the matter of age.

He recalled President Roosevelt's "horse and buggy" remark after the Supreme Court had invalidated NRA, the Frazier-Lemke act and had rebuffed the President for ousting Federal Trade Commissioner Humphreys.

Recalls Platform.

Then, coming down to the 1936 political campaign, Hoover said:

"You know—and Senator Bailey, of North Carolina, told you in a radio speech Saturday night—what the Democratic platform said in that campaign. It said that if what had to be done couldn't be done within the Constitution, the party would go to the people and ask for a constitutional amendment."

The lawyers applauded.

"He never received a mandate for any such proposal as this," Hoover shouted.

Hoover reminded the association that President Roosevelt was no greater in the eyes of the law than the most humble citizen.

"This is not a question of politics," he said. "It is something so momentous that men should forget politics and remember that they are Americans.

"I say that the President's action in this case is contrary to the letter and spirit of fair play in America. He is not the master of the people, but the servant of the people."

Hoover called several "witnesses" to support his argument, including George Washington. He read from Washington's farewell address the famous warning against the "ursurpation of power." It is customary, he said, to have this message read in both houses of Congress on February 22, and he suggested that all members be in their seats to hear it.

"No President," he concluded, "should have the right to remake the Supreme Court in his own image when the judges of that court disagree with him. As lawyers, we are now at the crossroads, and we shall be convicted of cowardice if we sit by while the court is despoiled."

Leo P. Barlow, who also described himself as a Democrat, joined with Hoover in denouncing the Roosevelt plan, as did Wharton E. Lester, who said that the President, having reduced Congress to a "rubber stamp," was trying to do the same thing with the Supreme Court.

At the outset of the meeting, President Quinn announced the appointment of Jim McCarthy, a deputy marshal, as sergeant at arms of the Bar Association.

Wife Celebrates Tally-Ho Triumph In Irish Balm Suit

Belfast, Northern Ireland, Feb. 15 (AP).—Smart, middle-aged Mrs. Alice Lace celebrated today in her modest home what she called her "tally-ho" triumph, a court award of $12,500 for the alleged enticement of her husband, a former huntsman, by a wealthy woman follower of the hunt.

"This verdict may be a warning to fashionable women," said Mrs. Lace, "not to place temptation in the way of men in humbler circumstances whose services, like my husband's, contribute to the success of the social round."

In making the award, Justice Brawn said the defendant, Mrs. Madeline Yvonne Lillian Powell, had committed "an outrageous wrong on Mrs. Lace by taking away her husband."

Mrs. Lace had testified her husband lost his position with the East Antrim Hounds hunt as a result of the affair, and then left her to live with Mrs. Powell.

When Mrs. Lace remonstrated with Mrs. Powell over her growing friendship with Lace, the wife charged Mrs. Powell threatened "to trash the life out of her" if she bothered them.

Col. A. J. Booth Of War Office Dies at Home

Adjutant General's Aide, 61, Succumbs After Hour's Illness.

Col. Alfred J. Booth, 61, U. S. Army, died yesterday at his home, 3731 Kanawha street northwest. He is survived by his wife and a daughter, Nancy Booth.

Stationed in Washington in the Adjutant General's Department, Col. Booth complained of feeling ill when he came to work yesterday morning at the War Department. He returned home and died within an hour. The cause of death was believed to be heart disease.

Born in Albany, N. Y., he entered the Army during the Spanish War as sergeant in the First New York Infantry. At the closed of the war he enlisted in the Twenty-seventh United States Infantry and was commissioned a second lieutenant in the regular Army in 1901. He was promoted through the grades, reaching the rank of major in 1917.

During the World War he served in the Adjutant General's Department of the American Expeditionary Force and was advanced to the temporary rank of colonel. He was promoted to the permanent rank of colonel in 1931.

A graduate of the School of the Line, he was on the general staff corps eligible list. He had served in Washington for a few months in 1920 and had three subsequent tours of duty in the office of the adjutant general. He had been stationed in Washington since 1934.

For his World War service, Col. Booth was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal, with the citation:

"He organized and efficiently supervised the administration of the Adjutant General's printing plant at General Headquarters, American Expeditionary Forces. To his untiring zeal is largely due the success with which it handled a tremendous volume of printed matter, rendering important service to the American Expeditionary Forces."

Funeral Today For F. W. Boone

Funeral services for Frederick W. Boone, 70, treasurer of the Circle Amusement Co., will be held at 2 p. m. today at the Gawler funeral home, 1750 Pennsylvania avenue northwest. Burial will be in Glenwood Cemetery.

A native of Baltimore, Mr. Boone died Saturday in Emergency Hospital. He moved to Washintgon at an early age and entered the confectionary business. Later he operated stores of his own in the 1700 and 2000 blocks Pennsylvania avenue northwest. He sold his business in 1933. He was one of the organizers of the Circle Amusement Co., which operated the Circle Theater here.

He was a member of the Hiram Lodge, No. 10, F. A. A. M., and a Royal Arch Mason. He also was a member of the Association of Oldest Inhabitants, the West End Citizens Association and an honorary member of the Veteran Druggists' Association.

Mr. Boone is survived by two brothers, James A. Boone and Ernest L. Boone, both of Baltimore. His wife, Mrs. Barbara Baird Boone, died three years ago. He lived at 1828 H street northwest.

Mrs. Susan Mount Funeral Is Today

Funeral services for Mrs. Susan Catherine Mount, 93, one of the pioneers of Damascus, Md., who died Sunday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Titus C. Day, Damascus, will be held today at 2:30 p. m. at Damascus M. E. Church. Burial will be in the adjoining cemetery. The Rev. Raymond Hunter Brown will officiate.

Born in Woodville, Frederick County, Md., the daughter of Matthias and Catherine Molesworth, Mrs. Mount was married at the age of 18, and moved to Damascus shortly afterward. Mr. Mount, who died some years ago, was the first funeral director of Damascus.

Mrs. Mount was a charter member of the Ladies Aid Society of Damascus M. E. Church and had been an active worker for the church and in charitable enterprises. She was one of the most popular residents of the Damascus neighborhood.

In addition to Mrs. Day, she is survived by another daughter, Mrs. Fanny Stanley of Damascus, and a son, James Mount of Gaithersburg; 16 grandchildren, 26 great-grandchildren and 4 great-great-grandchildren.

Death Reunites Joseph Jones With Beloved Civil War Horse

Joseph R. Jones has gone to join his warhorse, "Old January," in that Valhalla reserved for cavalrymen. The Union veteran of the Civil War died Sunday at Gallinger Hospital. He was 101 years old.

Up until his last day, Mr. Jones talked of January, a black horse that could "outrun, outtrot and outjump" any horse in his regiment, the Sixth United States Cavalry.

It seems only like yesterday that the old soldier, being interviewed on his 100th birthday, September 29, 1935, rose up in his wheel chair at the Soldiers' Home and said:

"They stole January. That's what they did."

Mr. Jones first met the horse, memories of which filled his later years, a few months after the Confederates shot his regular mount from under him at Antietam.

The cavalryman loved to tell about the horse, how he carried him through Gettysburg's three bloody days in which only 75 men of his regiment, 800 strong at the start, came through alive.

He loved to tell how the horse got him out safely when J. E. B. Stuart's cavalry and two regiments of infantry surrounded the Sixth Cavalry a few miles from Gettysburg and the regiment fought its way through.

"When my enlistment ran out," Mr. Jones used to say, "I tried to buy January back, but they wouldn't let me have him. They said the Secretary of War wouldn't let him go."

Mr. Jones served in the war from October, 1861, until October, 1864. Later he went to work for the Pennsylvania Railway and many years ago was retired after becoming supervisor of switches and signals of the Philadelphia division.

His wife, Mary Elizabeth Stone Jones, died many years ago. He is survived by a son, Thomas A. Jones, of Philadelphia. The son and Pennsylvania officials will attend the funeral, which is to be Friday at 1:30 p. m. at the Soldiers' Home.

Jones recently told an interviewer:

"The happiest part of my life was spent in the Army soldiering, but parting with January was the worst bit of it."

Coroner Urges Short Be Held to Grand Jury

Friendsville, Md., Feb. 15 (A.P.).—A coroner's jury recommended today that Henry Short, 45, be held for grand jury action in the fatal stabbing of his fellow worker, Harry Wilhelm, 49-year-old lumberman.

The jurors made their recommendation after hearing State's Attorney Neil C. Fraley question witnesses before Magistrate Percy Frined. Stabbed in the heart, Wilhelm was found dead Sunday in a Friendsville street.

Chalice of Antioch Shown in Bay State

Worcester, Mass., Feb. 15 (A.P.).—The great chalice of Antioch, part of the priceless treasure unearthed by a group of Arab laborers in Syria in 1910, arrived in Worcester this afternoon closely guarded.

The battered silver goblet is believed by experts to be the one used by Christ at the Last Supper. It is a rude inner cup and an elaborately carved outer covering with figures of the apostles, apparently added some years after the orinigal cup was made. The chalice, together with a number of other relics found at the same time, is part of an exhibition at the Worcester Art Museum.

Bringing War Closer.

A Dutch submarine, the O-16, recently crossed the Atlantic and is now here in Washington for a brief visit. Its mission, of course, is friendly. On board is Prof. Vening Meinesz, famed oceanographer, who busied himself during the crossing by studying ocean gravity. He will report his findings to the National Geographic Society.

All this might be quickly dismissed as a pleasant and interesting bit of news except for the fact that the O-16 arrives in Washington at the very moment when the Senate has begun to hold hearings on the neutrality problem.

At these hearings, no doubt, much will be heard of the wisdom of adopting a "cash-and-carry" policy for our war-time trade. Some favor such a device because they believe it would avoid the dangers of unrestricted commerce with belligerents while permitting American business to reap the profits of war trade. If fighting nations choose to trade with us, it is said, let them do so at their own risk.

Should war break out in Europe with this policy in effect, foreign ships would probably be sent to our ports to haul away our goods. But is there any reason to believe that there would not also arrive, hidden by the rolling waters, submarines of opposing powers ready to torpedo those ships once they passed the 3-mile or the 12-mile limit? The O-16, which belongs to one of the most peaceful and unaggressive nations in Europe, managed to make the crossing without difficulty. The submarines of other nations are no doubt capable of doing likewise.

Thus, a "cash-and-carry" policy, instead of keeping the war on the other side of the ocean, might actually bring the war right to our doors. Because of the importance of the United States as a source of essential supplies, the struggle for access to our ports could be expected to result in major clashes. That prospect is not a cheerful one for the United States.

Constructive Bargaining.

Negotiations which led to a $30,000,000 increase in the annual wages of workers in the men's clothing industry stand out in sharp contrast to the strikes and agitation which are afflicting other industrial groups. The adjustment was worked out around the conference table in "a spirit of harmony." In short, both organized employers and organized workers preferred real collective bargaining to the hazards of industrial warfare.

The conditions which made this peaceful agreement possible deserve close analysis. As Sidney Hillman points out, the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, of which he is president, represents all the workers in the industry. Meeting with manufacturers representing 85 per cent of the industry, it was able to develop for the first time a three-year agreement on a national scale. No unrepresentative or partially organized union could hope to achieve such results.

On the other hand, the A. C. W. has developed its moderate, co-operative attitude as a concomitant of power. No such agreement as that now concluded could have been made if there had been open or covert employer hostility to recognition of the union. Such recognition is clearly a prerequisite to the development of a thoroughly responsible attitude on the part of organized labor. Whether or not power of itself increases the sense of responsibility is another question, for information on which the future policy of the automobile workers will now be closely watched.

In part, the wage increase granted the A. C. W. merely offsets higher living costs. But it also involves an enhancement of "real wages" by 7 to 8 per cent. Evidently the employers believe that improved business places the clothing industry in a position to grant this increase without jeopardizing its economic position.

On that basis, organized labor has a strong argument for wage adjustments which keep pace with expanding profits. Agreements which thus augment mass purchasing power, and tend to preserve a rational balance between the returns to capital and labor, contribute largely to the national welfare as well as to the benefit of the individual wage earner.

Mr. Cummings' Defense.

The Attorney General did not shine in his thankless task of trying to make the proposed Supreme Court enlargement seem no more than a routine and casual matter, amply justified by precedent.

He was rather too specious, for example, in his definition of the rising groundswell of opposition as "an insensate clamor, calculated to divert attention from the merits" of the President's proposal. All that the opposition asks is that the proposals be divided into its two very distinct parts, permitting the constructive reforms to be considered apart from the packing of the Court. This is the only way to consider the plan on its merits. And the logical inference from Mr. Cummings' remarks is that in his heart he too believes this straightforward procedure should be followed.

For the most part the Attorney General merely rephrased the arguments, good, bad and indifferent, voiced by Mr. Roosevelt in his message of February 5. But in his analysis of the character of the Constitution he went further, indicating an underlying misconception of the character of the Nation's organic law, which is amazing in one who is the Government's chief legal officer. Particularly inadmissible was Mr. Cummings' statement that "at no point" does the Constitution endeavor "to check" the "flow of the life of our people."

It is a mystery how this conclusion could be reached by anyone who has ever read the document by which a federal form of government was established for this country. If the Attorney General's interpretation were valid there would have been absolutely no point in providing any machinery for amendment of the organic law. And, as a single instance, there could be no defense of the stipulated representation of each State, regardless of population, by two Senators.

When Mr. Cummings says "we must make democracy work" is it to be understood that he intends to break down the highly undemocratic arrangement whereby Arizona and New York have the same representation in the upper house?

Indeed, the principal, though unintentional, value of the Attorney General's speech was its thorough revelation of the complete indifference with which he, like his chief, regards fundamental American institutions. The honest and open procedure of constitutional amendment he casually tosses aside as inconvenient to the Administration. As an argument against it he solemnly cites the failure of the child labor amendment to secure, as yet, sufficient ratifications.

His whole case, fairly and reasonably analyzed, boils down to this—if a Chief Executive finds that the checks and balances of the organic law impede him, they must somehow be rendered inoperative. And the ethics by which this reasoning is justified are just as extraordinary. In the opinion of the Attorney General of the United States —"Whether the plan is immoral or not must be tested by the results it produces."

In the failure of Mr. Cummings to see the staggering implications of his remarks there would be something humorous, were not the situation overcast with such eminently tragic possibilities for the American people. "Let us have done with irresponsible talk about dictatorship," says Mr. Cummings. "Let us turn our minds to realities."

The painful reality behind this temporizing address is the revelation that the Attorney General either does not understand or does not approve the basis of the American form of government.

One Place To Co-ordinate.

Washingtonians have reason to be pleased with the attention that has been given to local problems on Capitol Hill this year. In the House two special sub-committees are studying legislative changes and tax measures recommended by the Jacobs Committee. And the sub-committee on District appropriations is preparing for a comprehensive investigation of the fiscal formula problem.

On the Senate side, Chairman King of the District Committee is seeking a thorough inquiry into the administrative deficiencies of the local government with the object of bringing about widespread reorganization. While somewhat less urgent than the immediate fiscal issue, this undertaking is none the less important. At present the local government operates under handicaps that are imposed upon no other municipality. If the District is to become a model city, or even a well-governed community, administrative authority must be centralized, interference from the Budget Bureau and other Federal agencies must be minimized, and various departments within the local government must be modernized.

It is unfortunate, in one respect, that the analysis of these various problems has been assigned to so many different committees. Perhaps it is just as well to have separate groups working on fiscal and administrative questions. Yet these issues are very closely related. They could be more effectively considered by separate units of a single committee, thus avoiding the conflicts which so frequently result in confusion and delay of District legislation.

While it is considering changes of far-reaching importance in the relationship between the Federal and local governments, therefore, Congress might profitably inquire into the desirability of sending all local measures, including appropriation bills, to the regular District committees.

The Armament Burden.

The decision of the Baldwin government to expand British armaments even if, in consequence, the budget is unbalanced, is clearly no unique phenomenon in these piping days of peace.

Indeed the British are in a position to argue that their hands were forced, that they delayed rearming for a dangerously long time and only decided to enter the race when the balance of military power definitely turned against them. Yet, however justified the present British action may be, it is certain to add more fuel to the raging flames.

Already the nations are spending far more on armaments than they ever did before the World War and the size of the defense forces, too, is greater now than it was then. In comparison with what is taking place now the prewar race in armaments was a picayune affair. Yet it was undoubtedly a factor leading to that conflict.

Possibly war may this time be averted. Yet, unless the nations sooner or later agree to stop in their tracks, many of them will be faced with bankruptcy. For the time being rearmament has produced a certain fictitious form of prosperity. But in the long run the concentration of national energies on unproductive purposes is bound to lead to catastrophe.

The sums now being devoted to armaments is literally staggering. During the past two years alone, Messrs. W. T. Stone and H. Fisher estimate in a report published by the Foreign Policy Association, world expenditure for military purposes has more than doubled, rising from a total of $5,000,000,000 in 1934, when the race was already well under way, to a total of almost $11,000,000,000 last year.

It is a race in which every nation is participating. Yet even at this point there is no indication whatever that the pace will be slackened. That is certainly true of Germany which, during the past two years, has been the principal pacemaker. The Foreign Policy Association credits Germany with having spent, last year, no less than $2,600,000,000 for war purposes, the largest sum spent by any nation with the sole exception of Soviet Russia. In 1934, by way of contrast, the Third Reich spent $381,000,000.

In the case of Italy the rise, while not so great proportionally, has also been considerable—from $263,000,000 to $870,000,000. The same two years saw Japan's expenditures for armaments increase from $271,900,000 to $307,200,000. The latter sum represents 46 per cent of the budget of the island empire. Nor has the United States been behindhand. Along with our professed isolation and the ambitious but confused efforts to insulate ourselves against war by mandatory neutrality legislation, our expenditures for national defense have jumped from $710,000,000 in 1934 to $964,000,000.

It is obviously a fool's game. No nation except the very wealthiest is in a position to gain, through rearmament, any permanent advantages over its rivals. In the long run, therefore, the ratio of armed strength among the nations may be no whit different than it is now even though, in the meantime, their productive energies will have been wasted.

Gasoline Nomads.

By the end of the year it is estimated that 1,250,000 persons will be calling 400,000 automobile trailers "home." Some will be crop pickers, waiters, etc., whose occupations follow the seasons, but most will be men and women who have tired of the expense and monotony of Main Street life and who find the simplicity and excitement of living on wheels a welcome change.

Their rumbling arrival on the American scene, however, is a serious concern to public officials throughout the country. City planners, for example, are confronted with the problems of where to locate trailer camps. Health officers are inspecting with dubious eyes the water and sewage facilities used by the gasoline nomads. Fire inspectors and police chiefs watch nervously over knots of the flimsy and virtually unprotected structures now dotting the South.

Public welfare officials are now trying to decide whose responsibility it shall be when the travelers encounter sickness or financial embarrassment or when they require expensive repairs or hospitalization. Finally, school superintendents are at a loss to know whether children from trailers should be admitted to the public schools or prosecuted by truant officers.

At least 17 States have laws regulating tourist camps and these can probably be revised to apply to trailer settlements as well. Zoning regulations, too, can be invoked to control trailers to some extent, as can certain housing and health codes. But the easy mobility of an automobile enables trailer dwellers to move quickly beyond the scope of such authority—generally municipal—if it becomes too stringent.

More important is the ease with which the gasoline nomads can dodge taxes. At present nominal license fees are their only contribution to government. This can not last. Soon the burden they place on State and local governments will be realized. Tax machinery will be devised to reach them and then perhaps the movement, which has been nurtured by the depression coupled with inadequate housing and a characteristic American delight in movement, may subside as suddenly as it has developed.

The Sixteenth Amendment.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: An amusing corollary of the current argument in regard to the constitutionality of the Social Security Act is the quite amazing fact that no Federal court has as yet heaved any suit to restrain collection of the tax out of the handiest window, The cause? Quite simple. Some time ago the people of the United States amended their charter to permit the Congress to "lay and collect taxes on incomes," and the Sixteenth Amendment specifically repealed the previous limitation upon the power of the Congress to lay a direct tax.

Surely no one doubts that wages are income or that they are paid out of income, and equally surely no one doubts that not even our oligarchic Supreme Court dare lay an injunction on the power of the Congress to appropriate money. All of which appears to the non-legal person, like myself, a deliberate and badly intentioned move to throw the Sixteenth Amendment out of court. That tax levied upon income, as it is, may be declared invalid appears to the writer a deliberate and quite unscrupulous attempt to render an amendment to the basic charter inoperative.

But not being versed in the tricks of lawyers, my poor mind, dizzied with our Supreme Court's legal turnings, is perhaps clutching for the solid ground of the Constitution, as specifically amended by the people. Surely, even the Liberty League and the inferior Federal Courts can take judicial notice of the Sixteenth Amendment.

Chains On Criminals.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In one of the movies of the flood disaster there is shown a chain gang of convicts carrying large sacks of sand. Any student of penology knows that linking men together by means of chains belongs to antiquated prison methods and that it is brutalizing and has never been a corrective procedure toward possible rehabilitation of a convict.

When is the public going to wake up and influence legislators to study what has been accomplished by some penal institutions more advanced in the psychology of the criminal? And to recognize the fact that a large percentage of offenders could be salvaged, not by brutal methods which experience has proven futile, but by a wholly modern scientific conception of a social offender. However, this would be only a secondary reform—the real fundamental issue is to start work at once on crime prevention, in other words, what are the causes which contribute toward the building up in an individual—be he man or woman—who desires to commit crimes.

Cost Of Government.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It would seem that the average person is almost oblivious to what is transpiring in legislation to make Government employes a privileged class.

No greater example of the insincerity and hypocrisy of the day can be cited than the methods and arguments employed by their spokesman to advance step by step their entrenchment in the tax-sustained bounties of Government service.

In spite of the fact their status economically has long since ceased to have any fair relation to private industry and the life of the average citizen, they brazenly ask for still more concessions, camouflaging this request, their intents, their purposes by some excuse that will appease the superficial-minded. They have obtained almost anything they asked for until Washington today is absolutely an incubus in cost of Government personnel. This, together with its duplication in State, county and municipal government, is the strongest force that is making us toward fascism.

Communism's Threat.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If, as Representative Mrs. Jenckes seems to think, the arguments for communism are so powerful and unanswerable that whosoever hears is convinced by them, communism must be a theory so strangely endowed with power that to try with paper resolutions to check its course would be merely ridiculous. And if the meager little handful of Communists in the United States are endowed with such mysterious and supernatural force that they seriously can menace a Government indorsed and supported by 125,000,000 people, they are evidently creatures so far beyond merely mortal control as to leave us helpless. But in that case should we not be wise to learn the secret of this unprecedented portent than to shake against it the puny fist of an imprecation?

Salvini And Gielgud.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The presence of a distinguished Shakespearian actor in the city recently and the comment by way of review on other actors who have portrayed other Hamlets have caused me to wonder why no critic has mentioned Salvini. Of course, I refer to Salvini the younger. A generation ago Salvini toured America with an interpretation of Hamlet so vivid, and to me so true, that I cannot forget it. Of course, there are moments in the Salvini interpretation when he seemed overemotional, but taken as a whole his presentation of the greatest of Shakespeare's plays is superior to anything I have seen since that time. In two striking particulars he was superior to Gielgud—depending, of course, on one's analysis of the particular scenes in question.

In the immortal soliloquy beginning "To be or not to be," Salvini came slowly upon the stage, absorbed in his own thought, melancholy, paying no attention whatever to the audience or to anything save his own thought. Gielgud rushed hurriedly from the wings, cast one wild look about the stage and then suddenly turned toward the audience and, almost with declamation, recited the famous soliloquy.

The other marked difference was in the mock play, where Gielgud almost whispered into the king's ear as he described the plot. This is contrary to every interpretation I have ever seen of this famous climax.

Of course, we may assume that Hamlet was so many-sided an individual that no one actor can interpret him fully.

And it should be said that Gielgud's interpretation of the parts with Polonius and the scene with his mother were remarkably well done.

The most accurate and intelligent interpretation of the entire play by the entire cast which I have ever seen was that given by the Stratford Players.

The Mule-Faced Woman.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I always enjoy Pegler's column, but occasionally he strikes a sour note. Most people will commend him for his efforts in bringing to light many of the hidden things that are of no credit to the intelligence of the masses, but when he deals in personalities he seems to lack that sense of propriety which makes men of breeding avoid the indelicate touch.

I am referring to his recent article from Chicago—the reference to the mule-faced woman was frankly insulting. The group of men that were exploiting her infirmity were, to say the least, courteous in their attitude toward her. Her weakness is in her features—Pegler's?

JOHN DAVEY.

Mr. Ernst's Book.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Ernst, in his book "The Ultimate Power," uses clever if not convincing methods to propagate undermining the Supreme Court. Even though, as he says, only about 5 per cent of the population voted on the adoption of the Federal Constitution, he must acknowledge that that 5 per cent was a very intelligent and homogeneous group of men who had, for many years, waged sanguinary war and risked their lives and possessions to attain the ultimate aim they sought—not absolute liberty, because there is no such thing; not absolute equality, because there is no such thing; not a utopia, because there is no such thing; but a "way of life" that gave some hope of checks and balances in every phase of the "more abundant life."

There was no pretensions on the part of Washington, Franklin, Madison, and the other leaders too numerous to mention by name, that the Constitution they created was ideal. Far from it—few of them, in fact, thought the Constitution and the Nation would long endure. Yet, today, it is the oldest constitution in the world, and in all probability the nearest to an "absolute democracy" in the world. And the Nation, under this Constitution, is the wealthiest in the world and offers greater opportunities to the adventurous and ambitious and worthy, than any other nation under any other form of government.

I do not believe that Mr. Ernst would care to go on record as saying the run of the mill men of today equal in quality the men who voted to create our Constitution. Numbers, mere numbers, I am sure he would agree are of no special moment in the progress of a given civilization, or necessary to the creation of a workable constitution for a people. Rather, I should judge Mr. Ernst would be one of the first to insist on quality rather than number—this is true of books, as Mr. Ernst would acknowledge, since he has written one of quality.

Reply To A Republican.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your issue of February 8, "A Republican" concludes that his party "will return to power and continue to run the affairs of this Government for long years after the so-called brain trusters have batted out what few brains they have in padded cells."

May I suggest that it was this kind of spirit that lost the Republicans their votes and lost them wholesale. It didn't contrast well with the spirit of the Democratic standard bearer who, Christlike, ignored their malevolence and continued about the business of trying to bring some measure of peace and security in a changing world.

A man who has been a Republican all his life said, recently, that he voted Democratic in 1936, "not because of anything the Democrats said but because of the kind of things the Republicans said. Mere mud-slinging doesn't do much except make the slingee look ridiculous.

Virginia's Sympathy.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Since I wrote you some weeks ago inquiring if it was an old Virginia custom to let the needy poor die for want of hospital care, I have found that some localities near Washington are not indifferent to suffering.

Fairfax County paid part of the hospital bill for the woman I wrote about (which was an even greater relief to my mind than to my pocketbook) and she is now convalescing at home.

We can be very thankful for what already has been done, but much still needs doing. Arlington County, for example, cannot get a sick child into Children's Hospital because the county authorities make no provision for financial assistance of needy cases.

The kindness of heart of individual Virginians is above question, but the civic conscience needs to be aroused in some instances if the future of the Old Dominion is to be as glorious as its past.

Punch Drunk

Edward J. Carroll, M. D., in the American Journal of the Medical Sciences.

As a medical student I became interested in a condition common among boxers, to which they refer as "punch-drunk," "goofy," "slap happy," "cutting paper dolls" or "slug nutty." To study that condition in its natural habitat I frequented training quarters, helped to examine fighters, made friends with all sorts of "pugs," talked with their trainers and interviewed boxing commission physicians. I sought out reputed "punch-drunks" and studied them.

In the severer cases the voice may become thick, halting and gutural, as though there were something held in the mouth. The gait may become unsteady. In a few instances vision may begin to fail or some degree of deafness may appear. Involuntary habit movements of a boxing nature are common, and are frequently displayed, even years later, when the person is abstractly preoccupied or during periods of emotional stress. A punch-drunk, sitting as a spectator at a fight, may vigorously ape the blows of his friend in the ring. Punch-drunks almost universally do not realize that there is anything abnormal about themselves or their conduct, and will hotly resent, often with their fists, any application of this stigma to themselves.

The more intelligent boxers are alert to recognize even early manifestations. The incident which precipitated Gene Tunney's decision to retire occurred during training for the second Dempsey fight. Tunney writes, "I went into a clinch with my head down, and my partner's head came up and butted me over the left eye, cutting and dazing me badly. Then he stepped back and swung his right against my jaw with every bit of his power. It landed flush and stiffened me where I stood. Without going down or staggering, I lost all consciousness, but instinctively proceeded to knock him out. Another sparring partner, Eddie Eagan, entered the ring; we boxed three rounds. I have no recollection of this, nor have I any recollection of anything that occurred until the next morning when I awakened, wondering who I was and what I was doing there."

For the next three days Tunney was dazed and disoriented. He continues, "From that incident was born my desire to quit the ring forever. I wanted to leave the game before I met with an accident in a real fight with six-ounce gloves that would permanently hurt my brain. The possibility of becoming punch-drunk haunted me for weeks." But the majority of boxers do not have this insight. They will continue to fight until they become so ineffectual that promoters refuse to book them. Some fighters, usually from economic necessity, will then enlist as sparring partners and receive further punishment.

The type of boxer is a large factor in the likelihood of punch-drunk development. It is most often seen in the wide-open slugging type of fighter who is out to give as much as he can, and thus usually takes quite a lot in return. It is rarer in cleverer boxers who have good defenses. Competent followers of the sport estimate that about 60 per cent of fighters remaining in the ring for five years will develop mental and emotional changes which are obvious to people who knew them previously. A few deteriorate to such an extent that institutionalization is necessary.

Punch-drunk is said to occur among professional football players also. It is probable that no head blow is taken with impunity, and that any knockout, from whatever cause, results in irreparable damage. It is important that athletes entering into competitions in which head injuries are frequent and knockouts are common should realize that they are exposing themselves not only to immediate injury but also to remote and more sinister effects.

Foreign Post.

The resident correspondent abroad! How patient he is with such superficial, hasty visitors as I, who often have but the slenderest claim upon his time and push that claim to its very limit! How cheerful he lets us pick his brains and then pontificate, over our own signatures, on the basis of the stolen goods! How herbically he arranges for us interviews with government officials who obviously endure our inquisition solely as a personal favor to their dear friend, Walter, or Edgar, or John! How hospitably they buy us meals, although by every law of reason it is we who should underwrite their restaurant bills for a month! How zealous they are in explaining to us the undesirability of the Black Bourse, the wisdom of registering all valuta at the next frontier, the pointed indiscretion of carrying Fascist journals into a Communist country, or vice versa! With what unsmiling courtesy they act as nurse, tutor and cicerone to innocent wanderers badly in need of such a functionary!

Fair Enough

Indiana's Governor.

CLIFFORD TOWNSEND, the Governor of Indiana, is a Hoosier of the popular old pattern. He was a poor kid, a farmer, who learned a little, taught a little, studied some more, taught a little more and so forth, buying and selling education after the manner of an old-time pack peddler until he got through college. He is a farmer by trade and disposition, and his personal style is somewhat like that of Alf Landon, of Kansas. He succeeded Paul McNutt, the professional war veteran, a prancing show horse on the order of Gov. Earle of Pennsylvania, and his first month in office has brought two great emergencies, the flood and the labor trouble in the Guide Lamp plant in Anderson.

Gov. Townsend called out all the troops and sailors of the Indiana National Guard and Naval Militia to handle the flood in the cities and towns along the Ohio, but that was easy. The river was a common enemy in that mood, and though some people didn't want to leave their homes, boil their drinking water or get off the streets at night and thought it a lot of pestiferous nonsense to have to explain to some kid in uniform why they wanted to go down Elm street, a Governor could make no serious enemies there. Most of the people realized that the flood was too big to be handled without discipline, and the armed forces came through without friction because they didn't have to get rough.

EVEN WHILE the flood was on, however, the Governor was fretting about the situation in Anderson, for Indiana is a vigilante State at heart and the idea of a lot of men being thrown out of a job by a strike of a comparative few was not accepted by the many. In Indiana some people at least have quit pretending and now speak of the opposition to the C. I. O. frankly as the Fascists. Then, while some of the guardsmen were still sticking around the river watching the ruin come up out of the water, there came a blow-off in Anderson, the Governor got a call for help from the mayor and martial law was slapped down on the entire county.

Now there will be yells of bloody murder because the soldiers turned back the union reinforcements sent down from Michigan to take a hand in anything that might be going on, and the Hoosier schoolmaster may wish he were back teaching basketball, which seems to be the most popular study in the Indiana curriculum these days.

It probably is a great outrage to bar from a troubled zone people who may reasonably be suspected of ornery intentions, but that is the way things have been going in these free States for some time. When it is a matter of money for relief, local improvements and local public pay rolls the U. S. A. is all one great big nation and State lines are imaginary. But California, Colorado and Florida have imposed interstate immigration restrictions, with money as the only qualification for entry and a desire for honest work a proof of sinister purpose; New York exacts an extra income tax from Americans who work here but live in the adjacent suburbs of New Jersey and Connecticut; and many States impose exorbitant charges on Americans from other cities for the use of their roads in transit.

In Indiana, at least, Gov. Townsend will discover wide approval of anything he may have to do to exclude a rush of people schooled in the arts of martyrdom to a town where trouble already had boiled over.

MR. TOWNSEND spent a night in French Lick on his tour of the flood country. West Baden, next door, was the Compiegne of the flood, with warmth, good food and comfort, and Maj. Gen. Tyndall, the Marshal Foch of the situation, as you might say, with a guard division extending down in Kentucky, had made his headquarters there on roads giving access to all points along the front. However, they shied from French Lick itself because the place is a resort which bespeaks luxury, pleasure and roulette at Brown's. It was the closed season, to be sure, but Indiana associates the name of Spa with frivolity, so the guard officers kept pretty well to their own side of the line.

The job of Governor will not conform to Farmer Townsend's early vision of the estate of the people's choice, but he is still young and strong and, come what may, he can always go back to his land.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips.

Primer For Americans.

Court—An institution formerly holding, and believed even in Washington, to be entitled to hold the respect of all the people.

Employer—A man necessarily in the wrong; a substitute for the usual target in political archery exhibitions.

Factory—An establishment in which the presence of the owners is optional with the workers.

Business—Any criminal procedure; an endeavor engaged in by persons held to be wrong until proven right; a field occupied wholly by the petty, selfish and dishonorable element as opposed to the big-hearted, eminently fair and conspicuously honest.

• • • •

Judiciary—Any group of old-fashioned men qualified to interpret the laws of the land; a body of jurists whose opinions are now held to rate slightly below the comic strips in humor.

Sheriff—An officer of the law who no longer believes even in his own badge.

Exploiter—Any man who saved up some money, went into business for himself and has to keep going because it costs too much to try bankruptcy.

Labor Leader—A man who once took a chance on being held to be wrong but who no longer has to consider that aspect.

Industrialist—A man who is behind the eight ball and whose presence there would be opposed if there were any suspicion that he was comfortable there.

• • • •

Law—Obsolete. (See bustles and pug-dogs.)
Ordeal—Ask dad; he knows.

• • • •

Success—Something considered to have been achieved after the plant has been wrecked, the police repulsed and the innocent bystander run over by the ambulance.

Victory—Any result that leaves both sides in the emergency ward, muttering incoherently and managing to blurt through the bandages now and then, "Know who I am? I'm Napoleon!"

Deadlock—A situation in which everybody is pretty miserable except the newsreel photographers, the politicians and the pawnbrokers.

Wheels of Industry—Rims with the spokes extracted by baffled orators who have substituted a grapefruit for the hub and can't understand why it won't stay in.

Recovery—Help! It's back again!

Europe Looks Across

Geneva Correspondent Reports League Circles Generally Gratified Over Buenos Aires Conference.

By Bertram Pickard
Special Correspondence of The Post.

WHEN, a little more than a year ago, President Roosevelt launched his plan for a Pan-American conference, the following remark particularly caught our eye here in Geneva: "These steps furthermore would advance the cause of world peace, inasmuch as the agreements which might be reached would supplement and reinforce the efforts of the League of Nations."

The Buenos Aires conference has come and gone, and although it has not been easy, on account of varying reports and appraisals both of the letter and spirit of what was achieved, to assess its deliberations and decisions, it is possible, nevertheless, to make some estimate of the influence the conference might have upon the question of League reform now in the hands of the League Committee of Twenty-eight.

In reading the accounts of the conference one was impressed with the spirit of good will and mutual confidence that prevailed at Buenos Aires. One writer spoke of it as a "family spirit of warm, almost affectionate, co-operation."

It is easy to understand, moreover, the prime ingredients of this atmosphere; the relative absence of those deep-seated national and imperial rivalries with which Europe is cursed, and, positively, that "good neighbor" policy not only persuasively preached, but disarmingly practiced by a President and Secretary of State who mean business.

Warm Atmosphere Envied By Geneva.

HAPPY AMERICA: Geneva was once famed for its "atmosphere." But one has to go back to the famous Fifth Assembly of 1924 (the Geneva Protocol year) to match the family feeling of Buenos Aires.

But a European, while rejoicing that there is a belt of relative sanity on the distracted planet, may perhaps venture to point to that fly in the ointment represented by the intractable Chaco affair; and to draw the conclusion that, even with the scales weighted to favor pacific behavior, the American continent can hardly be said to be leading the world in the veritable organization of international peace through the creation of appropriate institutions to deal with conflicts and their underlying causes.

Reflecting upon the results of Buenos Aires in relation to the work of League reform, the second thing that strikes the Geneva observer is the wide difference between what was projected and what realized.

Looked at from the Geneva angle, the suggestion of a permanent Pan-American consultative committee, had it materialized, would have presented a new and complicating factor to the Committee of Twenty-eight when it came to discuss anew the vexed question of "aggression" and its definition.

Again, the further suggestion that all the American republics should pursue a common policy of non-discriminatory "neutrality" in the event of war, had it been accepted, would have run counter to fundamental obligations of the Covenant.

Collective Security Seen Now Recognized.

IF IT WERE simply and solely a question of keeping out of war, such a policy would be easy to comprehend. But, since the virtual extension of the Monroe Doctrine from a unilateral to a multilateral basis would seem to imply the intention, incertain circumstances, to take joint and common measures of defense, it would appear that the principle of collective security through mutual assistance was in fact recognized, for the American region at least.

If this be so, then a distinction, apparently, is drawn between an aggressor and his victim—the very distinction, that is to say, which the League system does make, and which is also implicit in the Kellogg-Briand pact.

As further evidence that such a distinction appears to have been in the minds of statesmen at Buenos Aires, one notes that, in the final declaration, the principle that war as an instrument of national policy is outlawed, in the Americas at least, was restated; while the nonrecognition of conquests of territory by force—a principle of universal application—was adhere to, despite its dubious efficacy in the Manchurian and Abyssinian conflicts.

Having noted what look like conflicting tendencies, Geneva naturally rejoices that at Buenos Aires the rapprochement of the American republics was not exclusive of other countries and continents. Particular pleasure is felt here concerning the support given by the conference to the policy of reciprocal trade arrangements on a most-favored-nation clause basis, so effectively sponsored by Secretary Hull.

Similarly, Geneva cannot but be glad that Argentina, together with some other League members, keut to the front at Buenos Aires the conception of world-wide solidarity and of the idivisibility of peace under modern conditions—a doctrine which Signor Mussolnii ridiculed in his Milan speech last November. While regret is expressed that the energetic attempt of Saavedra Lamas, both at Geneva and Buenos Aires, to co-ordinate peace machinery under the Covenant, Kellogg Pact and Argentine antiwar pact, respectively, should have met with no better success than postponement of discussion of this question until 1938, which will inevitably slow up consideration of the same theme at Geneva.

Regrets Mixed With Satisfaction In Geneva.

IF ONE has ventured to mix regrets with satisfaction, and to mingle with appreciation what, in Washington, may read like criticism, it is only because he is so acutely aware of the dangers arising from the divisibility of the peace forces in the world today.

Whatever may be said—and Signor Mussolini has not been slow to say it—concerning the special territorial and other advantages enjoyed by the United States, the fact that a state with paramount power has of its own choice turned from a policy of intervention and interference in the affairs of weaker neighbors, to take the lead in promoting good understanding and co-operative relationships, is a historic event of immense significance.

Although, in the present phase of human development, coercive power is doubtless destined to play a major role, in the last analysis the issue between peace and war will be fought out in the realm of ideas. At bottom, the issue is between those who think mankind incapable of creating conditions of permanent and constructive peace, and those who hold this faith.

That "family atmosphere" at Buenos Aires—so largely attributable to the proponents of the conference—is the sine qua non of true peace making.

Geneva, with infinitely more difficult problems to selve, is deprived of the spirit of peace because the concept of "good neighbor" is at a discount in so many of the capitals of the great powers, while some of the chief states in the world neighborhood are absent.

To think that Europe can work out its own salvation without American co-operation, or that the Americas can live to themselves without reference to Europe and its empires is surely delusive in the twentieth century.

The two continents are neighbors, willy nilly. That they should become good neighbors is perhaps the supreme task of contemporary statesmanship. The problem should be considered objectively on both sides of the Atlantic, and apart from any pre-conceived notions as to what this new neighborliness might involve in the way of institutional relationships.

Off the Record.

Baltic Bloc

By Barnet Nover

Russia Strengthens A Barrier.

CLOSE ON the heels of the visit to Moscow of Dr. Rudolf Holsti, Finland's foreign minister, Marshal A. I. Yegoroff, chief of staff of the Russian army, has left for a tour of certain Baltic capitals. In the next days he is to visit Kaunas, Riga and Tallinn, respectively the capitals of Lithuania, Latvia and Esthonia.

That there is an interlocking relationship between these courtesy trips, the Baltic situation and the situation in Europe generally is not subject to doubt. Whatever their ultimate success may be they clearly constitute on the part of the Soviet Union the latest manifestation of a persistent effort to safeguard itself against a flank attack by Germany. On the part of the little Baltic republics, on the other hand, they reflect a determination to avoid becoming the battleground of a war between giants.

The readiness of Finland and of the Baltic States to accept Moscow's olive branches does not mean that they have any desire to serve as the catspaw of Russia. But they are no less determined not to become, willy-nilly, the catspaw of Germany. However, at the moment, Russia's European policy is distinctly peaceful and defensive, while that of the Third Reich appears to be, in some of its manifestations, expansionist and warlike. Thus, there is a much stronger inclination on the part of the Baltic republics to draw closer to Moscow than to Berlin.

THAT RUSSO-GERMAN war about which so much has been written during the last few days, and the possibility of which has brought a complete reorientation of Russia's foreign policy, does not appear to be in the realm of immediate possibilities. The Russians, certainly, do not want it. They have plenty to keep them busy at home and for many years to come. As for Germany, it does not appear to be at this time in a position to launch an attack on the Soviet Union.

Such an attack could only be made possible through the co-operation or the willing or unwilling acquiescence of one or more of the intervening states. To get at Russia, the German army would have to cross the territory of Poland or attack either by way of Lithuania-Latvia-Esthonia or Czechoslovakia-Rumania. None of the six states involved has any intention of permitting its soil to be used as a jumping-off place for a German plunge into Russia.

Yet the fact remains that the idea of Germany's expansion to the east, that is at the expense of Russia, finds expression in the Nazi bible, "Mein Kampf," in the writings of Alfred Rosenberg, Nazi cultural director who is himself a German of Baltic origin, and in the outpourings of other Nazi leaders. It is the unavoidable implication to be drawn from the violent verbal assaults made on the Soviet Union and its leaders at the Nuremberg Congress and on other occasions since. Thus, no nation, least of all Russia, is ruling out a German-Russia war as entirely a figment of the imagination.

FOR SOME TIME Germany has been carrying on intensive propaganda in the Baltic States with a view to making Nazi influence predominant in that region, or at least preventing a rapprochement between those states and Russia.

These efforts have not been without success. There exists in these border nations, all formerly part of the old czarist empire, a deep dislike of communism and a distrust of Russia. But the Baltic States and Finland have no desire to join any anti-Communist front such as Germany has been seeking to establish in Europe and, by so doing, incurring the hostility of Russia, which, without reason, views the German plan as primarily anti-Russian rather than anti-Communist.

Since the enforced isolation of the Soviet Union was broken, after the period of war, revolution and foreign intervention, Moscow has managed to live on good terms with non-Communist and even virulently anti-Communist nations such as Turkey and Italy. It has recently established alliances with capitalistic democracies such as Czechoslovakia and France.

LIKE POLAND, whose geographical position between Germany and Russia they share, if not to the same extent, the Baltic States and Finland find themselves between the devil and the deep blue sea. They would like nothing better than to keep both at arm's length.

This happens to coincide with Russia's policy which regards a chain of independent buffer states as a barrier against potential German aggression. Whether it also coincides with German policy is not so clear. Perhaps it does, too. Certainly it has been a great convenience for the Third Reich at a time of grave economic stress and strain to be able to launch a devastating verbal attack on Moscow without any danger that Russia would be provoked into warlike retaliation. In any case while the Baltic republics have been alarmed by the Russo-German campaign of vituperation, they prefer it to a real war between those powers since, in such a war, they might be in the line of direct fire.

ON THE OCCASION of his visit to Moscow, the Finnish foreign minister assured the Soviet leaders that his nation has no desire to join any combination directed against Russia. No doubt, Marshal Yegoroff will seek similar assurances from the statesmen of Lithuania, Latvia and Esthonia. With Germany and Italy at present preoccupied in Spain, where they hope to establish a Fascist state before Great Britain and France feel themselves strong enough to call Berlin and Rome to account, Russia is letting no grass grow under its feet in its own immediate area.

Good relations with the Baltic republics is an essential link in the Soviet security system. Those nations, too, favor amity with their powerful neighbor to the east. And fortunately, there is an excellent peg on which such friendship can be hung without seeming to constitute any anti-German orientation. That peg is the League of Nations. For as members of the League, Russia, Finland, Lithuania, Esthonia and Latvia are already committed to a program of friendship and nonaggression. These commitments they are now prepared to renew through bilateral conversations.

Eugene Walter

By William Lyon Phelps

His Plays.

In accounts of the twentieth century theater in America, one does not often see much mention made of Eugene Walter; and I suppose, from the purely literary point of view, his plays would not be regarded as masterpieces. But in sheer theatrical effectiveness they were so stunning that I should like to see them revived. Of the hundreds and hundreds of plays that I have seen all over Europe and America, there are not many that I remember with such distinctness as two by Mr. Walter. They must have possessed vitality to make such a lasting impression on my mind. I can easily recall every scene in them from beginning to end, though I have not heard them for many years and have never read them.

One day in New Haven, when my younger colleague in the English department at Yale, Prof. George H. Nettleton, was taking luncheon at my house, an undergraduate came in and began with almost breathless excitement to beg us to go to the matinee, which was due to begin in half an hour. "Why," said he, "some of us saw the first performance last night, and we sat up till dawn discussing it. You must see it!" I told him that if any play kept undergraduates up all night discussing it, I would not miss it for anything.

Accordingly, George Nettleton and I went to the theater. It was a miserably small audience, but that made no depressing effect on the actors. The name of the play was "The Easiest Way," and young Frances Starr was magnificent. I can see her and hear her voice as plainly as if I were in the theater now. The poignancy of the tragedy was almost intolerable.

The play was taken to New York and, despite the scorn of William Winter, it ran for a whole season. It deserved to. The fact that it took Mr. Winter a whole column to say he hated it proved something.

Text of Minton Court Plan Plea

In his inaugural address January 20, 1937, the President of the United States said: "I see one-third of a Nation ill-clad, ill-housed and ill-nourished." He was talking about this Nation, not some other.

Congress passed legislation recognizing the right of labor to collective bargaining. Certain captains of industry said that's not constitutional. We won't obey it. Laborers struck for the principle and sat down in the factories to protect their jobs. A court said this was unlawful. Result: Employer and employe are at war. A strike is settled here only to have one break out yonder.

Congress passed legislation to extend to farming, the largest industry in the Nation, aid in its bankrupt and prostrate condition, such as the Government had been extending to manufacturing for 75 years, only to discover that it could help big business, but under our Constitution, as viewed by a majority of the Supreme Court, we couldn't help the farmer.

'Maldistribution of Wealth Evident.'

That there is a maldistribution of wealth in the Nation is evident when we recall that 3 per cent of the people own 97 per cent of its wealth. When legislation is proposed by Congress in an effort to meet some of the problems of poverty, bankruptcy on the farm, capital and labor, and the restribution of wealth, we find it cannot be done. Men and women who ask only the right to live by their work in comfort, and enjoy some luxuries, find themselves frustrated and their Government powerless to help them. This is the picture that confronts us today.

In such a predicament we survey our governmental situation and find a Congress and President freshly returned from an election in which the people expressed approval with what had been done and gave their mandate to go ahead. The President and Congress are willing to go ahead, but they are unable to do so. Why? Because the Supreme Court by decisions, more often than not by a divided court, says Congress has not the power to do the things it believes necessary to do. Under our system of government, as it now operates, five men on the Supreme Court have an absolute veto power over the legislative policy of the people's elected representatives. Five men on that court exercise more power than 435 Congressmen, 96 Senators and the President, and that in a field where they have no restraint except that imposed by their own conscience.

If you were given an opportunity to do so, would you vote to put all the power of government in the hands of five men? Would you do it where you had nothing to do with the selection of any of the men? Would you do it where you have no power to remove them? However, that is exactly what has happened in this country under our constitutional development. This tremendous power lies in the hands of five men, who constitute a majority of the Supreme Court. This awful power should not rest in the hands of any five men. I go further and say that no five men should want it.

'Government a System Of Checks, Balances.'

Let us recall the nature of our Government and the scheme of it. Our Government is set up on a system of checks and balances. Congress checks the President, the President checks the Congress with his veto and the people, every two and four years, check both Congress and the President in an election, but who checks the Supreme Court? They are not elected by the people; they are nominated by the President and confirmed by the Senate, and when confirmed they hold office for life or during good behavior. There isn't a check upon their power, save their own conscience, and your Constitution, in the words of Chief Justice Hughes, means just what the judges say it is. They are independent of the people.

In discussing the power of the Court, Thomas Jefferson once said: "It should be remembered as an axiom of eternal truth in politics, that whatever power in any government is independent, is absolute also." (Jefferson to Roane, September 6, 1819, Vol. 7, 134). Today the veto power of the Supreme Court is absolute. If our Government was set up on a system of three co-ordinate branches, executive, legislative and judiciary, and it was, then we are woefully out of balance on the side of the court.

A proposal is made to redress this balance of power. The proposal envisages the whole of the Federal judiciary, but I shall discuss it in relation to the retirement of judges from the Supreme Court only. Here it is: The Supreme Court is now composed of a Chief Justice, and eight associates, nine members in all. The President has proposed that Congress enact legislation providing that where judges have been on the Supreme Court ten years, and have reached 70 years of age, they may retire, and if such judge, or judges, does not choose to retire, the President is authorized to appoint an additional judge, with the limitation that the size of the Supreme Court does not at any time exceed 15. It may never reach 15. If judges 70 or over retire, their place is filled and the size of the court remains the same, but their vacancies are filled with younger and more vigorous men.

If the judges 70 and over do not retire, they cannot be forced to retire, and in that case the President is authorized to appoint an additional judge. This might extend to a court of 15, and enable the President to appoint 6 of the 15 judges. This can happen only if judges 70 and older do not retire. Please remember the proposed plan does not compel a single judge now on the Supreme Court to retire. Neither does it change the Constitution or the power the court now exercises under the Constitution.

'Judges Reflect Views of Appointer.'

From the earliest day to the present time, the President, who appointed the judges later to be confirmed by the Senate, saw to it that judges who reflected their views were appointed. Marshall was a Federalist politician appointed as much on that account as on account of his great ability. When Lincoln appointed Chase Chief Justice, he said: "We wish for a Chief Justice who will sustain what has been done in regard to emancipation, and the legal tenders." (Boutwel, Vol. II, 29). This great American had no delusions about the power of the Supreme Court, or what he ought to do about appointments to the court.

The proposal embodied in the bill pending is not new. In 1869 the lower House of Congress passed a bill by a vote of 90 to 53 in almost identical terms with the pending bill, but the Senate rejected it. While Attorney General of the United States, Justice McReynolds, now a member of the Supreme Court, and later Chief Justice Taft each recommended this identical kind of legislation to retire all Federal judges at 70 except the Supreme Court.

If it is a good thing for the lower courts, why isn't it good for the Supreme Court? Why except the Supreme Court? This strange discrimination continues in the discussion today. No one seems to object to the application of this proposed legislation to all Federal judges except the Supreme Court. Several times Congress has used its power to increase or decrease the size of the Supreme Court to meet the problems of the day. Lincoln, much concerned about the constitutionality of the acts of his Administration, had the court increased from nine to ten, to enable him to put a powerful friend on the court. Thus the size of the court was the largest under Lincoln.

But Congress, fearing that Andrew Johnson might get a chance to fill a vacancy on that aging court, reduced the size of the court from ten to seven by providing that no vacancy should be filled until the court reached seven. Then, just as soon as Grant was in office, Congress promptly increased the court, which in the meantime had been diminished to eight, back to nine, and with the retirement of Judge Grier for infirmity, Grant had two places to fill on the court, and he filled them with judges known to favor the legal tender acts. The constitutionality of those acts was the burning issue of that day. The very day he appointed these two judges, the Supreme Court, by a vote of 5 to 3, held the legal tender acts unconstitutional. But with these two new judges on the court, the cases were all reargued and opened up, and the opinion holding the legal tender acts unconstitutional, rendered a few months before, was reversed and the two new judges appointed by Grant did it.

Does anyone today condemn Grant for appointing to the court two judges who were known by him to favor the legal tender acts, and thereby enabling the court to sustain the policy of the Administration by reversing itself?

'Size of Court Changed Six Times.'

The Supreme Court has had its size changed six times in its history, and it was charged that each change was dictated by politics.

But it is said these were not large changes. Let me remind you that in the days gone by they changed the size of the court enough to meet their problem. If it was all right to change the size of the court by two to help Grant, and by three to thwart Johnson, what's wrong with changing it five, if necessary, to help Roosevelt meet his problems?

Congress took away the right to appeal to the Supreme Court in order that its reconstruction acts after the Civil War might not have to meet the test of constitutionality. In recommending a change in the size of the court, the President has ample authority in our Nation's history, not only in his own party, but more notably in the Republican Party.

The proposal to retire judges at 70 is in keeping with the policy of the Government and private industry. In the Army and Navy, where the officers are trained at Government expense, we force them to retire at 64. In civil service we force them to retire at 70. Many States require their judges to retire at 70. In private industry many great corporations, like the Pennsylvania Railroad, force their executives to retire at 70. Indeed, the Supreme Court of the United States is the only group I know of that passes upon their own adequacy to serve. Chief Justice Hughes once wrote a book about the Supreme Court and in this book he said: "I agree that the importance in the Supreme Court of avoiding the risk of having judges who are unable properly to do their work and yet insist on remaining on the bench is too great to permit chances to be taken, and any age selected must be somewhat arbitrary, as the time of the failing in mental power differs widely. The exigency to be thought of is not illness, but decreptitude."

'Voters Pass on Congressmen.'

Someone has suggested that if the judges are to be retired at 70, why not Congressmen? The answer to that is simple. His fitness to sit is submitted to the people every two or six years at an election, but the judges never have to submit to election. They alone pass on their own fitness. I believe in elderly men in Government, but not a government by elderly men only.

Out on the farm in Indiana the other night, by the lamplight, an humble farmer constituent of mine, took his scratch pad and pencil and wrote me that he thought about this proposition. It seemed to me to express so dispassionately and fairly the voice of the kind of people he represented and whose voices are too often unheard, that I am going to read it to you. He said: "It might be advisable to have some men on the court who are old and rich in wisdom and experience to give it balance and restraint, but it is certainly not in the public interest to have such a large majority so old they do not seem to be able to adjust themselves to the needs of the present time and are therefore able to block any progress made to meet those needs. We cannot remedy conditions by ignoring them."

It is suggested that the bill encourages dictatorship. Let us see. If the bill passed, the President can nominate, but the Senate has to confirm. That is check number one on dictatorship. And the President and Senate have to answer to the people; that is check number two. After a judge is appointed he is there for life or good behavior; that is check number three. Check number four is the honor and integrity of President Roosevelt in whom you and I have confidence.

'Roosevelt Qualified To Select Justices.'

It is said that this is an attempt to pack the court! How do we find the court today? It is packed now by appointees of Administrations gone and repudiated. Do you think these Administrations are more entitled to pack the court than President Roosevelt? Do you think that Harding, Coolidge or Hoover were qualified to pick judges for the Supreme Court but Roosevelt is not? I think the court is already packed, and this bill would unpack it. As I view it, in addition to aiding the court in its work, a matter too often lost sight of in the passionate discussion of this bill, the principal effect this bill would have would be to bring new energy and thought to the Supreme Court. I cannot believe this undesirable. In answer to this argument about packing the court I take the liberty of quoting from Mr. Raymond Clapper, one of the most brilliant columnists of the day:

"In four years Roosevelt has had no opportunity to appoint a single member of the court . . . He is trying to speed up the appointments which in all probability he otherwise would have the opportunity to make before his second term is over, and thus eventually reverse the balance of the court. But then it would be too late for him to deal with matters that need attention now. It happens that Congress has clear constitutional authority to do this. The question is one of ethics. Roosevelt proposes to take advantage of the technical power of Congress in the same way that the court and opponents of his program have taken advantage of their technical opportunities under judicial procedure. That is not idealism. It is meeting practical opposition in a practical way, as everyone has to do at times in this world, or weakly resign himself to futility. Squeamish pedants will say Roosevelt should sit with folded hands. Practical persons prefer results to vain theorizing about hypothetical perfection."

It has been suggested that a Constitutional amendment is the proper way. Of course, this suggestion comes loudest from those who would not support such an amendment. But why an amendment, since this method is clearly within the Constitution, and whatever the Constitution provides is certainly American? Why seek more power if we already have the power to meet a situation? The way of amendment, like that of the transgressor, is hard. Witness the child labor amendment! For 13 years it has been wandering in the wilderness, and still lacks nine States of being an authorized amendment.

'Constitution Can Be Amended.'

There is nothing in the pending bill that would keep us from amending the Constitution after the bill passes. Let us have an amendment, but we must have action now. We don't believe we should be required to wait 15 or 20 years on a prospect of action. In order to befuddle the issue the same people who in the recent election cried "dictator," "stand by the court," "beware of communism," now make the same hue and cry. They would have the people believe that this is an attempt of the President to sieze additional power. The truth of the matter is that the President has only joined hands with Congress in its fight to prevent the Supreme Court, under the guise of interpreting the Constitution, from dictating the legislative policy of the Government. If you think the Supreme Court hasn't done so, you read the dissenting opinions of the justices of the Supreme Court for the last 50 years. I urge you to recall your history. Three times in the history of this country, excluding the recent history seen without the perspective of time, the Supreme Court has collided with the avowed policy of Congress, and three times the verdict of history has been against the court. I refer to the Dred Scott decision, reversed by a bloody civil war; the legal tender decision, reversed within a year by the court itself after its complexion had been changed, and the income tax case, reversed by an amendment after years of effort.

The greatest Presidents in this Nation's history, developed in the stress of great emergencies, have been at grips with the power of the court, as they sought to serve the masses of the common people and found their purpose thwarted by the opinions of the court. Jefferson, Jackson, Lincoln and Theodore Roosevelt have been confronted with the issue, and never faltered. President Roosevelt today meets with constitutional power the same challenge, in a courageous effort, not to destroy your Government, but to make it work for the masses of the people.

Who among you believe that the President of the United States who stood by you in the darkest hours that ever dawned in peace time in America, and saved you and this country from God knows what suffering and distress, is now your enemy, a traitor to you, his countrymen, and scheming and plotting to get power into his hands to injure you?

This is no effort on the part of the President to steal power unto himself. In less than four short years such power as you so enthusiastically gave him by your vote of confidence last November will be returned to you. I have faith in him to believe that when that time shall come you will find him no traitor to you or the best interests of your beloved country.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Her Self-Confidence Shaken by Inability to Hold Beaux for Long, Girl Asks What to Do.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl in my mid-twenties, not pretty, but considered stylish looking and well dressed. It seems all my life I've been lonely for the right sort of friends. I have them for a while; they appear interested, and then pass away. I try to appear indifferent but it has cost me many heartaches and much wondering. These men I find attractive are not my intellectual or social superiors and so I am wondering where the trouble lies.

• • • •

I've tried a change of locality but it's the same old story. I'm beginning to lose my self-confidence and am very unhappy. I believe I need to take some constructive action beginning with myself, regarding my personality, perhaps. Won't you suggest something, Miss Haworth? UNATTRACTIVE.

• • • •

DEAR UNATTRACTIVE: Your experience is not so unique as you may imagine. Nearly every girl goes through the same series of ups and down in her social relationships with men until she either marries or reaches the age when she is no longer romantically interested in or attractive to the opposite sex. Any girl of average attractions living in Washington, however, should realize from the start that the cards are slightly stacked against her with regard to beaux, for the obvious reason that women here outnumber men by at least three to one. Therefore, she should strive to condition herself against an almost involuntary tendency to distrust her charms when she loses an erstwhile beau to a newcomer on the scene.

• • • •

Don't forget that "as (a man) thinketh in his heart, so is he." Since you have wisely decided to inaugurate constructive action within your own personality, let the first of your new resolutions be the determination never to think of yourself and never to designate yourself as unattractive or not pretty. Lynn Fontaine, that strangely beguiling stage star, was once quoted as saying that "beauty begins with an inner conviction of loveliness," and I believe that truer words were never spoken.

• • • •

You say that all your life you've been lonely for the right sort of friends. This loneliness may have taken the form of a conviction that you would never find them, rather than the conviction that they exist and can be found or molded out of material at hand. The late John Burroughs wrote a poem called "Waiting," in which he affirmed the conviction that "awake, asleep, by night or day, the friends I seek are seeking me. No wind can drive their bark astray or change the tide of destiny."

• • • •

Desire to achieve a certain state of being and confidence that it shall be attained are powerful agents for bringing it about. Such an attitude of mind creates a certain serenity of spirit which is particularly effective in winning and holding friends. Perhaps if you were to take the attentions of your men friends a little more for granted from the very first they might last longer. Perhaps you try too hard to "cinch the deal," as it were, and drive them away by your very straining.

• • • •

Or your trouble could be on a more material plane, of course. Perhaps you haven't the facilities or the knack for casual, comfortable entertaining of the sort that appeals to men. For instance, suppose a man asks you to dinner or the theater two or three times. After that, it is usually very effective, supposing he calls you again, to suggest that he have supper at your house instead of dining out. Or you might telephone him and suggest he drop in for cocktails or tea of a Sunday afternoon to meet one or two other friends—or more, if you have a larger circle of acquaintances and can afford the entertaining. The idea is to accept him as a friend, in a casual sort of way, instead of allowing the relationship to fall into the rather prim and formal category of "courting."

• • • •

Perhaps you are afraid to be really friendly in your attitude toward your beaux, lest they think you have designs on them. But it is the essence of tact and finesse for a woman to act on the assumption that a man's addresses toward her are purely friendly, to be met with reciprocal friendliness. It usually helps, too, to have more than one man on the string at a time, as this supports one's unspoken claims to attractiveness and the ability to keep friends, as well as relieves each man of any apprehension that his suit may be taken more seriously than he intends. If a man feels that his presence is welcome, but his absence scarcely missed, he may drift away for a time, even for a period of months and turn up again as ardent as ever. But if he feels he had to break the friendship to get away, he never returns, as a rule.

• • • •

Two books I have often recommended may help you to get a better slant on yourself and your situation. These are Donald Laird's "Why We Don't Like People" and Lucius Humphrey's "It Shall Be Done Unto You." The first deals with the mechanics of social relationships and the latter with the proper mental approach to any desired objective. M. H.

Work Miracles With Colors

ARE you struggling in vain to get a certain atmosphere or decorative effect in your house? Look to your color scheme.

For there are colors that sparkle, colors that soothe, colors that glow with a sunshiny warmth or that cool like a refreshing dip into the ocean. But you must know which colors blend harmoniously, which combination is best adapted to the room's size, lighting, purpose.

For instance, your living-room must be cheerful yet restful. If it faces north, as the upper room in the sketch does, make it look sunny with glowing colors—light tints if the room is small, darker shades if large. Peach or gold glass curtains. Light yellow or warm beige walls. Rug with rich brown predominating. Brown, rust, chartreuse upholstery. Yellow pottery. Copper accents.

But if the sunshine glares into your room, subdue it with cool water greens and blues. At the windows, light blue green Venetian blinds; draperies in blue and green chintz with touches of dull rose, black and white. Walls, soft gray. A sofa in the chintz. Arm chairs, deep blue green. Vases and lamps in white porcelain. Result? Brightness without glare.

By Ethel Ehlen.
The Post Fashion Editor.

NEW YORK, Feb. 15.—With all the talk about color and prints as a springtime tonic for the winter wardrobe, one of the biggest surprises to everybody in the fashion world is the unprecedented popularity of black. It was accepted with unusual acclaim for fall and winter, but the general assumption was that when spring clothes were given a preview, black would be relegated to the background. This has not been the case at all—and manufacturers, merchants, fashion writers and merchandising people are all amazed that black is again to the fore as the leading color for spring. Not only that, but it is predicted we will witness one of the blackest summers, sartorially speaking, in the history of fashion.

This trend in style is being discussed at fashion showings, luncheons and wherever fashion people gather to talk over and preview the new styles. And, when all of the reasons for the unusual acceptance of black are boiled down and sifted, it amounts to this—black is the smartest color for any occasion and adapts itself better than anything else to accessory changes when one wants to introduce color or give a different appearance to a frock. It is also the perfect color for the not-so-slim woman, making her appear slender, and ideal for the woman with a slim, well-proportioned figure.

All-Black Versus Contrast.

An all-black frock, worn without benefit of any contrast whatsoever, requires courage on the part of the wearer, especially if she is not beautiful. However, if the costume is of good material and flattering lines, it is definitely chic and flaunts a Parisian air. A bit of white to accent an otherwise black frock can be ultra-smart, particularly if the trimming is an integral part of the costume and not just tacked on as an apparent afterthought. An all-black frock is a grand foil for the massive and colorful jewelry rage, now pervading the fashion picture. The main consideration when buying one of these smart black basic frocks is to select one simple in styling and with a neckline which will admit of various accents which will not affect the lines of the garment.

Black suits, sheer wool frocks and jacket costumes of black, silk crepe and sheers of black are all being shown in numerous interpretations. Black is decidedly headline news in fashions for spring and fastidious women are considering it first, when planning a new wardrobe. Followig this trend, hats, shoes, handbags and other accessories and appearing in shiny and dull versions of the ubiquitous black.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Logan Clendening.

Medical Progress.

It is my usual custom on New Year's Day, or during the early part of January, to describe what I consider the greatest advances made in medicine in the last year. This year I omitted such a discussion because I did not feel that any discovery had been made important enough to merit such a claim.

Others do not share my opinion, however, and in a medical journal—Clinical Medicine and Surgery—a number of people express themselves in answer to the two following questions which the editor sent out:

"1. What discovery or invention in any field, made during the last year or two, do you consider to be of the greatest actual or potential importance to clinical medicine?

"2. What do you consider the most important drug or other measure of treatment introduced to the medical profession within the past year or two?"

Dr. Walter Alvarez, of the Mayo Clinic, answered these as follows:

Progress in Biochemistry.

"I think the most promising and most interesting thing of potential value to medicine that I have seen this year I saw in the laboratory of Prof. Ernest Lawrence, of the University of California. While I was there his huge cyclotron was hurling billions of neutrons at tremendous voltage into a flask containing sodium. As a result of the collision between atoms, the sodium was becoming radioactive. When such sodium, on any other artificially produced radio-active atom, is injected into an animal or into a man, it is the easiest thing to follow the tagged molecules about through the body and to measure the amounts in the urine and the blood and the sweat. I believe that tremendous advances are going to come now in the field of biochemistry, and this new knowledge is bound to be of great use to us in medicine.

Gonorrhea Cure Improved.

"It is hard to answer your second question. To my patients, probably the most appreciated drug which we have come to use frequently in the last two years is ergotamine tartrate (see this column March 4, 1936), which in most cases will bring prompt relief to sufferers with migraine.

"Another splendid achievement of the past few years is the rapid treatment of gonorrhea with artificial fever. I think this marks a remarkable step forward in man's conquest of disease."

A Woman's NEW YORK

New York, Feb. 15.

EVERY now and then the warm-heartedness of this sprawling place becomes apparent. I imagine every town is generous—whenever the woes of someone are brought to its notice.

ALICE HUGHES.

We just passed through a wave of such public feeling. One morning a newspaper printed a picture of the Spangler family, who live down on the East Side—a mother and no less than 14 children, the oldest a boy of 22. They were penniless, jobless, hungry.

By the same evening New York had opened its heart and pocketbook to the Spanglers. Their three-room flat was so filled with foodstuffs that they had begun to give things to needy neighbors. Three of the older children had been offered jobs, and there was warm clothing for everyone.

Within 48 hours Matthew, the head of the family, actually asked, through the newspapers, that no more supplies be sent them! He explained that the family had become so excited by the mass generosity that they actually had been unable to eat or sleep!

There must be hundreds of Spangler families here—hungry, cold, jobless. But the power of newsprint pointed at this particular one, with astonishing results. And now the Spanglers will probably be forgotten—but they did have their day in the sun!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Marguerite Churchill, the lovely girl of the films, opened on Broadway a few days ago in "And Now Goodby"—and right down in the front row I saw her handsome husband, George O'Brien, keeping an eye on the artistic endeavors of the little woman. Looks a lot like Hepburn, this Churchill girl. And speaking of Kate, there seems to be nothing to the story of the romance with Howard Hughes. That was a press agent trick that went like a breeze!"

I learn from one of the local society chatter-writers that the motto of the local Junior League is "culture plus fun"—which is some slogan any way you look at it. I can't think of anything much nicer than culture plus fun; can you? . . .

John Chapman has discovered what's wrong with the local winter, in addition to its snowlessness. The Central Park Casino, that charming restaurant, is gone, and this year there is no sleigh race through the park to its doors, with a magnum of bubbly as the prize to the winner . . .

• • • •

Here in the East we hear a great deal about the Florida season, but travelers tell me that Southern California is having a tremendous winter, thanks to the races at Santa Anita, where such local sportsmen as young Al Vanderbilt are racing their strings at present. Santa Anita took much of the play away from beautiful Hialeah at Miami, although the lovely Southern plant is also doing well . . .

• • • •

I saw Beatrice Lillie wearing a hat with an evening gown at the Waldorf the other evening and wondered what for. I soon found out—she just brought it along to collect money for the flood victims. Auntie Bea's show, "The Show Is On," is one of the great hits of the season. She always lands in successes, that Toronto minx!

And pretty little Luise Rainer has been mousing about the town these days, but without her playwright husband, Clifford Odets, who was held to his Hollywood desk by a writing job. Luise is the least movie-starrish movie star I have ever seen. But crowds do pester these people!

A new milliner has just unveiled his wares in town, and what a hatmaker he is! His name is Eric Moller. He is a Dane and has just shown 35 of his little numbers to the girls. Moller is a youngster and very talented and will set up shop in New York to do battle with the local trade. He has lots of top opposition, for such milliners as John-Frederics and Lily Dache are as clever as anything Paris has to offer—Civic Pride speaking!

Sauerkraut Use In Soup Makes Appealing Dish

By Rebekah Blake.

IN THIS SEASON for soups, sauerkraut soup exerts its greatest appeal.

Kraut soup has a distinctively delicious flavor and it is particularly appealing on these cold days when the body requires a "warming up" before the main dinner course is served.

The ever-growing popularity of kraut and its recognition as one of the very healthful foods have prompted chefs and housewives to give it more and varied uses on the menus of hotels, restaurants and the family table.

By reason of its important food value, and because of its tastiness, the product has risen in popularity and dignity, and good cooks use it frequently, either alone or in combination with other foods.

Soup may be made of sauerkraut alone, without other vegetables, or it may be added to a variety of vegetables in a heavier soup. Used alone it provides its own appetite-stimulating savor; in combination with other vegetables it imparts an interesting new flavor. Either way it will be found a valuable addition to the menu.

Cream of Sauerkraut Soup.

4 cups hot white stock or water
2 cups sauerkraut
¼ cup butter or bacon fat
1 slice onion
2 cups milk
¼ teaspoon salt
½ bay leaf
1 stalk celery, cut fine, or ½ teaspoon celery salt
¼ cup flour
⅛ teaspoon paprika

Cook onion, celery and bay leaf in butter for five minutes, add flour, then hot stock or water. Add milk and allow to boil. Put in sauerkraut and boil five minutes longer. Season with salt and paprika. Strain and return one-half of the sauerkraut to the soup. If a thick soup is wanted, all of the kraut may be left in, and the straining will not be necessary. Serve with toasted bread sticks.

Vegetable Soup With Kraut.

2 cups sauerkraut
1-3 cup carrots
½ onion
1 quart water
1½ cups potatoes
5 tablespoons butter or other fat
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon paprika

Cut vegetables in small pieces and cook (except potatoes) for 20 minutes in butter or other fat. Add water and potatoes and boil one hour. Add sauerkraut. Beat with spoon or fork to break vegetables, add salt and paprika. Serve hot with toasted bread crumbs.

Keep Matches Out of Reach Of Young Child

IN THIS DAY of general smoking, matches are a parlor and bedroom decoration of nearly every home. There was a time when parents hid them or put them out of reach lest the small fry get at them and start a fire, but now the danger of matches has apparently been forgotten, and they are left where the baby can easily reach them.

Of course, the invention of the safety match has done much to lessen the fire hazard, but none the less every so often there is a record of a child burned severely, perhaps to death, as the result of playing with matches.

It is quite natural that a child should want to experiment with fire. He sees everyone about him striking matches and producing the beautiful red flower, apparently by magic.

Unfortunately the magic is all too easy to learn by imitation. A child of 18 months can light a match. Then, frightened by his own success, or perhaps by the heat, he drops the match and the mischief is done.

There is always a first time, Mrs. X thinks her baby of 14 months old is safe. He is not yet old enough to take an interest in matches, nor big enough to reach up to them. While she is still feeling secure, however, the baby is growing and developing and before she knows it, has one day started his investigations of fire.

It is best to get one's self into the habit of keeping matches out of reach.

A match box is a good rattle and may serve to distract a crying baby's attention from his sorrows. But it is a mistake to use it, for it breaks down the barrier which should exist around anything which holds in it the potential danger of fire.

Furs for Summer Hint 'Prostrations' May Be Common

Paris (U.P.).—Fashion experts confess that women this summer are doomed to "suffer for the sake of smartness" in heavy woolens and furs.

There may even be a few heat prostations, one couturiere along the Rue St. Honore said in emphasizing the radical change in summer styles.

"Never before have so many tweeds, woolens weaves and furs been shown in the summer collections," she said. "Silver fox is the most popular fur for short and full-length capes with the skins placed vertically from high, collarless neck lines."

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

DID YOU EVER sleep in your own guest room? If not, it might not be a bad idea to see yourself (or your guest room) as others see you.

We've come to spend a few days with you. We're your old college room-mate — remember? We've brought our best bibs and tuckers because we know that you're going to show us off a bit—not that we mind: We like your guest room because, primarily, the bed is comfortable and we're fairly certain that, although the bed itself may be a hand-me-down from your own room, after you acquired twin beds, the mattress and springs are new. We find we're not required to sleep in a hole in the middle of the bed—a place where we've tossed too many times to mention in other guest rooms.

We like your color scheme—dusty pinks and grays. It's not too blatant and we can imagine that any male guest would not get the willies from an over-dose of femininity. We like your really good reading light beside the bed and your thoughtfulness in leaving an assortment of new books handy on the bed table, instead of the inevitable limp-leather Keats and Browning. We like the fact that you insisted we breakfast in bed, thus allowing us an unheard of luxury and keeping us from feeling out-of-place at the domestic departures of husband for office and children for school.

We're especially thankful for the jar of good cold cream (since we inevitably forget ours) and the generous, hotel-like supply of fresh bath linen. We like your pictures on the wall for they're good copies of Renoirs . . . but Junior at the age of 6 and mother in her wedding dress—in oval frames—are sweet accents, too. We love your dressing table, starkly bare, save for good lamps, so that we have a place for our own suitcase accessories. We like your luggage rack that keeps our suitcase available and in the right position. We like the lots and lots of coat hangers in the closet and the fact that we don't have to plow through tar-bags and evening clothes to find a place for our own wardrobe. We like the telephone (extension) that allows us to call our husband long distance (collect!) without disturbing your family.

May we come again, soon, please?

Maids Demand Definite Hours, Four Uniforms

What are the chief grievances of maids?

Lack of definite hours and modern equipment rank high in their complaints, according to a survey made in domestic employes' classes being held by the Young Women's Christian Association in Fort Worth, Tex. The United Press lists the maids' complaints as follows:

No period of rest is prescribed, with one girl expected to be on 24-hour duty in some homes. On Sunday mornings breakfast must be ready at any time between sunrise and 2 p. m.

Employers evidently have no idea what equipment is needed in the kitchen. The maids asked adequate, up-to-date equipment, at least four uniforms, and free cosmetics to help them look their best.

Thursday night, "maid's night out," may be a holiday for the servants, but when they come back to work next day the sink is piled high with dishes and nobody has cleaned the house. Many mothers give their sanction at any time to "mess up" the kitchen and add to the headaches of the maid.

Women are finicky about food, but they usually decide what they want for dinner after they return from an afternoon of bridge, 15 minutes before mealtime.

The housemaids made several suggestions:

Hold a class for employers so they will know the problems of their own house.

Set a standard wage scale that would make household work as lucrative as working in stores, giving houseworkers an incentive to improve their places and their service.

White girls engaged in such work had another complaint. Most of them want to be called "the staff" rather than "the servant."

HOW TO RENT A ROOM

There are only two reasons why any room is vacant—either it's not worth the rent asked, or people do not know that it is for rent. Either way, you as the owner, suffer a loss of revenue. But, if the rent is just, then let a Post Classified Ad find a tenant for you.

Suppose YOU were looking for a room—what would you do? Undoubtedly you would start out in the morning, buy a copy of The Washington Post (if you were not already one of our 100,000 subscribers) and see just what rooms were advertised. That's just what most people do, so if you want to rent your room, call NA. 4200 and a capable, courteous advertising assistant will help you write a brief, informative ad.

First Lady's Inaugural Gowns Taken to Ithaca

Mrs. Roosevelt and Mrs. Morgenthau Leave for Cornell Today; Busy Week Ahead in Northern Cities.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

Mrs. Roosevelt will take with her all the gowns she wore at the Inauguration festivities, when she leaves today with Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, wife of the Secretary of the Treasury, for Ithaca. The Student Council at Cornell University, there, sent a special request that she bring all of her Inauguration clothes when she came to the University. She will do so except for the rain-soaked blue hat she wore at the morning ceremonies. That has been retired she told the women of the press at her conference yesterday morning.

It is probable that one of her inaugural gowns will be given to Cornell University for its museum—the particular one to be decided later and the gift to be made when the First Lady no longer desires to include it in her wardrobe.

After her press conference yesterday, Mrs. Roosevelt attended the luncheon of the Women's Council of the Washington Federation of Churches at the Washington Hotel, and in the afternoon received at two teas. At the second, the guests were the nine boys who are appearing here this week in "Dead End." In the evening she attended the Farley dinner.

Guest of Mrs. Hull.

Today, before leaving for New York, she will be guest of honor at a luncheon being given by Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State.

While she is away she will address a meeting of women's organizations of New York State in Ithaca on Thursday afternoon, and attend a banquet there that night; Friday she will speak in Utica; Monday she will entertain the faculty of Todhunter School in New York, as is her custom, and February 23 will speak in New Haven.

Next Wednesday she will be guest of honor at a tea to be given at the office of the Ladies' Home Journal, in New York, in connection with the approaching publication of the first instalment of her autobiography, which will appear in the magazine in April.

Fears to See Serial.

Asked with what feeling she was looking forward to seeing the opening installment of her new book, she replied, "With great trepidation." She added that the autobiography would go only to 1924, and that no additional chapters would be included until some time in the future, when she was definitely out of public life.

Wednesday night of next week she will be guest of honor at a dinner given by the women of the Democratic State committee. She will return to the Capital Thursday and receive members of the Bryn Mawr Alumnae Association of Washington at a tea that afternoon.

In answer to the question as to why she had resigned from the Colony Club in New York, Mrs. Roosevelt gave the customary answer of a busy person—she had not time to avail herself of the use of the club. Others will be crossed off the list when the has opportunity to look it over, she indicated, for the number has grown so it is impossible for her to make use of her membership in all her organizations to which she belongs.

Mrs. Greenway Attends.

A guest at the press conference yesterday morning was former Representative Isabella Greenway, of Arizona. She wore her gray hair in a loose, wavy bob and a frock of hunter's green with a square white vest. Her presence was welcomed by the newspaper women she had known while she was in Congress. Mrs. Roosevelt wore a frock of dubonnet crepe tied in front with two small bows of the material and a triple strand of pearls close around her neck.

While she is away next week, the President will receive Sir Arthur and Lady Willert on Wednesday. Sir Arthur will leave Washington the following day to fill lecture engagements, but Lady Willert will remain longer in the Capital.

Mrs. Charles J. Golden, president last year of the Seventy-third Club, was guest of honor at its luncheon yesterday afternoon at 2400 Sixteenth street. Mrs. Otha Wearin, who was the club's first president and who also was to have been an honor guest, had been unexpectedly called to her home in Iowa and was unable to be present.

Luncheon arrangements were in charge of the six senators' wives who belong to the club, three of whom, Mrs. Guy Gillette, Mrs. Ernest Lundeen, and Mrs. Prentiss M. Brown, became members of the Senatorial group this year. The others are Mrs. James P. Pope, Mrs. Edward W. Burke and Mrs. Pat McCarran.

Mrs. Burke, who had several guests from the Nebraska delegation, sat with them instead of at the head table. Others at the table with the guest of honor, in addition to the Senators' wives, were Mrs. Richard M. Duncan, president of the club this year; Mrs. Frank L. Kloeb, a vice president; Mrs. Brooks Fletcher and her guest, Mrs. Vic Honahey; Mrs. Fred Biermann, who had two guests, Mrs. E. A. Merritt, of Chevy Chase, and Mrs. E. J. Feuling, of New Hampton, Iowa, who, with Mr. Feuling, is here en route to Florida; Mrs. Dow W. Harter and Mrs. Michael K. Reilly.

Many Nebraskans.

Mrs. Burke's guests were Mrs. George W. Norris, Mrs. Charles McLaughlin, Mrs. Harry B. Coffee, Mrs. Carl Stefan, of the Nebraska delegation, and Mrs. Sherman Pinto.

Others who had guests at the luncheon included Mrs. Golden, who entertained Mrs. Edouard Izac and Mrs. John R. Murdock; Mrs. Gillett, whose guest was Mrs. Thomas Shownie; Mrs. J. Mark Wilcox, who had with her Mrs. R. C. Buckley; Mrs. Lundeen, who had Mrs. George Foulkes, a former member of the club, who is here from Michigan for a visit, and Mrs. Thomas J. O'Brien, who entertained a party of 14 guests in honor of Mrs. Ernest W. Brown.

Others in her party were Mrs. Lee Beckwith, Mrs. William Boaze, Mrs. Charles H. Phillips, Mrs. Logan Pingree, Mrs. Warren Stoops, Mrs. Aubrey Wiltze, Mrs. James C. Ruffin, Mrs. William H. Larabee, Mrs. Elmer F. Neagle, Mrs. Bernard J. McLarney, Mrs. George V. Talbert and Mrs. William C. Weitzel.

THE MERRY WHIRL by MARYLYN

When Aileen Harris entertained at dinner the other evening in honor of Helen Sacks and Humphrey Horner, she had the cleverest place cards. They were tiny pictures of Helen and Humphrey, and just in case any of the guests were behind in their knowledge of who's to be married next, gave the cue that these two were thinking in terms of the well-known center aisle and "Lohengrin."

* * * *

Girls in Black—were Audrey Campbell and Suzanne Wilson when we spied them at luncheon in Peirre's a couple of noons ago. Blonde Audrey's frock was relieved with a clip at the neck and we envied her skill with a veil and cigarette. Suzanne, Cabinet daughter, who doesn't spend enough time in Washington to satisfy her friends, topped off her costume with a pointed cap of felt encircled with a band of clipped worsted.

* * * *

When two well-known young men about town nonchalantly strolled into Child's after a party not so long ago, one said to the other, "That blonde girl over there is a dead ringer for Alice White."

Said the other Y. M. A. T.: "Never saw her, so wouldn't know——"

"Well," said the first—— "look at her and you will know what the real one looks like."

Whereupon, the waitress, who had been patiently hovering, pad and pencil in hand, spoke up—"Pardon me, sirs, but that IS Alice White, she's playing at one of the theaters, you know."

And still more changes in Army uniforms! At the last White House reception it all came about. Just before the long line of guests started to parade past the President and Mrs. Roosevelt, the Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy and his aide, Col. Edwin Watson were talking and looking at the four White House aides lined up opposite them. The President cast a critical eye up and down each erect, uniformed figure. When he came to George Grunert, he viewed the young officer from Fort Myer, and shook his head. Poor George was in a complete quandary.

However, the answer was simply that George, being the only Army aide in the foursome was wearing the required uniform which was minus the gold stripes that adorned the trousers of his companions. So now, the Army is to be on the gold standard more than ever, with additional gleaming braid decorating the full-dress uniforms.

Notables Attend Luncheon Given For Lady Marler

Lady Marler, wife of the Minister of Canada, was guest of honor at a luncheon given yesterday by Representative Virginia E. Jenckes, of Indiana, in the House Restaurant.

Other guests were Senator Hattie W. Caraway, Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, Representative Caroline O'Day, Miss Emma May, of Terre Haute, Ind., reporter of the supreme and appellate courts of Indiana, and Mrs. Edward B. Meigs.

Miss Meyers To Return for Fort Myer Show

Miss Louise Myers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Hewitt Myers, is returning from a stay in Camden, S. C., especially for the Third Indoor Horse Show to be held this evening at Fort Myer, beginning at 7:30 o'clock. She will exhibit her famous hunters God-O-War and Tandem.

Cypress De Beau, the horse which aroused a storm of controversy when he was sold at auction about a month ago to pay his board bill, will be seen in action tonight. The horse was formerly owned by Mrs. John Hay Whitney, and was shipped by express from Toronto to Washington but remained unclaimed when he arrived.

Miss Jay Cummings will be seen on her Ma Petite and Miss Margaret Hill on Questionnaire. The White House stable will be represented by Mr. Jack Parker, who will ride Patches on the President's string.

The grand chestnut mare Lacquer Lady, who was injured, along with her owner and rider, Mr. Fenton Fadely, jr., in the inaugural show, is again in top condition and listed in several events.

Robert Mayo, Jr., Gives Dinner at Shoreham

Mr. Robert Mayo, jr., entertained at a dinner party at the Shoreham last evening to celebrate four special occasions: the birthdays of Miss Margaret Mayo and of Mr. George Y. Young, the wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Livingston, and the going-away of Mr. Robert B. Mayo, son of the host, who is leaving shortly to make his home in Houston, Tex.

Among the guests were Mrs. Young, Miss Genevieve Barth, Miss Nannie Van Dyke Skillman, Miss Edith Bruce and Mr. Holms P. Hurst.

Guests of Wilson Comptons.

The president of Ewing College, Allahaba, India, and Mrs. Herbert Rice are the guests of Mrs. Rice's brother, Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Compton. Dr. and Mrs. Rice are to be the guest speakers at the World Fellowship luncheon Thursday at the Y. W. C. A., and are leaving Friday to fill other speaking engagements in Baltimore, Philadelphia and New York.

Tea Honors Daughter of Mrs. Snyder

Mrs. Bankhead Assists at Tea Table; Mrs. Daniel Reed Among Guests.

Mrs. J. Buell Snyder entertained at a tea at the Congressional Club yesterday afternoon in honor of her stepdaughter, Miss Yvonne Snyder, daughter of Representative Snyder, of Pennsylvania, who is here from Uniontown for a short visit.

Mrs. William B. Bankhead, wife of the Speaker of the House, headed the group of Congressional ladies who assisted at the tea table. Others were the Misses Ida and Pauletta Guffey, Mrs. Joseph Robinson, Mrs. Guy Gillett, Mrs. Daniel C. Reed, president of the Congressional Club, and Mrs. William Whittington, a past president.

Lieut. Col. George J. Richards made the introductions as the guests arrived. Mrs. Snyder wore a frock of black with a small black straw hat and a short veil, and a corsage of red roses. Miss Snyder wore black moire taffeta with a coral scarf tucked in at the neck and three gold metal bows trimming the front of the tunic blouse. Her small black felt hat was perched on one side of her head, with her fair hair showing beneath it.

Carnations on Table.

Pink carnations were used on the tea table and elsewhere in the room, with bouquets of other spring flowers for decoration. Music was provided by Miss Nona Noel, at the harp.

Among the guests were Mrs. Malin Craig, wife of the Chief of Staff of the Army; Mrs. Carroll Miller, who arrived toward the end of the afternoon, accompanied by Mrs. Emily DeWitt, assistant director of the Pennsylvania State Welfare Board, who is here for a brief visit; Mrs. Ernest Lundeen, Mrs. James P. Pope, Mrs. Fred Biermann, in a becoming costume of beige and brown; Mrs. Dow Carter, Mrs. Charles Colden and a number of others who had been at the luncheon of the Seventy-Third Club, of which Mrs. Snyder is former secretary.

Mrs. Fries Attends.

Also present were Mrs. Amos A. Fries and her daughters, Miss Carol Fries, in a red velvet dress, with a smart little hat to match, and Mrs. Theodore Pierson, in a gold-colored crepe with a brown hat; Mrs. James J. Davis, Mrs. Lloyd Thurston, wearing black witha white pique bow at the neck; Mrs. Robert Rich, in a dress of blue silk with silver stripes around the material; Mrs. Roy O. Woodruff, Mrs. Charles A. Plumley, Mrs. J. Harold Flannery, Mrs. H. P. Eberharter, Mrs. Frank J. G. Dorsey, Mrs. M. J. Bradley, Mrs. Donald H. McLean, Mrs. Don Gingery, Mrs. Peter J. DeMuth, Mrs. Joe Starnes, Mrs. Albert J. Engel.

Also among the guests were Mrs. Thomas Blanton, accompanied by her daughter, Miss Anne Blanton; Mrs. Tillman B. Parks and Mrs. Thomas McMillan, all of whom were on the trip to Hawaii taken last summer by the House sub-committee on War Department appropriations, of which Representatives Blanton, Parks, McMillan and Snyder were members.

Entertained in Palm Beach.

The Attorney General and Mrs. Homer S. Cummings were the guests in whose honor Mrs. Joseph F. Moran entertained at a dinner on Sunday evening at the Colony Club in Palm Beach.

Diplomat to Attend Italian Film Showing

Signor Eugenio Bonardelli, counselor for emigration at the Italian Embassy, and Signora Bonardelli are among those who will attend the showing of the Italian film, "Lorenzino de Medici," at the meeting of the Italy America Society tomorrow evening at the Mayflower.

The film has been produced on a lavish scale. Set in Florence in the days of the Medicis, the film tells the story of the assassination of the Duke Alexander, who ruled the city with a ruthless and bloodthirsty hand, by Lorenzino, one of the famous Medici family, who governed the city for many years.

Ski-Minded Capital Girls Visit Canada

Von Mallinckrodts Also Depart for North After Stay Here.

At a time of year when many members of society have left for the South, Miss Elsie Ekengren and Miss Elizabeth Rountree have headed in the opposite direction for several weeks of skiing. They have gone to Quebec to enjoy the winter sports and will not return to Washington until the end of the month.

Also bound for Canada are Baron and Baroness Wilhelm von Mallinckrodt, who have been visiting their niece, Frau Herbert Scholz, wife of the First Secretary of the German Embassy. They have left Washington after spending a week here and will also visit Chicago and New York before returning to Germany.

Have Bavarian Home.

Baron and Baroness von Mallinckrodt have a beautiful summer home in Bavaria, in the neighborhood of the famous "five castles" built by Leopold, the Mad King of Bavaria. Frau Scholz plans to visit them there on her return to Germany for the summer.

The Southland continues to hold its own in popularity with Nassau in the British West Indies enjoying an unprecedented boom. Latest arrivals include Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lester Marlatt and their daughters, the Misses Florence and Constance Marlatt, of Washington, who are at the British Colonies Hotel there until March 10. They recently attended the finals of the third annual British Colonial Invitation Tennis Tourney held in Nassau, which attracted Donald Budge and other high ranking players.

Also sojourning in Nassau are Mrs. Norah Bell and her son, Mr. William A. Bell, jr., who will remain two weeks; Mr. John H. Clapp, of Washington, and Mrs. Clare Richard Tyler, of New York, formerly of Washington.

Count Buisseret Here.

A new arrival in Washington is Count Robert de Buisseret, of Belgium, who is here for a stay of ten days with his uncle, Mr. John Story. From here he will go to Iowa, where he has taken a position in the publishing business founded by the late George Meredith, Secretary of Agriculture under the Wilson Administration.

Count de Buisseret is a brother of Francois de Buisseret, formerly attached to the Belgian Embassy here. He is a grandson of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Story, of Washington, whom he frequently visited, and a cousin of Miss Jacqueline Story, of Baltimore and Washington.

Georgia Women To Attend Play

Members of the Georgia Ladies' Luncheon Club are attending tonight's performance of "Satan's in the Pantry," the play now appearing at the King-Smith Playhouse below the Shoreham Hotel. The author of the comedy is Theodore Tiller 2d, son of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Tiller, of Georgia.

Mrs. Rena Taylor and Mrs. James Thurston are co-chairmen of arrangements for the event, assisted by Miss Leona Barker, Miss Winona Thurston and Mrs. Jessie Bigley of the younger set of the Georgia State Society. All members of the Georgia delegation in Congress are to be patrons of the play.

The young daughters of Representative and Mrs. Robert Ramspeck, Betty Lynn and Dorothy, will be at the play this evening, with Miss Evelyn Welchel, daughter of Representative and Mrs. Frank B. Welchel.

Tomorrow afternoon, from 4 to 6 o'clock, the entire cast will be entertained by the League of American Penwomen at their headquarters in the Grafton Hotel. Mrs. Inez Sheldon Tyler will be hostess for the afternoon. Wednesday evening is "Penwomen's" night at the performance, with Mrs. Robert Delafield Rands as hostess.

Varied Topics Chosen For Weekly Discussion

Miss Janet Richards, at her weekly review of "Affairs Political and International," tomorrow morning at the Sulgrave Club, will present further developments in the Supreme Court controversy; also more about the child labor amendment, and its implications, and the causes for the increased tension between Great Britian and Germany concerning the return to the Reich of the former German colonies.

A short review of a colorful biography will close the talk which begins at 11 o'clock.

Wedding Date Set By Miss Graeme And Baron Korff

Miss Alice Graeme, daughter of Mrs. Joseph Wright Graeme, of New York and Washington and the late Lieut. Joseph Wright Graeme, U. S. N., has selected Saturday, February 27, as the date of her marriage to Baron Serge Korff. The ceremony will take place at Miss Graeme's home, 3412 O street, and will be attended only by close friends and relatives.

Miss Graeme will be given in marriage by Rear Admiral Thomas C. Hart, of Washington, a classmate at Annapolis of her late father. After a wedding trip, Baron Korff and his bride will reside at the O street address.

Miss Dorothy Sahli Luckett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Wilson Luckett, of Washington, was married last evening to Mr. Oliver William Jackson, of London, at Union Methodist Episcopal Church. The Rev. John Fort performed the ceremony, which was followed by a small reception at the church for members of the family and close friends.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a white satin gown with a high neck, long sleeves and a train. Her tulle veil fell from from an old-fashioned cap trimmed with orange blossoms, and she carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley and gardenias.

Miss Elizabeth Rose was her maid of honor and Miss Maude Jackson, sister of the bridegroom, was bridesmaid. Miss Rose wore a frock of aqua blue trimmed with velvet ribbons, and Miss Jackson wore a similar gown of rose. They carried old-fashioned bouquets of wild flowers trimmed with velvet ribbons to match their gowns.

Mr. Rodney B. Cox was best man, and the ushers were Mr. William Jones, Mr. Earl Fletcher, Mr. Clarence Kidwell and Mr. Walter Kesslery.

Robert Pells Give Tea in Honor of Mrs. Stephen Pell

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Pell entertained at a tea yesterday at their home 1232 Thirty-third street in honor of the former's mother, Mrs. Stephen Pell, of New York. There were about 60 Washington friends present.

The hostess wore a black frock of thin wool made with short puffed sleeves. The drawing room and the buffet were decorated with hyacinths and pink hydrangeas.

The teea was to have been given on Sunday, but Mrs. Pell had to postpone her departure from New York to attend the dinner given there for Gov. Alfred M. Landon. She came to Washington to lay a wreath on the statue of Susan B. Anthony and will return to New York today. She visited Washington earlier in the season and was guest of honor at a tea given by the National Woman's Party, of which she is an active member.

The Washington Scene

By the Poe Sisters.

Two Yale graduates of the class of 1911 smiled broadly yesterday when they learned that Charles Seymour, a classmate, had been elected president of the University. They were Duncan Phillips, director of the Phillips Memorial Gallery of Art and C. Law Watkins, associate director of the same institution and also a brother-in-law of the new Yale head.

Mrs. Seymour is Mr. Watkins' sister, Gladys. The Seymours were married in 1911, shortly after President Seymour had received his doctor's degree, having won his bachelor's with the class of 1908, when he was treasurer of Phi Beta Kappa.

President and Mrs. Seymour have visited in Washington frequently. Their daughter, Miss Elizabeth Atwater Seymour, was a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Watkins at their home in nearby Maryland shortly after the Christmas holidays.

Members of the younger set here are interested in the recent announcement of the engagement of Miss Charlotte Priscilla Wainer, of Riverside, Calif., to Mr. Donald Austin Dunham, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald A. Dunham, of Hartford, Conn. Miss Wainer was graduated from a Washington school for girls and has many friends here, especially in the Army group. She also is a graduate of the Pasadena Junior College, in California. The wedding will take place in March.

With her son Mr. Edward Beale McLean, jr., who has been seriously ill since New Year's is now out of danger, Mrs. Edward Beale McLean has decided to give an Easter breakfast at Friendship again this year.

This Friendship Easter breakfast for years has been an established social event of the spring season, the practice having been started by Mrs. John R. McLean, mother-in-law of Mrs. McLean, more than 30 years ago.

Mrs. McLean, who with her eldest son, John R. McLean 2d, and her daughter, Miss Evalyn McLean, has been in Baltimore during young Ned's illness, returned to Washington last night for three or four days, after which she will go to Balitmore again for an indefinite stay.

Indiana State Club Sponsors Benefit

Members of the Indiana State Society will give a ball Thursday evening at the Willard Hotel, the proceeds to go to the Red Cross for flood victims.

The guest of honor will be Mr. James L. Fieser, of Indiana, vice chairman of the American Red Cross, and Mrs. Fieser. The receiving line will be headed by the president of the society, Representative Lewis Ludlow, and Mrs. Ludlow.

Others in the receiving line will be Senator and Mrs. Sherman Minton, Senator and Mrs. Frederick Van Nuys, Representative Virginia Jenckes, Representative and Mrs. John Boehne, and Mr. and Mrs. Claude Wickard.

Stopping in Capital.

Mrs. J. William Ditter, wife of Representative Ditter, of Pennsylvania, has joined her husband in Washington at the Mayflower for a few days' visit and will return the end of the week to their home in Ambler, Pa. Mrs. Ditter was here at the time of convening of the Seventy-fifth Congress.

Alabama Group Arranges Fete For Bankheads

State Society Giving Dinner Thursday for Speaker, Wife.

Representative Frank Boykin, of Alabama, has furnished camelia japonicas from his plantation for the banquet to be given Thursday evening by the Alabama State Society in honor of the Speaker of the House and Mrs. William B. Bankhead. The banquet will be in the Willard ballroom.

The ballroom will be transformed into a Southern garden for the occasion, and Mrs. Pauline Vann Byrd, chairman of decoration, has arranged for masses of azalea blossoms to be sent from the azalea trail of Mobile, Ala.

Mr. R. Lee Barnes, as chairman of reservations, is planning a souvenir for the Speaker, signed by each guest.

Mrs. Mary Knox Willett, formerly of Anniston, Ala., will give a musical program, and a well-known orchestra will play familiar Southern airs.

The Chaplain of the House, Mr. James Shera Montgomery, will give the invocation, followed by greetings from Representative Sam Rayburn, of Texas, and Representative John J. O'Connor, of New York. Mr. Edwin K. McDowell, president of the society, will preside and will introduce the Speaker.

Glass Attacks CummingsTalk For Court Plan

lation during the history of radio." Since the President's message February 5, 21 persons—Cabinet members, members of Congress, judges and private citizens—have talked pro and con on the proposals.

Minton, who first favored legislation requiring 7-to-2 court majorities on Constitutional questions, but quickly jumped to support the President's plan, heatedly denied it is an "effort on the part of the President to steal power unto himself."

Court Power Called "Awful."

Concentrating his attack on the court, the Indianan said five justices on the high bench exercise more power than 435 members of the House, 96 Senators and the President, with no restraint "except that imposed by their own consciences."

"This awful power should not rest in the hands of any five men," he said.

Minton said the proposal is "to redress this balance of power." At another point he said "the principal effect of this bill would be to bring new energy and thought to the Supreme Court. I cannot believe this undesirable."

Hits Amendment Backers.

He charged proposals for a Constitutional amendment came loudest from those who would not support one, and pointed to difficulties besetting the path of the child-labor amendment. He said he had no objection to an amendment after the President's bill passes, but declared "We must have action now."

Attorney General Cummings' Sunday night defense of the President's plan brought critical comment from other opponents of the program. Senator Burke said Cummings' arguments were "easily answered," and Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, Michigan Republican, said, "We don't have to worry about that kind of speech."

"Literally Untrue."

"The Attorney General implies that Jefferson, Washington, as well as other distinguished public men had proposed something akin to the proposition now being considered," Senator Glass commented yesterday. "That, of course, is literally untrue.

"I do not find that Mr. Jefferson at any time or anywhere favored a wholesale or any increase in the number of judges in the Supreme Court. On the contrary, in a letter to John Dickinson in 1801 Jefferson bitterly reproached the Federalists for 'multiplying useless judges merely to strengthen their phalanx,' and in a letter to William Johnson in 1823, Mr. Jefferson said, 'I should greatly prefer four judges to any greater number. Great lawyers are not overabundant, and the multiplication of judges only enables the weak to outvote the wise, and three concurrent opinions out of four give a strong presumption of right.'

"Mr. Jefferson appointed only three jurists during his service of eight years as President, and these, as I recall, to fill vacancies."

Observers meanwhile watched strategy on the Sumners voluntary Supreme Court retirement bill, scheduled for action by a Senate judiciary sub-committee today. Senator McCarran conferred on the measure yesterday with both the President and Chairman Sumners of the House Judiciary Committee.

Additions Would Be Less.

McCarran told Sumners a poll of his sub-committee showed every member favorable except Senator Borah (Republican), Idaho, who withheld his opinion. The Nevadan hopes to report the measure to the full Judiciary Committee next Monday, obtain immediate approval, and carry it to the Senate floor next week. Sumners was reported "pleased" with McCarran's plan to expedite action.

If this bill is passed, and some Supreme Court justices over 70 retire under its terms, the number of additions to the Supreme bench to be made under the President's plan would be reduced by the number retiring. Thus, if two justices retired, the President could make only four, instead of six, new appointments.

Both McCarran and Sumners also are reported interested in giving the Circuit Courts of Appeal final jurisdiction in certain private cases, so as to lessen the volume of litigation finally reaching the Supreme Court.

Other court proposals made yesterday were:

Senator Ellender (Democrat), Louisiana, offered a joint resolution for a constitutional amendment requiring justices to retire at 70.

Representative Maury Maverick (Democrat), Texas, introduced a constitutional amendment to give the Supreme Court specific power to invalidate acts of Congress, to permit voters to decide whether they should have that power, he said.

Representative Martin F. Smith (Democrat), Washington, called for a national "advisory referendum" on the President's plan, to be conducted by Federal agencies.

This was the van which Sol Ely, of Baltimore, was driving. It was struck by a Baltimore & Ohio train at Dorsey, Md., near Laurel. The engineer and Ely were killed, the locomotive and tender derailed and overturned.

occurred is about a mile east of the Washington - Baltimore boulevard. Ties for several hundred yards along the line were torn up and operations of the road were delayed for several hours while the wreckage was cleared.

Started Trip Alone.

Early reports said a helper on the van also had been killed, but these apparently were false as examination of the wreckage failed to disclose a third body and officials of the Davidson Transfer Co., at Baltimore, operators of the van, said Ely left their warehouse alone.

The locomotive left Washington at 3 p. m. for Baltimore pulling four coaches. All of the cars were derailed but remained upright.

The crash, which occurred at the Dorsey crossing, protected by a bell and flashing light, blocked all traffic on the line and official of the railroad made arrangements to reroute trains over tracks of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

Body Is Recovered.

Bit by bit, workmen, digging under the mired locomotive, last night recovered Pope's body. Red flares lining the rails cast an eerie glare on the faces and bodies of workmen as a careful search was made of the wreckage on the chance that there might be more bodies.

A storekeeper whose place of business is close to the crossing contradicted witnesses who said the van stalled on the tracks. The storekeeper, J. L. Reimsnider declared:

"I said to myself when I saw that truck, I wonder if he is going to stop. I don't think he stalled. The van just kept right on going. I turned my head and heard an awful noise. I couldn't bear to look."

Less than an hour after the crash a wrecking crew went to work to open up the line for traffic. Section hands lugged new ties and a great wrecking crane was moved into place and preparations were made to lift the locomotive out of the mire of the shallow creek.

Construction of an underpass, which would have prevented the accident, already has been started and might have been completed had the weather in the last month been more favorable.

Had not the coupling pin connecting the coal tender with the first passenger car snapped as the locomotive plunged off the viaduct, railroad men declared, that the four cars, filled to near capacity with passengers, might have been pulled over the 40-foot embankment into the creek bed.

Inquest Today.

Railroad officials estimated it would take at least ten hours before the right of way could be cleared and service resumed. Meanwhile, Howard County authorities made arrangements to hold an inquest today at Ferndale.

Pope is well known in Dorsey, a community of about 700 persons. The village was the center of the countryside last night as hundreds came from neighboring communities to watch wrecking crews at work. Storekeeper Reimsnider and his competitors did a business far beyond their usual night trade.

In addition to his brother and his brother's daughter, Mrs. Hoyk, Pope leaves two daughters and two grandchildren.

Fiber Board Now Has Realistic Appearance

A number of the manufacturers of insulating fiber board are now manufacturing the material with attractive wood surfaces, either natural, photographic, or by imprint, but in all cases so realistic that the material may be used in many ways for wall finishing where the appearance of wood and the insulating qualities of the fiber board are desired.

President to Get Plan for Taxing Foreign Capital

Drastic Penalty Now Being Worked Out; Affects $8,000,000,000.

cussion of changing the price of gold."

The problem of drafting suggested legislation which can discourage and penalize foreign cold inflows and yet avoid the admittedly delicate situations involved in possible conflict with Secretary of State Cordell Hull's reciprocal trade program is one held to be unusually difficult by observers. With the further complication of the neutrality situation of the future to be considered, it is held in some quarters that the Administration is faced with a perplexing question.

The vast reservoir of nearly $8,000,000,000 of foreign capital here has been the subject of official worry for many months. In the middle of November the President ordered a speed-up of Treasury, SEC and Reserve Board studies of the problem; asked that findings be collated, and urged action toward a solution of the dangers inherent in the tremendous sum, which is still being augmented daily, as foreign uncertainties continue to drive capital here.

The Administration has been seeking means not only for regulation of funds already here, and of discouraging the entry of more gold, but of control of the possible withdrawal of the capital now here, which could conceivably result in far reaching domestic repercussions.

Possible Solutions.

Possible solution of the question now include:

A heavy increase in the present tax of 10 per cent, now collected on the income from American securities held by foreigners living abroad. This would be a deterrent tax on the flow of gold here.

Enactment of a drastic capital gains tax which would apply to foreigners. Set at a fixed rate, probably high, this would likewise be a tax to deter foreigners from American investment.

A very heavy Federal stock transfer tax, to be laid on every purchase of American securities by foreigners. While this would be expected to cut down speculative trading by foreigners, it might result in securities being "bootlegged" to foreigners.

The enactment of a requirement for 100 per cent reserves against bank deposits by foreigners, in order to make such deposits unattractive to banks; and accompanied by a ban on service charges for such deposits.

Painting Urged Now.

Interior painting may be done at any time of the year. Now is a good time to have the work undertaken. Later on, the spring rush will make it difficult to obtain the services of master painters when you desire them.

First Lady Gets Letters Pro, Con Judiciary Change

Letters violently opposing President Roosevelt's plan to "rejuvenate" the Supreme Court are pouring in on Mrs. Roosevelt, the First Lady said at her press conference yesterday.

But most of these opposition letters, Mrs. Roosevelt said, apparently are from persons who are against any social legislation.

"From what they say," observed Mrs. Roosevelt, "they have something material they fear to lose."

As many letters favoring the President's plan have been received, Mrs. Roosevelt said, as letters opposing it. Some letters, she said, were interesting because they obviously were written without prejudice. Quite a few writers, she said, questioned the advisability of retiring judges at 70, pointing out that many men of that age or more have great achievements to their credit. And others, she said, doubted the wisdom of enlarging the court.

As Mrs. Roosevelt expected, a number of writers urged the appointment of a woman to the Supreme Court.

Mrs. Roosevelt thought it significant that not many letters came from the wealth-producing people of the land—that is, the people who work day by day.

Discussing the low-cost housing projects cin the District of Columbia, Mrs. Roosevelt said that only a small beginning had been made to remedy the conditions existing since the Wilson Administration. She said it is after all a question of legislation and taxation, one depending on how much interest can be aroused in Congress on the District's problems. She added that many projects have been held up here on account of high land rates, and she pointed out that it is impossible to establish low-cost housing when land prices are high.

Mrs. Rosevelt revealed that she had resigned from the fashionable Colony Club in New York because she seldom has an opportunity to go there. She indicated that she may resign from several other clubs for the same reason.

The First Lady said her forthcoming biography would sektch her life history only up to the point where she moved into the White House.

TERMINAL'S "NEW NAME" CONTEST

Complete Heat Service

We want a more descriptive and attractive name (of not more than three words) for this service—called the most revolutionary development in the recent history of domestic heating. The winner can have any desired size of hard coal . . . immediately, or as desired throughout the year. The contest is limited to persons now burning hard or soft coal. Fill in the coupon below, writing additional names on a separate sheet.

Amazingly simple and complete, this new development of research experts enables you to enjoy just the temperature you like best—from fall to spring—without so much as a lift of your finger, except to turn the thermostat. Even no ashes to bother with. The installation of all-automatic equipment, as well as the fueling, ash-removing, and inspection service is arranged on easy period payments. These pay for fuel and service as well as the equipment. The latter becomes your property at the end of five years.

"When talking pictures arrived, my stage experience on Broadway gave me my chance on the screen. Taking care of my throat became serious business with me, so I changed to Luckies—a light smoke. Of course I smoke other cigarettes now and then but sooner or later I come back to Luckies. They make a hit with my throat and also with my taste."

Barbara Stanwyck

An independent survey was made recently among professional men and women—lawyers, doctors, lecturers, scientists, etc. Of those who said they smoke cigarettes, more than 87% stated they personally prefer a light smoke.

Miss Stanwyck verifies the wisdom of this preference, and so do other leading artists of the radio, stage, screen and opera. Their voices are their fortunes. That's why so many of them smoke Luckies. You, too, can have the throat protection of Luckies—a light smoke, free of certain harsh irritants removed by the exclusive process "It's Toasted". Luckies are gentle on the throat.

Escape.

The National Evecutive Council, A. F. G. E., has packed its several suitcases and departed in several directions, following an outwardly calm but inwardly busy week-end. And the embattled and slightly distraught members of the five ousted lodges, who cooled their heels outside the officials' room and later belabored the officials for new certificates and forgiveness, may find the escape from the vexations of it all in the simple prescription we offered last week, namely:

The maritime collections in the Smithsonian Institution. It's easy to go away for awhile and get away from it all in the maritime surroundings. Notable among these, we discovered yesterday, is a collection deposited by Marion H. Virnelson, of New Rochelle, N. Y. This pertains to her grandfather, John W. Griffiths (1809-1882), a designer of clipper ships, an outstanding figure in American maritime history.

His clipper ships embodied early experiments in streamlining . . . besides this, he handed down an interesting apprenticeship agreement, which rather tied up the signer, hook, line and sinker, as follows:

"He shall not contract matrimony within the said term; at cards, dice or any unlawful game he shall not play, whereby the said master may have damage. . . . He shall not absent himself day or night from his master's service without his leave, nor haunt ale houses, taverns, dance houses or playhouses, but in all things behave himself as a faithful apprentice ought to do . . . "

An up-to-date lesson on Napoleon's well-remembered conclusion that an army fights on its stomach came the other day when the committee on reaffiliation for the five ousted A. F. G. E. lodges waited on William Green in the hope of cause intervention. In waiting on Mr. Green they literally waited. It was around 1 p. m. and Mr. Green, doubtlessly, had his teeth in a well-cooked steak at the time.

The committee, men and women, their heels a-cooling, kept the fighting gleam in their eyes for a while. Then observers noticed a relaxing of the gleam and caught the battle tone of words a-drifting off into "I'm hungry . . . it's lunch time . . . I wish Mr. Green would come on . . . I wonder if I'd have a chance to get a sandwich near-by?"

And the first battle gleam turned into wistful looks, seemingly fixed on the cobbinations of ham and mustard, or swiss on rye. But withal, it didn't reach the point where the committee would have capitulated principle and its cause for a steak.

Researches Glamorous.

Dr. J. Franklin Yeager, Agriculture Department, listens these days to the heartbeats of insects with the intentness of a politician listening to the pulsebeat of his public. Out of his listening and his researches have come large, clear pictures of the cardiac actions of insects which have been dosed with one or another of the substances the department has prepared in its unending hunt for better insecticides.

To date, heartbeat records have come from the cockroach, which, as an experimental insect, serves the entomologist much as the guinea pig serves the zoologist. Current analysis shows that, in general, the insect heart contracts, relaxes and rests much as does the human heart.

AAA Goes to Market.

When the Agricultural Adjustment Administration goes to market it comes back with two armsful. Just now it announces having gone to market in interest of the emergency surplus removal program. Returning from market, it had 4,498,710 dozen eggs. These are not to serve the much-publicized dining hall in the new Interior Building, but rather to prevent a continuation of the abnormally sharp decline in winter farm egg prices resulting from extremely mild weather.

W. I. Myers, governor, Farm Credit Adminstration, points out that farm mortgage borrowers from the 12 Federal land banks and land bank commissioner have reduced their debts by paying voluntarily on the principal of their loans during 1936 approximately $75,000,000. Very little of this was required by law or contract, he says, adding "this is a very substantial index of returning prosperity to agriculture."

Should Know the Role.

Dorothea Lewis, of the National Parks Service Office of Information, should know her role in the Civic Theater's production, "The Front Page." Before entering Government service she worked for six years in a local news bureau, handling Washington for a group of Midwestern papers. The Government agencies have contributed several persons to the cast. They are: Betty Leaf, Insurance Division, Veterans' Administration; Lawrence Bekerman, Bureau of Investigation; Edgar Kloten, Accounts and Deposits, Treasury; J. Raymond Baine, House Office Building, and Harry Westcott, Federal Communications Commission.

Postals.

Mental School Crowding Cited To Welfare Unit

Dr. Lewald Calls Facilities at Laurel Congested and Inadequate.

Overcrowded conditions at the District Training School for the Feeble Minded, Laurel, Md., again were cited to the Board of Public Welfare yesterday in the monthly report of Dr. James Lewald, superintendent.

Although the institution's average daily population has not increased over last month, Dr. Lewald reported, the total number of inmates is greater by 15 than it was during January, 1936. The school now houses 541 persons—within 3 of the maximum population. And approximately 1,000 prospective inmates are on the waiting list.

Due to inadequate facilities and congestion, Dr. Lewald said, a number of children on the waiting list will be unable to obtain admission until the institution is enlarged and modernized.

The Board of Public Welfare repeatedly has joined Dr. Lewald in pleas for an increased appropriation to efficiently and adequately maintain the growing institution. Conditions at the school recently were outlined in a series of stories in The Post.

During recent months, Dr. Lewald pointed out, there has been no available space in which to segregate feeble minded children of different classes. Regardless of their type of case, these yonngsters have been crowded together in cramped quarters, he added.

In the past, Dr. Lewald told the board, it has been the practice to segregate inmates of varying grades of mentalities. Now, he said, even tuberculosis patients are forced to come in contact with other inmates.

Unless conditions are improved within the immediate future, Dr. Ewald declared, the waiting list will be abolished and future applicants will be refused admission.

Montgomery Unit Hits Liquor Rule

Abolishment of the county liquor control board was part of four resolutions adopted at last night's special meeting of the Montgomery County Civic Federation at the Bethesda Elementary School.

The meeting considered legislative recommendations. The resolution which urged the abolition of the board also asked elimination of appeals to the State liquor board and expressed opposition to any liberalization of the existing liquor laws of the county.

Three other resolutions were adopted. They opposed abolishment or change in the status of special benefits assessments for paving, etc., urged legislation to make all non-elective positions, except school teachers, come under a competitive merit system, and last, asked establishment of a position of county comptroller—to be named by the county commissioners for a term of ten years at an annual salary of $5,000.

The Federation refused to rescind its previous stand favoring a referendum on all future county bond issues.

Lansburgh Will Speak At Hebrew Brotherhood

The Brotherhood of the Washington Hebrew Congregation will hold its first dinner tomorrow night in the newly-decorated vestry rooms of the Temple on Eighth street. Mark Lansburgh, department store executive, will be the speaker, giving a travelogue with motion pictures in color on "My Trip Through Italy."

Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld, junior rabbi of the congrégation, will make an address. There will be an open forum discussion afterward.

Rep. Izac to Speak.

Representative Edward U. Izac, of California, a Congressional Medal of Honor man, will be guest speaker at the monthly meeting of the Vincent B. Costello Post, American Legion, in the Carlton Hotel tonight at 8:15 o'clock. Representative Izac will speak on "Neutrality." Charles Kohen will preside.

Graying Men of Spanish War 'Remember the Maine' Again

400 Veterans Gather at Fort Myer on 39th Anniversary of Ship's Sinking; Cuban Ambassador Speaks.

About 400 Spanish War veterans "remembered the Maine" yesterday on the thirty-ninth anniversary of the mysterious sinking of that American war vessel in the harbor of Havana on February 15, 1898.

Graying now and growing heavy, the veterans and their wives and relatives gathered in the Riding Hall at Fort Myer, Va., for impressive ceremonies which included speeches by Dr. Guillermo Patterson, Cuban Ambassador; Senator G. M. Gillette, of Iowa, and Scott Leavitt, commander in chief of the United Spanish War Veterans.

No survivors of the sinking of the Maine were present, but most of the veterans had carried guns in the swamps of Cuba and the Philippines, and all of them remembered clearly the days in '98 when "Remember the Maine" became a watchword which helped precipitate the Spanish-American War.

Expresses Cuban Friendship.

Dr. Patterson, speaking in behalf of the President of Cuba, gave his felicitations on the occasion in a brief talk, and asked that Cuban-American friendship be considered permanent.

In the principal talk, Senator Gillette, a veteran himself, said:

"It isn't enough to gather from time to time to lay flowers on graves or raise stones to the dead, for flowers wither and stones crumble. We must carry on, with a living commemoration that will outlast even granite.

"I point to seven accomplishments that will last for all time which grew out of that war—which many people seem to think was a picnic excursion unproductive of any results. They are:

"One, a struggling people yearning for freedom for a century was enabled to set up a free republic.

"Two, hundreds of islands inhabited by head hunters were started toward a place among the nations of the world.

"Three, Porto Rico was freed from Spanish tyranny and aided in establishing many great internal improvements.

"Four, in the Pacific, stepping stones to China were obtained for our modern air fleets.

"Five, the West Coast was aided in its development as a result of our increased sphere in the Pacific.

"Six, the United States themselves were cemented together after the dissolution of the Civil War.

"Seven, the development of our Medical Corps, and many improvements in science, grew out of the fever-ridden camps and misery of the Spanish-American War."

Marines Fire Volleys.

Scott Leavitt said in part: "The sinking of the Maine did not alone cause the war, but it eventually started a great crusade to free a liberty-loving people living at the threshold of our democracy."

Three volleys from a company of U. S. Marines rocked the hall, followed by "Taps" played by Winfred Kemp, trumpeter of the U. S. Marine band. Miss Margery T. League sang three selections.

Prior to the program, the Ladies Auxiliary placed a wreath on the Maine shaft in Arlington Cemetery, presented by the President of the United States and officers of the U. S. W. V.

Drive to Save Church in D.C. Nearing Goal

Only $1,250 Needed for St. Stephen and the Incarnation.

Dr. Anson Phelps Stokes, chairman of the committee which is trying to save the Episcopal Church of St. Stephen and the Incarnation, reported yesterday at a meeting of the committee that $43,750 of the necessary $45,000 has been subscribed.

Dr. Stokes told the committee only $1,250 remains to be secured by February 23 to satisfy the mortgage holders, secure reduction of mortgage interest and place the parish of a self-supporting basis.

According to the report 400 persons have contributed to the fund from the parish and 150 persons from outside the parish. Three of the subscriptions, two of $1,000 and one of $3,000, are dependent on the entire amount being raised.

Dr. Stokes made public the following letter which Mrs. Roosevelt wrote to a member of the committee:

"I wish it were in my power to say something that would inspire you and your devoted co-workers of the bishop's special committee in the noble task before you: the rescue of the Parish of St. Stephen and the Incarnation from its present distress. But in a very real sense it seems to me that the scope of the problem carries its own justification and therefore itself affords its own best inspiration.

"That the work of a parish which has carried on through so many years a spiritual mission of such vital import should be suffered to lapse for material reasons is unthinkable. The task may be difficult, I admit, but nevertheless, it is a challenge to the faith to which we bear witness. In the stabilizing influence of the bishop's special committee I feel you have a real bulwark of strength and that, under God, you will be shown the way to lighten the burden that now rests so heavily upon the parish. I hope and pray your efforts may be crowned with success which their high purpose merits."

Dr. Stokes to Talk On History of Bible

The Rev. Dr. Anson Phelps Stokes will give four addresses at the afternoon services in St. Mary's Chapel of Washington Cathedral on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of this week on the history of the Bible since the discovery of printing. The address this afternoon will take up the Gutenberg Bible, the Bibles of Erasmus and Luther and their influence on the English Bible.

The later addresses will be on the development of the English Bible in England and this country, and the translation of the Bible into other languages.

There will be choral service at 4 o'clock and the addresses will last from 4:25 until a little before 5 p. m.

Youthful Crime Wave Solved in Hagerstown

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Feb. 15.—Police announced they had cleared up a small crime wave here in recent weeks with the round-up early today of a gang of seven youths ranging in age from 14 to 18 years. Assisting local police were Western Maryland Railroad detectives and a Pennsylvania officer. Two of the seven confessed to breaking into a number of automobiles, vending machines, larceny of medicine kits from physicians and a number of attempted burglaries. At least 25 larcenies have been cleared up by the arrests, police say.

Donald M. McNeale Rites Tomorrow

Funeral services for Donald M. McNeale, 48, secretary-treasurer of the Smoot Sand and Gravel Corporation, who died of a heart attack Saturday at Miami Beach, Fla., will be held tomorrow at 2 p. m. in St. Margaret's Episcopal Church. Burial will be in Charlottsville, Va.

Mr. McNeale, who lived here at 1923 Biltmore street northwest, was connected with the sand and gravel company for many years. He was educated at the Friends School and Yale University. A Royal Arch Mason, he was connected with a Masonic lodge in Leesburg, Va.

Mr. McNeale is survived by his wife, Mrs. Mary McNeale; his mother, Mrs. Mary McNeale Smoot; three daughters, Mrs. Charles Cunningham Brown, London, England; Margaret Douglas McNeale and Sylvia McNeale, this city, and a granddaughter, Sarah Brown.

Glee Club Party.

The Massachusetts Society of Washington will hear the Georgetown University Glee Club at its party tonight at Wardman Park Hotel. Marion Liddy heads the woman's committee.

Well, I'll Tell You . . . . . By Bob Burns

Every time I make a trip on the train, I promise myself I'll never make another trip without gettin' me one of them fancy toilet kits so I can show off a little bit in the washroom of the Pullman trains. I declare it seems like every man on the train has got one of them things, but me. I suppose it's because I was raised up with a wash pan and a bucket of cold water out on the back porch.

I'll never forget a trip I made not long ago with my Cousin Wafford. In the mornin', we was sittin' up in the washroom of the Pullman train and in come one of them dude fellas with a fancy dressin' robe on. At first he spread a towel on the shelf and then he undid a big leather toilet kit and he started takin' out more toilet articles than Doc Meier's got in his whole drug store back home.

At first he put oil on his hair and he rubbed it in and then he trimmed his moustache with a little pair of scissors he had. He scrubbed his teeth. Then he shaved himself and put lotion on his face and then put some powder on. He trimmed his nails and filed 'em and all the time Wafford never took his eyes off of him. When the fella was all through and ready to go, Wafford looked at him and said, "Mister, pardon me for askin' you but I just got to know—are you always that much trouble to yourself?"

Capital Men, House Group To Plan Aid

Informal Parley Is Set for Today on U. S. Contribution.

Conference on Jacobs Fiscal Report Will Also Be Held.

By James D. Secrest.

A departure in District-Federal relations will occur today on two Capitol Hill fronts as Congressional sub-committees solicit advice from Washingtonians on the problem of balancing the District budget for 1938.

Two "off-the-record" conferences will be held in sincere attempts to solve the fiscal dilemma facing the District with anticipated revenue below requested appropriation.

The House Sub-committee on District Appropriations will discuss the problem with a dozen or more of Washington's leading bankers, businessmen and professional men.

Will Be Informal.

The conference will be strictly informal, with even official reporters barred, and the witnesses will be men who are not speaking for any trade or civic organizations and who presumably have no axes to grind.

It is the first time in recent history that such a conference has been called, and it heralds a new era in District-Congressional good feeling.

The idea was originated by Representative Ross Collins, of Mississippi, the new chairman of the sub-committee.

At the same time that Collins is talking with these businessmen, two sub-committees of the House District Committee will meet in another executive and informal session with the District Commissioners on the Jacobs report on fiscal relations between the Federal and District governments.

To Seek Understanding.

Puzzled somewhat by the range and the intricacy of the report, the sub-committees decided that an informal discussion with District officials would enable them to understand the Jacobs committee recommendations better.

Scheduled to be present at the parley will be the two sub-committee chairmen, Representative Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, and Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, and the eight other sub-committee members.

After engaging in a general discussion of the problem confronting the Districts and the Jacobs committee proposals, the two sub-committees probably will decide what phases of the report are to be handled by which sub-committee.

Under the plan adopted by the full committee, the Kennedy sub-committee was instructed to handle the revenue raising proposals, including the new tax provisions, and the Nichols sub-committee was told to investigate the recommendations for new municipal machinery and local suffrage.

Will Summon Jacobs.

Chairman Collins, of the appropriations sub-committee, disclosed yesterday that he intends to summon J. L. Jacobs, director of the fiscal relations study, and George Lord, the tax expert who made a similar study for the Mapes House committee, before the end of the week.

Collins has made no secret of his lack of confidence in the practicability of the Jacobs recommendations and his preference for the scheme proposed by the Mapes committee five years ago.

Actually the appropriations sub-committee is concerned directly only with the Federal payment recommended by the committee.

The Jacobs group recommended approximately $2,500,000, of which only about $1,600,000 would be credited to the general revenue fund. The Mapes committee recommended $6,500,000 at least until the District revenue increases substantially. Both groups urged additional local taxes.

Is Held Unworkable.

Lord has assailed the Jacobs formula on several occasions as "unworkable" and has asserted his willingness to testify before any subcommittee investigating the fiscal relations problem.

Auditor Daniel J. Donovan, who is also chairman of a special District tax committee, said yesterday that he believed it would be advisable for the legislative sub-committees of the House District Committee to await the report of the appropriations sub-committee before starting hearings on new tax measures.

Three Injured In Collision of Auto and Truck

Two Drivers Exonerated in Deaths of Pedestrians Struck by Cars.

Three men were injured in a head-on collision between an auto and truck on the Baltimore boulevard yesterday as a coroner's jury acquitted two motorists after inquests in two recent traffic deaths.

The three men said to be in serious condition in Sibley Hospital were identified as Belford L. Brazelton, 22, 2008 Q street northwest, driver of the automobile; Quarles Brown, 22, 1026 Sixteenth street northwest, a passenger, and Paul Aloi, 52, 444 K street northwest, operator of the truck.

All of the men suffered multiple lacerations and head injuries. Police said Brazelton's car, traveling at a high rate of speed toward Washington, crashed into the truck which was going north. The accident occurred about 4 miles this side of Laurel.

Bernard Clarke, 36, 1240 Twenty-second street northwest, and John Freeman, colored, 51, of the 1500 block Church street northwest, were absolved from blame in the deaths of Rosa Myers, 70, of 3620 Connecticut avenue northwest, and Richard Francis, colored,), of 3007 Sherman avenue northwest.

Mrs. Myers was struck at Connecticut avenue and Porter street northwest last Wednesday. She died the next day in Georgetown Hospital. The colored boy died shortly after he was knocked down near his home Friday.

Traffic Court Speeded

Defendants in traffic court cases appeared yesterday before Police Court Judge Isaac R. Hitt for the first time in "staggered hour" formation as Judge Edward M. Curran's recently proposed system went into effect.

With the exception of one or two hitches attributable to the newness of the procedure, everything went off like clockwork, and court officials expressed themselves as pleased with the revised order of things.

Under Judge Curran's plan, defendants appear in groups according to the precinct in which their offenses were committed. The first group appeared at 9:30 a. m. and was disposed of shortly before the arrival of the second group an hour later. Despite an extra heavy docket, there was little or the confusion that usually prevails.

Judge Curran, who is sitting in the jury branch of the court this month, pointed out that it is not expected that the plan would prove perfection itself until the machinery set up for it became accustomed to its work. He was thoroughly satisfied, he said, with the results of the first day's trial.

Judge Hitt's Speed Law Views Draw Fire of Police Officials

Police Court Judge Isaac R. Hitt's remark from the bench yesterday that he did not think policemen should arrest motorists for speeds of less than 30 miles an hour brought instant rebuttal from Police Department officials.

Capt. Milton D. Smith, chief of the Traffic Division, was the first to voice his objections to Judge Hitt's remarks when he took the personal bond of a motorist charged with speeding 28 miles an hour on Vermont avenue northwest.

Judge Hitt chided Policeman E. C. Helms, of the Second Precinct, for bringing into court Reginald Green, of 654 Morton street northwest, for traveling 28 miles an hour in a 22-mile zone. Judge Hitt said:

"It has been three years since I heard a speeding case which involved a speed of less than 30 miles an hour. Of course 23 miles an hour constitutes a violation, but it seems to me the police ought to use more judgment for arresting motorists for barely exceeding the speed limit."

Capt. Smith condemned the jurist for his statement with the remarks that motorcycle policemen and other members of the Traffic Division will be given express orders to enforce the speed limit as it stands.

"Why, 28 miles an hour is as dangerous a speed in the downtown area and in the vicinity of schools as 40 miles would be in outlying sections. The District has had four more traffic fatalities so far this year over the number of deaths last year, Capt. Smith asserted. "Speeds greater than 22 are dangerous and my men will enforce the regulation in this regard, despite any remarks Judge Hitt made," Smith declared.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, upheld Capt. Smith's denunciation of Judge Hitt's statements. Maj. Brown said his men will continue to enforce the 22-mile limit until the speed limit is raised.

"In my opinion, 28 miles an hour can be an extremely hazardous speed and it is highly essential that the regulation be enforced," Maj. Brown said.

Women Honor Susan Anthony In Ritual Here

Wreaths Laid on Statue of Suffragist Leader on Anniversary.

In the dimly-lighted crypt beneath the dome of the Capitol approximately 80 women, representatives of many women's clubs in America, gathered yesterday about the white marble statue of Susan B. Anthony, the noted suffragist, to commemorate the 117th anniversary of her birth.

The principal speaker, Representative Nan Honeyman (Democrat), Oregon, probably would not have been there in that capacity had it not been for the militant Quaker school teacher who fought for equal rights for women. Oregon, Mrs. Honeyman said, was the first State to recognize women's suffrage.

Aims Not Achieved.

The Oregon Representative said the aims of Susan B. Anthony had not been achieved. "We have," she said, "much work yet unfinished until we abolish child labor, one of Susan B. Anthony's great aims."

Senator Claude Pepper, Florida, the other speaker, asked women to continue, as a tribute to the great suffragist, the fight to obtain political and economic equality for women.

A bit bewildered by speech-making and wreath-laying, and more interested in the actions of the Marine Band, was 7-year-old Louis Walter Anthony, of 17 West Woodbine avenue, Chevy Chase, Md., great-great-great-grandson of Mrs. Anthony.

Looks at Ancestor.

Led by his mother, the blonde-haired boy, dressed in a blue serge suit, walked before the bust to get a good look at his ancestor, and for all the audience to see and applaud.

Aged William Edward Ryan, of 3126 Sixteenth street, whose mother was a school girl chum of the great feminist, was brought from the rear and given a seat of honor close to the statue.

Club Memberships Given Boys in Play

Frank R. Jelleff, president of the Boys Club of Washington, today will confer honorary memberships in the club on the ten boys in the cast of "Dead End," playing at the National Theater. The ceremony will take place at 4 o'clock at the clubhouse, 230 C street northwest.

The boys will be escorted to the clubhouse by Gerald Phillips, stage manager of the show. Mr. Jelleff will give them regular membership cards and these will be good for the entire week in any of the four boys' clubs affiliated with the Community Chest. Sidney L. Hechinger, president of the Northeast Boys Club, and John V. McCarthy, of the Merrick Boys Club, will be present.

Because of the nature of the play, which depicts life among a street gang of boys, the youthful members of the cast are always interested in boys' club work. They have been made honorary members of similar clubs in numerous cities and they take a real pride in working out at the clubs, which depicts the best method of fighting the conditions which these boys portray on the stage. The exhibit arranged by the four Chest clubs attracted a great deal of attention in the lobby of the theater last night.

5 A. F. G. E. Units Denied Readmission

The executive council, American Federation of Government Employes, yesterday unanimously agreed against reinstating the five lodges which were ousted by the Detroit convention last year for alleged radical activity.

It was the second decision of such effect the council has made since Friday. The decision yesterday, made after a hearing arranged by William Green, of the A. F. of L., was worded as follows:

"On the basis of the hearing accorded the committee representing former lodges * * * of the statement presented by their spokesman, of the indefinite character of the answers of individual members of the committee to questions propounded by the national executive council concerning fundamental principles of the American Federation of Government Employes, and of a review of the previous actions taken on this matter, it is the decision of the (council) that the request of the group * * * for reaffiliation to this federation must be denied."

This leaves the lodges no avenue of appeal other than to the next convention, A. F. G. E., officials later stated.

The first denial of the reinstatement petition was made in closed sesion Friday, a few hours after the council assembled here with a principal view of scrutinizing the national and its own leigslative programs. The committee for the lodges waited on Green Saturday afternoon, complaining that their petition had been acted on in secrecy and without argument from the committee.

Green immediately called Charles I. Stengle, president, A. F. G. E., and urged the council to hear the committee on Sunday. The committee had a full hearing, but the details of question and answers were not disclosed.

The lodges ousted by convention action last September are Social Security Board Union, Farm Credit Administration Employes, Securities and Exchange Commission, Railroad Retirement Board and Public Assistance Division.

The council concluded its session and adjourned yesterday afternoon.

Paroles Awarded Henley, Foshay

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Board of Parole granted paroles yesterday to Henry H. Henley and Wilbur B. Foshay, of Minneapolis, Minn., effective May 6.

They are serving 15-year sentences in Leavenworth penitentiary for using the mails to dispose of worthless securities.

Arthur D. Wood, chairman of the parole board, said the justice department's action was made possible by a recent executive order signed by President Roosevelt which reduced the sentences of the Minneapolis business men to five years. The order also remitted fines of $1,000.

Henley and Foshay entered Leavenworth May 6, 1934. The President's action made them immediately eligible to submit parole applications. Wood held a hearing on the applications at the penitentiary on January 29.

By Nelson B. Bell.

Invested with a degree of realism that has not been approached on the American stage since the late David Belasco was accustomed to devote his directorial genius to the perfection of the convincing minutiae of performance and presentation, Norman Bel Geddes' production of Sidney Kingsley's stirring three-act play of "Dead End" was offered for the first time in Washington on the stage of the National Theater last night to the high delight of an audience which was not so large as it should have been, but one which made up in enthusiasm for the sheer merit of the drama what it lacked in numbers.

"Dead End" accomplishes the heroic task of being gripping and engrossing entertainment and, at the same time, a sociological document of prime importance in the cogency of its attack upon the pressing problem of juvenile delinquency. With its locale a sullen backwater at the edge of the East River in New York, with a towering and fashionable apartment house on one side and the squalid docks, where the tough kids of the neighborhood foregather, on the other, the play presents peculiarly vivid and contrasting study of two strata of society as far removed from each other as the poles.

Battlefield of Classes.

In this strange comingling of the aristocracy and hoi polloi there is established the meeting ground of opposing social types that provides the genesis of conflict that reaches the sensational heights of melodrama and sounds the pathetic depths of human suffering and pathos.

The movement of events centers largely in the lawless activities of a band of youthful hoodlums, gangsters in the making, who are instinctively at war with the gilded aristocrats who occupy the apartment house in whose shadow they dive off the dock into the murky waters of the filthy backwash. There returns to this sordid scene of his early childhood the country's Public Enemy No. 1, in the person of "Babyface" Martin, a killer with eight human slaughters to his credit. Perhaps discredit is the word. "Babyface" endeavors to inculcate into the minds of his young admirers some of the precepts of his own ruthless code, which has made him the object of a Nation-wide police hunt with a price on his head.

Pal Went Straight.

There haunts these humble and squalid precincts, too, a boyhood chum of Martin's who took the safer and saner road and has become an architect, intent upon improving the condition of the underprivileged by building community homes in which they may live in decency.

Between these opposing elements is set up a conflict that leads to Mr. Martin's violent extinction, by G-Men bullets, much after the manner of Dillinger's in Chicago, the correction of a renegade boy's distorted view of his obligation to his sister and society and a considerable clarification of the viewpoint of both sides through speeches that clearly expound Mr. Kingsley's sound philosophy in the matter of society's obligation to the submerged tenth.

Interlarded with these major developments of the three acts are the minor romances, defeated aspirations, humorous moments and vicious enterprises of those who appear in the principal roles on both sides of the social scale. The whole thing is executed with an infallible touch, a naturalness and fidelity to life as it might be lived under the given circumstances that stamp "Dead End" as one of the genuinely important contributions to the dramatic literature of the contemporary theater.

Employs Huge Cast.

A glance at the extended personnel of the cast employed in the play, appearing at the top of this column, will convince any seasoned theatergoer of the impossibility of bestowing the full meed of individual praise due so large a number of players. It seemed to me, however, that Warren Ashe, as Gimpty; Francis De Sales, as "Babyface" Martin; Mary Corell, as Drina, sister of the youthful candidate for the jail house, Tommy; Robert Gray, as Hunk, and Ernest Rowan, as the vengeful Griswald, contributed performances that were finely attuned to the spirit and the purpose of the play. Eve aBiley's portrayal of the important role of Kay, elusive sweetheart of Gimpty, the man who "turned in" Martin to the Federal agents, probably would have fallen in this classification of the better impersonations, save for an almost complete inaudibility a great deal of the time even from a vantage point as colse as the fourth row.

But, after all, the greatest novelty and the greatest lift enjoyed by "Dead End" spring from the extraordinarily naturalistic interpretations of the docks' potential gangsters turned in by Jay Merrick, Donald Sharpe, Morton Fuller, David Gorsey and Edward Furman, in the roles picturesquely denominated, respectively, "T. B." Tommy, Dippy, Angel and Spit. Among these I should give the palm to Donald Sharpe, in the pivotal part of Tommy.

Many of the Incoming Plays Not Heretofore Seen in the National Capital; Local Publicist Wins a National Award; Warner Brothers Studios Set a Production Record; New Bill Opens at RKO-Keith's on Thursday of This Week; Three-Star Cast to Be Seen in "Mrs. Cheyney;" News Notes of Theater.

IT IS quite an imposing list of titles that has been lined up for the immediately ensuing weeks at the newly relighted Belasco Theater.

Following the current return engagement of "Tobacco Road" will come that much-discussed and occasionally officially condemned drama of "The Mulatto," with James Kirkwood, star of both stage and screen, heading the cast.

BELL.

"The Night of January 16" also is penciled in for early presentation on Lafayette Square, as is also "The Old Maid."

"The Old Maid," one is given to understand, will be staged and cast in a manner that will be found wholly within the requirements of the District's drastic child labor law, a factor that has prevented its presentation here on several previous occasions.

All of these, and numerous other incoming attractions, will inaugurate their engagements at the Belasco on Sunday night.

As was pointed out in yesterday's review, the "Tobacco Road" on view this week at the Belasco, with Taylor Holmes in the role of Jeeter Lester, while not by any means a carbon copy, is a close approximation of the play as it was presented at the National for two engagements aggregating three weeks, with Henry Hull, creator of the part, as Jeeter.

Mr. Holmes will surprise all who remember him in the days of his light-comedy activities by the skill with which he has become a character actor of sharply contrasted appearance and methods.

In recognition of the merit and comprehensiveness of his advertising and publicity campaign on behalf of "Servant of the People," the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer short subject concerning the formulation and adoption of the Constitution of the United States, Ray Bell—no relation—in charge of publicity for the Loew theaters in Washington, has been awarded the Motion Picture Herald bronze plaque, it was learned yesterday. In announcing this award, it was stated that this is the first time in the history of the bestowal of this prize that a campaign on a short screen subject has been so honored. Nice going is what I always say. Congratulations, fella.

An all-time high mark in features completed before release dates has been set by the Warner Brothers Burbank studios on the West Coast, according to report just dropped on this desk.

According to this word from Hollywood, a total of 22 films have been completed and are ready for release. Not content with this record, the studio is continuing its swift production pace, with six features before the cameras and five in preparation for early shooting.

Among the pictures which have been completed and will be presented at the Earle and Metropolitan theaters during coming weeks are, "The Prince and the Pauper," with Errol Flynn and the Mauch twins; "Marry the Girl," with Frank McHugh, Hugh Herbert and Mary Boland; "The King and the Chorus Girl," with Fernand Gravate and Joan Blondell; "Ready, Willing and Able," with Ruby Keeler; "Mountain Justice," with Josephine Hutchinson, and "Another Dawn," with Kay Francis and Erroll Flynn.

"The Last of Mrs. Cheyney," the new camera rendition of the popular play that has been filmed before, opening on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater on Friday, brings together three stellar players who recently have appeared in pictures of outstanding merit and popularity—Joan Crawford, William Powell and Robert Montgomery. Miss Crawford's conspicuous recent hit was as "The Gorgeous Hussy;" Powell scored tremendously in both "My Man Godfrey" and "After the Thin Man" and Montgomery's "Piccadilly Jim" is remembered as one of the comedy delights of recent seasons. Add to this triumvirate of stars one of the strongest supporting casts of the season and I'm afraid you have something.

Up to his old tricks, Manager Hardie Meakin, of RKO-Keith's Theater, dispatches a frothing courier to the drama desks with the disturbing intelligence that "Sea Devils," featuring Victor McLaglen, Preston Foster and Ida Lupino, will open on Fifteenth street this Thursday, instead of the theoretically habitual Friday.

This is a picture dedicated to the little-known work of the Coast Guard Service, its perils and its glories—iceberg lanes, rescues at sea, shipwrecks, all of the hazardous duties that fall to the Guardsmen's lot. I suspect it's exciting.

Leonard Bergman, executive administrator of the estate of the late Abe L. Erlanger, which holds a controlling interest in the National Theater in this city, was a week-end visitor in the Capital. Mr. Bergman came down on one of his periodic junkets to look the plant over, confer with Manager Edmund Plohn and hold a few early morning social sessions in the quarters of the Variety Club in the Willard Hotel. He returned to New York yesterday evening by 5 o'clock plane.

Eddy Duchin, that wizard of the pianoforte, with his Plaza Hotel Orchestra, will appear in person to headline the stage bill at the Warner Brothers Earle Theater the week of Friday, February 26, according to announcement made yesterday by Zone Manager John J. Payette.

With the Duchin organization will be the Calgary Brothers, European comedians; Bliss, Lewis and Ash, "sophisticates of rhythm;" Gower and Jeanne, youthful dancers; Jane Dover, song stylist, and Lou Sherwood, Duchin's trumpet-playing vocalist.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDDLER

Hollywood, Feb. 15—Little did I anticipate when I dropped a casual hint some time ago that what producers really need is a workable plan whereby they may, without danger of plagiarism suits, give consideration to stories by amateur authors—I repeat, little did I anticipate I would be flooded with hundreds of such plans.

ELISSA LANDI.

That is exactly what happened, and for days I have been trying to struggle through these ideas. The Association of Motion Picture Producers (Will Hays office) has co-operated with me to the fullest by reading all plans submitted. But nothing has come of it. The principal problem remains unsolved. There is still no safeguard against studios being sued if amateur authors whose ideas are rejected see similar ideas on the screen.

At a meeting of officials of the A. M. P. P., we entered into a careful study of the plans submitted. Most logical of them all, of course, were those that suggested an intermediary board or agency. But the cost of maintaining this agency would be exorbitant, the producers decided. They feared they might not be repaid in acceptable stories. In addition, there would be no way to make the public aware of such a board. This, they say, is proven by the fact that independent agencies have already sought to contact the vast amateur market, with no success whatsoever.

One fact was plain to all at the end of the lengthy conference: Amateur authors should write their ideas in short story form and attempt to sell them to national magazines. All studios employ well-mannered reading staffs, and every magazine published in this and 14 other nations is read in the sweeping search for new plots and ideas.

(Aside to those who wrote to me: I am engaged in the terrific task of replying separately to each individual. Have patience if you have not yet had your answer.)

There must be some significance meant in starting the latest Shirley Temple opus. Influenza, rewrite of story, search for a location site—one thing after another delayed production. I was seated in producer Darryl Zanuck's office the other day when tiny, tight-lipped Shirley marched in, stood with arms akimbo, and said, "You better hurry up, or I'll be old to play a little girl."

For no particular reason I am reminded of Elissa Landi's swell criticism of a poor screen performance she had seen. "If that girl had been a writer," Miss Landi landed, "she could be accused of bad grammar."

Brian Donlevy was enjoying a quiet chuckle when I encountered him at his studio yesterday. Seems that he had been headed for the lot that morning when he was hailed by a young hitchhiker. The kid no sooner seated himself beside Donlevy than he brazenly suggested that the actor turn about and drive him three miles in the opposite direction. Amazed at the boy's effrontery, Brian asked why under the sun he had waved at a car going the (for him) wrong way. "Well, you see, mister," the kid explained, "there were more cars going this way."

It might make good reading to say that Donlevy turned and drove the kid to his destination as a reward for his brass. But Brian is not that soft.

Mysterious Plane Traces Soviet Sign In Sky at Vienna

Veinna, Feb. 15 (AP).—A giant hammer and sickle traced in smoke over Vienna by a mysterious skywriter remained a big question mark tonight. The skywriter boldly inscribed the emblem over the Austrian capital, then sped away ahead of pursuing police and military craft.

Some said it was just a case of communist smoke getting into the eyes of the Viennese, but one source said the mysterious plane was an Austrian machine conducting experiments to demonstrate Autria's exposure to foreign aircraft and lack of alertness on the part of Austrian police.

Dakota Seeks to Repeal 'Horse and Buggy' Laws

Bismarck, S. Dak., Feb. 15 (AP).—State Representatives Kenneth Fitch and James G. Thorseon have decided to try for repeal of what they term the State's "horse and buggy laws."

They announced today the introduction in the State Legislature of bills to repeal laws which provide penalties for driving across a bridge "faster than a walk" and for leaving horses unhitched while a passenger remains in the carriage or without keeping a person in charge to prevent the horses from running away.

Handsome List Of Film Plays On Loew Books

February and March Will Bring Stellar Features to Local Theaters.

February may be the shortest month in the year, but it's going to pack the most powerful entertainment punch of them all for Loew's Capitol, Palace and Columbia theater patrons.

In the process of production at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Twentieth Century-Fox, Paramount and United Artists studios are a series of pictures the type of which clamor for attention. They are scheduled to follow-in in a steady procession on Loew screens shortly.

The parade begins on Friday with "The Last of Mrs. Cheyney" to be unreeled at Loew's Palace.

On that same day, at Loew's Capitol, "Love Is News" will make entertainment news. This is a new picture released for Washington fans several weeks in advance of its national release. Loretta Young, Tyrone Power and Don Ameche are again a trio of stars, and have in support Slim Summerville, Walter Catlett and Stepin Fetchit for comedy.

Not far distant is the latest of the Nelson Eddy and Jeanette MacDonald musical romances. This one is labeled "Maytime," and has the glorious voices of these two favorites blended in singing the melodies in this ever-popular Sigmund Romberg love classic. John Barrymore is also in the cast.

Another widely awaited hit is "Parnell," based on the great stage success and bringing together as a star team Clark Gable and Myrna Loy with a host of popular players in support.

The Marx Brothers threaten to be wilder than the March winds with which they will compete when their latest parade of insanity, "A Day at the Races," hits a local Loew screen.

Then there is Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's vaunted dramatic successor to "Mutiny on the Bounty" in the picturization of Rudyard Kipling's "Captains Courageous." Freddie Bartholomew, Spencer Tracy, Lionel Barrymore and Mickey Rooney are the principals in an important cast.

The March entertainment winds will continue to blow added screen enjoyment with Irving Berlin's "On the Avenue," Paramount's "Maid of Salem" and "History Is Made at Night." "On the Avenue" boasts a veritable Who's Who of star names. Dick Powell, Madeleine Powell, Alice Faye, the Zany Ritz Brothers, George Barbier, Stepin Fetchit, Alan Mowbray and many others, along with a score of Irving Berlin's grandest songs, an avalanche of comedy and a real life romance are among this smash musical's assets.

"Maid of Salem" brings together Claudette Colbert and Fred MacMurray in a story directed by Frank Lloyd and having the sweep and surge of "Cavalcade" and "Mutiny on the Bounty." It's a compelling story of a Virginia cavalier and a Puritan maid fighting bigotry and mass hysteria to save their great love.

"History Is Made at Night" is another dramatic romance with elements of popular favor as well as a co-starring team of Charles Boyer and Jean Arthur.

8th Buffalo Girl In Week Attacked

Buffalo, N. Y., Feb. 15 (AP).—An attack on another woman, the eighth within a week, brought further complications to police today as they pressed a search for the killer of blonde 18-year-old Mary Ellen Babcock.

Miss Margaret Galitzdorfer, 23, the latest victim, said she was dragged into an alley and slugged by two men early this morning. The men were frightened away, she said, by her screams.

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

New York, Feb. 15.

If I Should Die . . .

If I should die—
You should come to sigh good-by,
And following my unmourned bier
Shed only one frozen tear;

If I should die—
You should come and cry good-by,
And kneeling at my lifeless dross
Lay a loving floral cross;

If I should die—
You should come to pray good-by,
And conjoining my wakeless bed
Love till we rise from the dead.

—Samuel Shipman.

SAM SHIPMAN, the strange little man whom Broadway loved, wrote this poem three days before his death last week. He wrote it to Dorothy Hall, and inscribed it "with affectionate admiration, to my darling star, Dorothy, who has guided my latest writing to success" . . . And so, "success" was the last word Shipman wrote in life. He could have made a melodrama from that one situation alone. For when some one asked him to describe success—after he had made a million dollars from the Broadway playshops—he sighed: "Here's what I found out about success. Five meals a day isn't good for you."

He was a strange, lonely man, who lived in a world of villains, heroes, schemes and love. A world of prince charmings, where he was king. That's why he never asked help from any one. That's why a million dollars trickled through his fingers. That's why the Broadway jokesters once were able to persuade him to wait for three hours, under a tree in Central Park during a midnight shower—to read a play to David Belasco. They told Shipman that Belasco always preferred to listen to plays at that spot and at that dreary hour—to test the dramatic effect.

Ten years ago, when Shipman wrote "Crime," he insisted that an inexperienced young actress be assigned the leading role. He dissuaded Al Woods, the producer, from signing the veteran star who wanted the role. That play brought acclaim to the young lady, and became her springboard to Hollywood stardom . . . Two years ago Shipman sent her the script of "Lady Detained," and asked her to return to Broadways to be starred in it. He showed me that manuscript later. It had been returned—unopened.

SHIPPIE always wore a ring, presented to him by Louis Mann to commemorate one of his plays. On that opening night, before the curtain went up, Sam agreed to assign all his royalty rights to Al Woods for $10,000. The producer then regretted his action and decided that perhaps he had been too generous. "I talked it over with the missus," Woods told the playwright, "and she thinks I've been unfair. You've got a hit and we really shouldn't deprive you of it. So I say, let's cancel our agreement."

The compliant Shipman agreed to the cancellation. The next day Woods read the critics' reviews. "Yesterday you wanted to sell your royalties for $10,000," he told Shippie. "Now I'll add one zero to that offer. One hundred thousand—what do you say?" . . . The play was "Friendly Enemies." It ran for five years.

HE HAD his million and so thumbed his nose at Hollywood. "Hollywood is still an amusement cannery," he wrote me a year ago. "Laughs and tears are packed into boxes and shipped. This is the only industry whose production is 100 per cent—in quantity. Every one hears of small-shots becoming big-shots, and big-shots becoming no shots at all. Only yesterday Schulberg was Lubitsch's boss, and now Lubitsch is boss and Schulberg is looking for a boss . . . With the smaller fry you either have a contract in your pocket or a death certificate. In New York, a man without a job can keep his self-respect. Here he's just a bum . . . Why struggle? William Anthony McGuire used to dream of the day when he'd get big money. Metro just signed him at $2,000 a week and his dreams come true. But immediately he had to hire a man who carries a gun—to guard his home and life . . ."

When Shippie finally agreed to write scenarios, he walked very sadly down Wilshire Boulevard. "Why look so dour, Shippie?" he was asked. The gloomy playwright bowed his head and confessed: "It's this new assignment of mine. Hollywood is making a hack out of me" . . . The story he had been assigned to adapt was "Oliver Twist."

IN his desk yesterday was found the script of his "Unwritten Chapter"—a play based upon the life of Chaim Solomon, with Louis Mann in the title role. Its big scene depicted Solomon's court-martial by the British generals, Clinton and Howe, for setting fire to foodstuff intended for the British Army. Solomon had acted under instructions from George Washington . . . It ran for 12 performances and then Lee Shubert closed it. "I should spend $40,000," Shubert explained to Shipman, "to prove that the first great member of our race here was a firebug!"

During the war Shipman was suspected of pro-German sentiments. To dispel that suspicion he wrote "Friendly Enemies," a war romance, and insisted that the tryout be held in Washington. Every political figure of note was invited for the premiere, including the chiefs of the Secret Service and Army Intelligence Departments . . . Two special roles—those of Secret Service men—had been written in especially for this occasion, and Robert Milton was assigned to hire the actors who'd portray them. Came the premiere, and the suspicions against Shipman almost became truths. For the only two men Milton was able to hire to portray Uncle Sam's patriotic servants—were lamentably lamed . . .

ONE week ago, when I saw Shippie for the last time, he was elated because, despite the critics, "Behind Red Lights" is a hit. "I knew I could do it again," he said. "Shippie's got another hit." . . . And Sam Shipman's last play is a hit. That's the obituary he would have wanted.

MRS. ELY CULBERTSON ON CONTRACT

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

A hand that occurred in the recent Great Lakes Tournament in Chicago teaches the moral that if a pair reaches a much too high contract, the only salvage possible is through excellent play, allowing the opponents plenty of opportunity for making mistakes. My teammates in the team-of-four match reached four spades.

South, dealer.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
Pass	Pass	1 ◇	Pass
1 ♠	2 ♣	Pass	2 N T
3 ♡	3 N T	Pass	Pass
4 ♡	Pass	Pass	Double
Pass	Pass	4 ♠	Double
Pass	Pass	Pass

Obviously, North's opening bid was a pure psychic; but, in fact, it did no particular harm inasmuch as South on considering the very strong bidding of his vulnerable opponents read it as such, and still felt that there was a good chance to save a vulnerable game by taking a small penalty. Of course, he hoped for something slightly better than North proceeded to lay on the table.

The opening lead was the club King. When it held, West shifted to the diamond Jack; dummy ducked, and East was very ill-advised, in my opinion, to play the ace at this point—a duck would have been better. The Ace of clubs was the next play, and South very wisely refused to ruff. He saw by this time that he was in a highly dangerous spot and could not afford to shorten his anaemic trump suit prematurely, since he would be exposed to further shortening before he could get the hearts established.

East, after winning with the club Ace, shifted to a low trummp. South ducked, and West cashed the Jack and King, then exited with the ten of diamonds. Declarer won in his hand with the Queen, and praying for a doubleton heart honor on his left, led the Jack of hearts. His prayer was answered. West had this holding, and went up with the Queen. Whatever West returned at this point, declarer had the rest of the tricks except the spade Ace: a heart would be up to the Ace-ten tenace; a club would be ruffed in dummy, or a diamond won with the diamond King. In the latter two cases, declarer could of course finesse against the heart King.

Thus, the contract was defeated only 700 points, which was not at all bad considering the fact that East-West had a laydown vulnerable game. In fact, at our table my husband and I bid up to five clubs, were overcalled with five spades, which we doubled and defeated 1,500 points— down eight! Needless to say, the declarer at our table did not play the hand as well as did our team-mates.

This Morning . . .

Without Shirley Povich

(During Mr. Povich's vacation this column is being written by members of the staff.)

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Mr. Ray Flaherty is in town, looking over the territory he and his Redskins will call home in the National League football campaign next season, and if you'll take his word for it we're living in a rather nice location. So much better than that cold, cold climate of Boston where the Cabots speak only to the Lodges, and the Lodges are too busy going to the races to return the favor.

ATCHISON.

As for going to football games, Mr. Flaherty informed us, his honest Irish face lighting up with an indignant Irish glow, why, it just isn't being done any more. Not only the Redskins, but the collegians as well, including Holy Cross, Boston College and Harvard, played in comparative privacy last year. It was awfully discouraging, so Flaherty breathed a sigh of relief and gratitude when Mr. George Marshall picked up his Redskins, franchise and all, and decided to play in his own back yard.

Racing, both horses and dogs, has needled the grid game into a state of inertia in Boston—as everybody knows, and down here where we have no racing—as yet, it ought to be rather nice playing in a park with some fans in the stands. They can applaud, boo, toss rosebuds at the players or take aim with pop bottles, but it's going to be very, very pleasant for red-headed Mr. Flaherty and the Redskins.

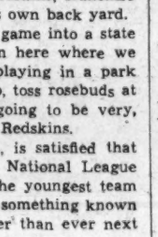
The broad-shouldered coach from Spokane, Wash., is satisfied that if Washington likes football at all it will like the National League brand, especially as played by the local club. It's the youngest team in the league, he avers, overflowing with that certain something known as pep, and he thinks the boys are going to be better than ever next season.

There were 11 rookies on the roster last year, more than any other team boasted, and with a year's apprenticeship under their belts they should be greatly improved. There is room for improvement, unless you think winning the Eastern division championship is enough for a club. They lost to the Packers in the play-off, as you will recall, but that will not happen next season—not if Mr. Flaherty and those 11 rookies can help it.

One of the problems facing the team is that of finding a suitable training camp and lodging house for the year. Several sites near the city are being considered for the camp, but the search for city quarters is quite annoying. That training camp-note aroused our inquisitive nature. Do the pros really train?

"I'll say they do," said Flaherty. "They have only about three weeks to get ready for the opening game and they have to report in fairly good condition and be ready to get going. When the curtain goes up on the race it's every man for himself, and it's to a player's advantage to be capable of taking care of himself. The boys play for keeps, you know, and a player not in condition can't last very long."

Training camp life really is a grind, although once the season is underway the men live a life of ease and comparative luxury—but not a loose, wild existence. In camp they're up at 8 a. m. and eating breakfast not longer than a half hour later. At 9:30 they climb into the uniforms and practice until noon.



FLAHERTY.

Lunch is served at 12:30 p. m., practice resumes at 2:30 o'clock and continues until 5. They dine at 6 and must be in bed by 10:30 at the latest. Most of them turn in before 9, however, Flaherty informed us, the work is so exhaustive.

During the season they are kept as carefully as are old manuscripts in a museum. Practice begins at 10 o'clock in the morning and lasts until noon, if it's a long workout. Most of them are over in an hour or hour and a half. The players are quartered in the same hotel or lodging house, a practice that tends to promote team spirit, football knowledge and forestalls the organization of cliques that can be serious problems. Afternoons are spent on the golf links, in theaters and other places of amusement, but not in work. It's a great life.

Salary? Well, none of them ever retire on their football earnings, for the average pay check is $2,500 per season. Nobody plays for less than $100 a game, and nobody plays for more than $5,000. But they're only occupied with football on an average of three months in the year and the rest of the time can be spent in lucrative occupations.

The line-up includes veterinarians, dentists, doctors, undertakers, real estate men, etc. Their average span in pro competition is seven years, so you can readily see it is no game for a gent with get-rich-quick aspirations.

Flaherty has been at it since 1926 when he played end for Wilson's Western Wildcats. He was fresh out of Gonzaga University at the time, after playing a bang-up game, literally speaking, on a team that lost only three games in as many years. He was with Red Grange's New York Yankees in 1927 and 1928 and then took a subway over to the Polo Grounds and signed with the Giants. Last year was his first with the Redskins and his was an auspicious debut. This year, however, Ray hopes to do better.

Owner George Marshall wants him to do better, too, but out there where the turnstiles are located.

Mrs. Solomon Wins Medal In Women's Palm Beach Golf

By the Associated Press.

Palm Beach, Fla., Feb. 15.—Mrs. Leon Solomon, of Memphis, Tenn., took the medalist honors with a 2 over par 78 today in the 18-hole qualifying round of the annual women's golf tournament at the Palm Beach Country Club.

She put together a pair of 39's to outscore such stars as Patty Berg, of Minneapolis, second with 80, and Marion Miley, of Lexington, Ky.; Kathryn Hemphill, of Columbia, S. C., and Helen Dettweiler, of Washington, who were blanketed at 82.

A score of 88 was good enough to get into the first flight of 16 for the four days of match play starting tomorrow.

Miss Berg and Miss Hemphill, whose links rivalry has brightened the winter tournament trail, were placed in opposite brackets, making it possible for them to meet in the 18-hole final Friday if they overcome the intervening opposition. Patty defeated Miss Hemphill in the semifinals at Coral Gables two weeks ago and then went on to trounce Jean Bauer, of Providence, in the final.

Mrs. Solomon's medal card included an 8 on the long eleventh hole, where she dubbed her fourth shot a mere 10 yards, sent the next 20 feet past the pin and 3-putted. She had sixes on the ninth, where she drove into a sand dune, and the tenth, where she caught a trap off the tee.

But she had four birdies to make up. On the par-3 fourth and seventeenth she laid her iron shots a few feet from the pin and holed out with one putt. On the thirteenth and sixteenth she was on in 2 and dropped short putts.

The pairings for tomorrow: Upper bracket—Mrs. Leon Solomon, Memphis, and Jane Cothran, Greenville, S. C.; Helen Dettweiler, Washington, and Mrs. H. D. Sterrett, Hutchison, Kans.; Mrs. Freeda Nolan, Newcastle, Pa., and Betty Botterhill, Salt Lake City; Audrey Phipps, Palm Beach, and Kathryn Hemphill, Columbia, S. C. Lower bracket—Marion Miley, Lexington, Ky., and Mrs. Helen Hockenjos, Lake Hopatcong, N. J.; Virginia Guilfoil, Syracuse, N. Y., and Dorothy Traung, San Francisco; Jean Bauer, Providence, and Mrs. Goldie Bateson, Milwaukee; Grace Amory, Palm Beach, and Patty Berg, Minneapolis.

Cowboy Scott Wins.

Barry Missing, Promoter Loses 'House' of $2,200

Holyoke, Mass., Feb. 15 (U.P.).—Failure of Red Barry, Washington heavyweight, to appear for a scheduled ten-round bout with unknown Winston, Connecticut Negro, tonight caused Promoter Homer Rainault to dismiss a $2,200 "house."

Rainault, who claimed to have wired Barry $50 expense money, said he would appeal to the State Boxing Commission for suspension of the boxer and his managers, Johnny Grossman and Max Traub.

Six weeks ago, failure of a main-bout contestant to appear resulted in a "free" show for boxing fans the following week.

Brown Says He Will Stay With Louis

Inactivity Not Bother to Washington Heavy; Keeps in Shape.

By the Associated Press.

Kansas City, Feb. 15.—Natie Brown reiterated tonight his belief he can stay 10 rounds with Joe Louis again when they meet here Wednesday night, although some skeptics hinted the statement was not a belief, but a symptom.

Brown's record gives him some backing, however, indicating he has a retractable chin he can pull in when necessary. The record, dating back to 1928, lists a string of bouts like a page from a telephone directory, and shows only two "kayoed by" notations.

Tony Galento is credited with one of the knockouts in 1930. The other was administered by Leroy Haynes last year. Brown's alibi for the latter is that he was suffering from eye cuts received in his first bout with Louis.

Since the Louis fight in 1935 Brown has been comparatively idle. He lost a brace of decisions to Buck Everett, but won a verdict over Johnny Whithers, a Negro who boasts a string of knockouts.

Brown has 13 knockouts to his credit, mostly over little-known opponents. The records credit him with decisions over Leo Lohski, Kayo Christner, Eddie Simms and Hans Birkie, and draws with Mickey Walker and Walter Neusel.

His comparative inactivity the last two years fails to worry the Washington Hebrew. He says he has kept in constant condition. It was admitted, however, that it might be difficult to beat Louis by hitting him with condition and blocking with spirit.

Thil Is Winner; Brouillard Fouls Out

Paris, Feb. 15 (U.P.).—Marcel Thil, of France, retained his world's middleweight boxing championship claim tonight by defeating Lou Brouillard, of Worcester, Mass., by disqualification in the sixth round of their 15-round contest.

Thil won a 12-round decision from Brouillard in 1935 and in January, 1936, won the Canadian-Frenchman on a foul in the fourth round.

Thil had command of the situation, winning the second, third, fourth and fifth rounds by superior punching after holding the American about even in the opening frame.

Falony then went to Thil's aid, Brouillard standing in a neutral corner until after the count. Then, he too, helped the prostrate Thil to his stool.

Brouillard, Canadian-born Frenchman, landed a hard right to Thil's midriff, and the International Boxing Union champion, fell to the floor writhing in apparent agony. He was lifted to his corner, thence from the ring by the referee.

It was the third meeting of the two fighters, Thil having taken both previous decisions.

G. W. Noses Out Westminster, 34 to 30

Colonials Led To Win by O'Brien

Score Tied 26-All and 28-All in Thrilling Game at Tech.

George Washington's fast flying basketball express thundered into an open Westminster switch last night and was almost derailed before finally righting its wobbly self and continuing on to the safe haven of a thrilling 34-30 victory at Tech High School.

Some 1,500 fans saw the contest, one of the bitterest, roughest and fastest staged here this winter. It was easily the sternest test the Colonials have been subjected to and only by the grace of some accurate long-shooting by Tommy O'Brien did they save their collective necks. O'Brien, Bob Faris and Hal Kiesel scraped up enough points in the last two minutes of play to place the decision beyond reach of the Pennsylvanians' eager grasp.

George Washington led all the way, after overcoming its guests' early one-basket lead, but twice found itself battling on even terms with precious little time left to play. Andy Demo, Westminster's clever little forward, succeeded in tying the score at 26-all, and again at 28-all on one-hand shots, climaxing a laborious up-hill drive.

G. W. Never Passed.

Westminster, however, didn't pack enough scoring punch to pass the District collegians. It never resorted to long shots, but was content to wait until it worked the ball in close to the backboard before letting go with its shots. Demo starred in this respect, shoving through seven double-deckers with one hand on pivot shots directly in front of the hoop.

Demo's sent Westminster off in front with a neat goal soon after the initial tap-off, but with Tom O'Brien standing off and popping long shots at the bucket, G. W. quickly assumed a 10-3 lead. The visitors rallied midway in the period, with Ken Grubb helping Demo, but trailed at the intermission, 16-12.

Using a double-pivot on the offense nad a webb-like zone defense, Westminster held the home team well in hand throughout the second period, faltering near the end when O'Brien and Faris again found the range after the score had been tied for the second time at 28-all.

Successful foul shots by Faris and Kiesel sealed the Pennsylvanians' fate, for they sent G. W.'s lead soaring to 6 points. Demos dropped in his seventh and final goal just as the final gun barked.

Maryland Commission To Probe Silas' Kayo

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, Md., Feb. 15.—Sid Silas' second round "knockout" of Lou Raymond here tonight will be made the subject of an investigation by the Maryland Boxing Commission.

Jack Pollock, a member of the commission, said he "didn't like the looks of the fight" and announced all concerned with the bout would be summoned before the commissioners at the next meeting Monday afternoon.

Boys Needed, Roars Schmidt, Ohio State Coach, to Alumni

Big, boom-voiced Francis Schmidt, red-faced coach of Ohio State's steam-rolling football teams, roared a reminder to 125 Buckeye alumni of Washington last night that he hoped "through the help of the alumni to get good boys" for his elevens of the future.

SCHMIDT.

No mincing of words marked the heartey after-dinner talk of this famous figure of the gridiron as he eyed graduates of all ages at their annual banquet in Wesley Hall.

Frankly, he told them that "the Lord will be with us if we win all our games this year."

"We need freshmen," he said, "to give us a lift for coming seasons."

Strategically, Schmidt pointed out thefinancial profit of last year's football season and explained that his teams had drawn the biggest crowdsof the Big Ten. Deftly, he laid down precautions for whatever might happen to Ohio State's football fortunes of 1937, pointing out the difficulty of the schedule for next fall—a suicide schedule of eight games.

Coach Schmidt well knows the critical content in the average alumni group and many squirmed in their seats as he said: "Even the 'downtown coaches' can't expect to win all the games."

He felt "like a pancake with syrup on it," he said, after being introduced as "the greatest coach in the country." Over their fried chicken, alumni had shortly before murmured criticism of Ohio State's defeat at the hands of Notre Dame last year.

"It is as hard keeping the boys eligible," he said, speaking of Ohio State athletes, "as it is t oget 'em there. We want boys with a scholastic background. The alumni can help by trying to work up a finer feeling toward the university."

As good a businessman as he is a coach, Schmidt did not miss the opportunity to tell his influential alumni, among whom were a Congressman and judge and other influential individuals, that his teams drew the biggest crowds in the Big Ten.

—But Pena Bounced Right Back at Gevinson

Johnny Pena is on the floor in the second round of his bout against Lou Gevinson at Turner's Arena last night at a time when the District lad seemed a certain winner. But Pena bounced up and fought back in spectacular style to win the decision.

Investigation Bowlers Win Two Games

The usual hubbub of the weekend sweepstakes competition gave way to the activities of league bowling last night. In the strong Federal League at Arcadia the Bureau of Investigation aggregation furthered its unhindered bid for the title, retaining its leading seven-game margin by trouncing the champion National Capital Parks five two games. The G-Men topped off its victory with a big game of 628, with Astor Clarke featuring the win with a 376 set.

The fast-moving Senate team strengthened its hold on the runner-up position by humbling Veterans' Administration and I. B. E. W. upset G. P. O. two games, with Clarence Purdy contributing a 395 set, annexing high individual laurels.

Carroll Daly spilled the maples for a 156 score, the biggest game of the nght, to give Navy its only win from War, but he also landed the booby prize when he followed up with a game of 78.

Earl McPhilomy's terrific pinmauling is still occupying the limelight in the Graphic Arts League, the "Earle'a56 latest contribution being a sparkling 444 set, compiled by games of 141, 155 and 148. The Progressve Printing Co. team continued its rapid march toward the pennant by swamping Potomac Electrotype three games.

Friends of Howard Campbell, assistant manager of the Lucky Strike Alleys, will be sorry to learn that the popular pinman will be confined in the Mount Alto Hospital for a few weeks for medical treatment.

Schlorb's 137 game enabled the leading Green Bag Coffee team in taking an odd game decision from Sanico Meats in the Sanico League at Convention Hall. Billie LaBille (Sanico Office) boosted his already high average with 369 set . . . After tying Worthmore for the top position in the A. & P. League last week, Sultana took undisputed possession of the No. 1 position by sweeping its match with the Cold Streamers . . . The Normans continued to exert its superiority in the Procurement League with a shut-out win over the Imperials . . . Luckett (Central Bureau) shot a 138 game and Maley (Purchasing) a 351 set to lead the list of individual feats in the Southern Railway Clerks League at Arcadia.

Here's Fish Story With Golf Angle

Coral Gables, Fla., Feb. 15 (AP).—Angling isn't permitted in the streams meandering through the Miami Biltmore golf course—but the playful mullet won't feel safe there hereafter.

James Sinclair of the Hollywood Country Club, New York, half topped a shot on the seventh hole. The ball sped toward the creek just as a cavorting fish popped out of the water. Struck just back of the gills, the unwary mullet dropped back dead.

Sinclair's companions, Otto Rademan, Harry Fowler and Eddie Norton, of the Baltusrol Golf Club, Short Hills, N. J., backed up his unusual golf—or fish—story.

Gridiron Rules Group Orders Three Changes

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 15.—By clarifying two of the most hotly-debated sections of the gridiron code, having to do with forward pass interference and kicking a free ball, the national collegiate football rules committee today took a long step toward making life easier for officials next fall.

At the same time, the committee brought forth a surprise by providing for only one kickoff, with the ball going to opponents if it is booted out of bounds.

All told, in a forthright treatment of gridiron subjects, the rules makers emerged from their three-day session at Absecon, N. J., with three clarifying decisions and two actual rules changes.

Going directly to the heart of the pass-interference situation, the committee adopted a supplemental note, specifically designed to give the defense the benefit of the doubt when body contact occurs.

"During a forward pass play," the new note specifies, "it must be remembered that defensive players have as much right to the ball as eligible opponents, and bodily contact, however severe, between players who are making a bona-fide attempt to catch the ball shall not be construed as interference."

This follows substantially the recommendations made by the rules committee of the American Football Coaches' Association. It represents an alternative to a number of suggestions for making the penalty—loss of a ball at point of interference—less severe on goal-line passing plays.

The clarification of the pass-interference rule is an outgrowth of disputed decisions, made during the past two seasons. Army, in its games with Notre Dame and Navy, and Dartmouth, in contests with Yale and Princeton, were the most publicized "victims" in goal-line pass interference penalties.

The committee found it "impossible to define more definitely the limitations put upon players ineligible to receive a forward pass" but sounded a warning to coaches by adding that it "seriously considered a further restriction to hold

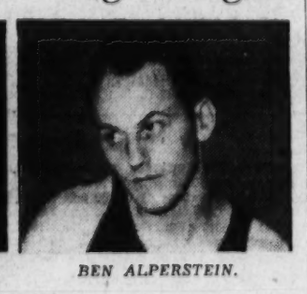
Maryland, C. U. Place Hopes In Southpaw Lightweights

NESTOR MARTINEZ.



BEN ALPERSTEIN.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

A couple of southpaws will do the pitching in the lightweight bout when the Maryland and Catholic University mittmen meet at College Park Saturday night. Baltimore Benny Alperstein is Maryland's nominee, while the Cardinal standard-bearer will be Nestor Martinez, from the gentle climes of Puerto Rico.

Both are expected to do plenty of pitching, but from a strictly neutral angle it looks like Martinez, a rookie, will do most of the catching, because Alperstein is far too experienced for him. Bennie is a comparative oldster, having won all his three bouts as a freshman last year, in addition to a half dozen varsity fights this winter. Martinez, on the other hand, has been knocked out three times in five engagements. He won the last two.

The only gloves Martinez ever saw before enrolling at the Brookland school were gray kid mittens worn with dress clothes. The big, cumbersome jaw-rappers Mons. Eddie La Fond's pupils work with were a revelation to him, but a pleasant revelation. He likes to box and has some fine ring attributes. One is a good, substantial jaw, another a fairly decent Sunday punch. Both will come in handy against Alperstein.

Martinez is not a very elusive target, for his defense is not all it should be, but a hard punch seems to awaken his fighting instinct and he is at his best when stung. He may go down before Alperstein's hard punching, but not without tossing a couple of firecrackers himself.

The Terrapin ringster has been bothered considerably by damaged hands this winter, but you'd never suspect it from the record. He knocked out Claggett, of Virginia, and Joe Flax, of Richmond, the only times he called on his heavy artillery, and won the other four by wide margins. Several times Benny has carried wofully impotent rivals three rounds when he could have slaughtered them in the first few seconds.

He boxes nicely and will keep Martinez off balance from the first bell to the finish. He comes in standing up one time, and the next weaves and bobs under his opponent's defense to score with both hands to the body. He wastes precious few punches, usually biding him time until the trappings are completely arranged before uncorking the decisive blow.

District Boy Drops First Pro Bout

Kanner Stops Vetra in Semifinal; Baker and Green Winners.

By Bill McCormick.

Lou Gevinson, a fine boxing prospect, remained just that—a prospect—as he dropped a one-sided 10-round decision to Johnny Pena, of New York, in the upset of the season at Turner's Arena last night.

A capacity plus crowd of 1,900 paid $2,221 to watch the little Spanish veteran pull himself from the canvas twice to take what should have been a unanimous decision had not Referee Muggsy Morris been afflicted with a sudden case of astigmatism and ballotted Gevinson, of all people, the winner.

At least 200 people were turned away at the gates because of fire regulations and those 200 missed not only one of the best bouts Washington has seen for many days, but the thrill of seeing a fighter on the short end of 2-to-1 odds come romping home.

By all rules and regulations, Gevinson should have won the bout by a knockout as early as the third round, but proper handling from the corner played a more important part in the upset than did rules and regulations.

The clash of pilots started in the dressing room as Arcel three times made Twomey remove Gevinson's bandages to conform with District Boxing Commission regulations. Twomey finally turned the job over to another, took the job away from that bandager, again tried it himself. All in all, it was an unnerving experience to Gevinson and Twomey.

Finds Achilles Heel.

Came the fight, and Arcel was forced to master-mind by remote control. He sent his charge in to bob and weave, but as early as the first round spotted an Achilles Heel. It was Gevinson's stomach, if such a trick of anatomy is possible, and from then on he sent Pena to convert Lou's midsection into a xylophone.

Lou's terrific punching power earned him a decided edge in the first round. He backed away, poking Pena's head back with straight rights and crashing over staggering lefts. In the second Gevinson seemed a certain winner, as he again backed away from the Spaniard's tattoo to the midriff and lashed out with a long left that sent Johnny smack dab into the resin dust for a nine count.

Pounds Fast Tattoo.

Pena popped up groggy, but shook Lou to the heels with a right and left at the bell. From then on, the eventual winner chugged in with his head down, thumping Gevinson's midriff like a bass drum. Relentlessly he pursued the former amateur star round after round, as Lou vainly sought to keep him at long range. He made feeble attempts to protect his tummy when he couldn't.

Early in the bout, Pena started bleeding from a gash under his mouth. Gevinson spurted crimson from a cut over his right eye as early as the sixth round. The commission physician examined Gevinson's injury and pronounced him fit to continue. Lou came out for the seventh to take more lacing.

Gevinson Shows Courage.

From then on Gevinson remained in the fight only by almost superhuman stamina and courage to match. By the eighth, the District lad was a sorry sight as he reeled around the ring in his own and Pena's blood, remaining upright only sheer courage.

Came the ninth, and Gevinson showed true fighting ability as he sent Pena crashing to the floor with another left to the head. This time Johnny was really hurt and he barely managed to straighten up a split second ahead of the fatal ten count. Up her came, however, and up he remained, but only by virtue of all the skill and ring lore garnered in many years of campaigning.

The tenth round was all Pena's again, and Johnny won the decision in the opinion of everybody in the place bu Morris.

It was Gevinson's fourth professional fight and his first defeat since he joined the ranks of those who are frankly paid for pushing punches.

Murray Kanner, former North Carolina University heavyweight, scored a fourth-round technical knockout over Southpaw Tom Vetra, of Baltimore, in a semifinal scheduled for six rounds.

Kanner floored the Baltimore belter for a nine count with a right to the head in the second round. Vetra was down twice for no count in the third from similar punches and Referee Muggsy Morris called a halt after two minutes and 45 seconds.

Swetnam in Victory.

Doug Swetnam, a local featherweight who only recently hit his true stride, outgamed Benny Kessler to win his second unanimous decision over the dangerous Baltimorean in as many weeks. The slap-bang four-rounder was the first of a quartet of exciting preliims, all scheduled for the same distance.

Joey Green, local lightweight, punched his way back up the comeback trail and to a unanimous decision over Joe Leto, of Baltimore, in another four-rounder. Leto tired badly in the stretch.

Willie McBride, a colored featherweight developed in the local amateurs, scored a technical knockout over Willie Green, also of Washington, after 1 minute and 30 seconds of the round in a curtain-raiser.

Sandy Boot, $9.50, Survives Drive to Win in Hialeah Feature

Boot to Boot Gelding in Victory

Rye Beach, a 35-1 Shot, Disqualified in 3d; Our Ketcham Wins.

By the Associated Press.

Hialeah Park, Fla., Feb. 15.—Mrs. F. P. Coltiletti's 4-year-old gelding Sandy Boot, saddled by her husband and former jockey, Frank, survived a hard drive to win the featured Hollywood Claiming Handicap as another week of sport opened here today. Paying $9.50 for $2, the son of Boot to Boot reached the wire a half length before Mrs. G. H. Emick's Brandon Prince. Mrs. Emil Denemark's Brown Feathers lost the place by three lengths. Over a track that had dried out to fast condition, Sandy Boot completed the mile journey in 1:37 flat.

Mountainy Man, only starter named for the McLennan Memorial or Widener Challenge Cup, and Brown Feathers were 1-2 favorites in the field of seven $1,500 platers. Earl Porter's handling of Mountainy Man was below the Illinois lad's standard. After breaking well back, Porter had the F. L. Flanders color bearer on the inside, steered him behind horses leaving the far turn, then came to the outside, with the result that his mount never could threaten and finished fifth.

Sandy Boot's Hialeah record is now two victories in four starts. In his other success, the dusky-coated campaigner held off all long odds.

Star Bud ran into a wide early lead while racing Albania and himself into defeat. Georgie Watson sent Sandy Boot around the leaders and gained a narrow advantage after straightening for home. Watson was a busy boy keeping the winner in front while Brandon Prince offered a powerful bid through the last furlong. Brown Feathers was too late finding his best stride.

After failing in five starts, the well-played Our Ketcham was extended to the limit to graduate from the ranks in the first race on the card here today. A photo was used in the tight finish. Watchcase gained the place, a head before Drift Along, the choice in the field of 15 nonwinners. Lester Balaski shot Our Ketcham to the front shortly after a good start. Drift Along, Watchcase and Who Knows were bunched with the leader, which gamely lasted under strong handling. Our Ketcham was a 3-to-1 shot and his time for three furlongs over a good track was :34 2-5. Hirsch Jacobs saddled the winner of the second in the $7.40 for $2 favorite, Star Loom. The 3-year-old Twink filly was driven home by Wayne Wright, a half length clear of Jeanne Fetzko. Bold General, after making up many lengths, earned the show, four lengths behind. Star Loom, breaking from the outside position from the mile chute, was rated behind Linlace in the early running, took command with little effort, but had to be fully extended when Jeanne Fetzko moved up threateningly in the stretch.

Mrs. W. Plunket Stewart's first time starter Rye Beach, after finishing first in the 7-furlong test for maiden 3-year-olds that was third on the card, was disqualified. The purse went to Mrs. Payne Whitney's $4.70 for $2 favorite Seventh Inning, which finished a nose behind Rye Beach. Forced March was moved up to the place and Marfeu to the show.

Rye Beach, a 35-to-1 shot, went to the front a few strides after the start and opened up several lengths advantage. Jack Westrope, making his move with Seventh Inning, elected to come to the outside of the leader at the final turn, although there was sufficient room to come through on the inside. Rye Beach, ridden by Nick Wall, carried the favorite out through the last furlong drive and just lasted to beat the Greentree colt, but after long deliberation, the stewards ordered Rye Beach's number down.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—STAR LOOM, $7.40, $4.50, $3.60; JEANNE FETZKO, $6.70, $4.70; BOLD GENERAL, $6.50.
STAR LOOM broke well, moved into second place and rated along to the middle of the turn, where she was sent to the front and, drawing away, held on well. JEANNE FETZKO closed with a rush. BOLD GENERAL, unable to keep up in the early part, closed fast. OPOCA was well up for 6 furlongs, then tired. LINLACE had plenty of early speed.

$2.00 DAILY DOUBLE—FIRST AND SECOND RACES—PAID $32.80.

THIRD RACE—Seven furlongs (chute). Purse, $800. For maiden 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place easily. Went to post at 3:00. Off at once. Winner, Greentree Stable's b. c. (3), by Sir Andrew—Breathing Spell. Trained by J. M. Gaver. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:25.

†Disqualified.
Two-dollar mutuels paid—SEVENTH INNING, $4.70, $3.10, $2.60; FORCED MARCH, $5.60, $3.60; MARFEU, $4.00.
RYE BEACH was much the best. He broke on top, displayed good speed, but was allowed to swerve out in the final furlong and in so doing carried SEVENTH INNING with him for which he was disqualified for foul. SEVENTH INNING was poorly ridden and instead of going to the inside of RYE BEACH in the stretch the boy elected to go to the outside, where he suffered interference. FORCED MARCH was hand ridden all the way. MARFEU had plenty of speed, but weakened suddenly. PAGEBOY was the victim of a timid ride. ABADDON had no mishap.

FOURTH RACE—The Fort Myers. One mile (chute). Purse, $1,000. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 3:34. Off at 3:36. Winner, Maxwell Howard's ch. g. (3), by Chance Shot—Psyche. Trained by E. Sande. Value to winner, $775; second, $175; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, Time, 1:37 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FENCING, $6.10, $4.10, $3.20; SUNPHANTOM, $36.00, $12.70; DELLOR, $3.10.
FENCING, under a very good ride, was rated along in front to the final quarter mile, where he drew out and won nicely in hand. SUNPHANTOM was a stout contender from the start and made a game effort. DELLOR was hustled along all the way and gained the photo decision for the show. EARLY SETTLER broke slow, but worked his way up and finished fast. DAYTONIAN was a keen factor. UNEASY was caught in a jam rounding into the backstretch and was almost knocked down.

FIFTH RACE—The Hollywood Claiming Handicap. One mile (chute). Purse, $1,200; claiming. A claiming handicap for 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place easily. Went to post at 3:59. Off at 4:01½. Winner, Mrs. F. P. Coltiletti's b. g. (4), by Boot to Boot—Sanda. Trained by F. P. Coltiletti. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:37. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SANDY BOOT, $9.50, $5.50, $3.50; BRANDON PRINCE, $6.60, $3.80; BROWN FEATHERS, $3.20.
SANDY BOOT broke from an outside position, began to move up in the last half mile, was taken to the outside in the stretch, assumed the lead in the final furlong and stood a long drive gamely. BRANDON PRINCE broke slow and was outrun to the far turn where he moved up with a rush and was a fast-going second. BROWN FEATHERS was hard ridden all the way. ALBANIA ran a fair race. MOUNTAINY MAN was miserably ridden and was steered to the inside and then to the outside, but finished gamely on his own courage. STAR BUD ran well for half a mile.

SIXTH RACE—One mile and a furlong. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds, nonwinners of two races since November 15. Start bad. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:30. Off at 4:33½. Winner, Y. W. Mann's b. c. (3), by Jock—Thistle Baby. Trained by D. Shaw. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:51 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SCOTCH BOY, $13.50, $6.40, $3.80; THE QUEEN, $4.10, $3.10; CHILCA, $3.10.
SCOTCH BOY, running in greatly improved form, was rushed into contention entering the stretch and, standing a long drive, just got up to win. THE QUEEN, circled the field and finished with a rush, and would have won in another stride. CHILCA ran into a long lead at the far turn, but tired badly. MISS PECAN ran a fair race. NIPPONESE stopped badly after showing good early speed.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile and a furlong. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward, winners of three races since September 21. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:00. Off at 5:02½. Winner, Mrs. E. D. Jacobs' b. c. (4), by Caruso—Blush. Trained by H. Jacobs. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:52 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—INTRODUCTORY, $7.50, $3.70, $3.20; PENRILL, $7.70, $4.10; CHAMBERSBURGER, $2.80.
INTRODUCTORY was waited with until the far turn, where he moved up on the outside, assumed the lead in the final furlong and won going away. PENRILL, outrun to the upper turn, began to close ground and came with a rush. CHAMBERSBURGER was hard ridden all the way. CHANCE QUEEN had plenty of speed, but tired suddenly. ANNE G. had no mishap. GALLOPING stopped early.

Sledge to Meet Cox on Mat At Arena

Rounding out his five-star wrestling show for the Arena Thursday night yesterday when he signed Joe Cox to meet Bill Sledge in 30 minute support of Steve (Crusher) Casey and Stanley Pinto, Promoter Joe Turner simultaneously launched his briskest advance sale of the winter.

Prepared to extend the cauliflowered and battle-scarred Casey an even warmer welcome than was accorded Danno O'Mahony upon his introduction here two years ago, Washington's Irish awakened to the fact that a real fighting son of old Erin will be in their midst.

Claiming that fellow countryman Danno O'Mahony ran out on him in Ireland and other European rings, Casey insists he will Thursday night substitute a thunderous "Killarney Flip" for the widely ballyhooed, but none too impressive "Irish Whip" which Danno employed here.

Six feet 3 inches and 235 pounds of raw-boned man-power, Crusher Steve also boasts aggressiveness and fire lacking in a majority of O'Mahony's Washington appearances.

No less an autohrity than Maestro Rudy Dusek, who hesitated to put his stamp of approval on O'Mahony, is Casey's most enthusiastic booster.

"If Casey doesn't go over in Washington, then the Dusek boys are all sissies," Rudy avers. "It's too bad we overlooked him as long as we did!"

Eastern and Roosevelt Meet in Important Series Game Today

INTERHIGH STANDINGS.

	Won.	Lost.	Pct.
Eastern	6	2	.750
Western	5	2	.714
Roosevelt	5	2	.714
Tech	3	3	.500
Central	2	5	.285
Wilson	0	7	.000

By John R. Vosburgh.

"To be or not to be"—in the running for the interhigh championship—that is the delicate question to be decided today by Eastern and Roosevelt High in the hostile atmosphere of Tech's gymnasium. At the same hour, 3:30 p. m., a similar matter will be settled at Roosevelt High when Western renews acquaintance with Tech.

Eastern's and Western's chances of emerging with their series standings intact appear somewhat rosier than Roosevelt's and Tech's. The champs have already spilled the Rough Riders, 34 to 16, and Western demolished Tech, 23-17, in their first meeting. Western's chances of repeating are somewhat brighter than Eastern's of rebuffing Roosevelt.

All three teams are armed to cut a big piece of first place in the standings for themselves, and a defeat for any one of the trio will all but pitch it out of the series running.

Highly keyed for the champions are Coach Herman Littman's Rough Riders who failed so dismally to bother the title holders in their first encounter at Roosevelt. But the 18-point margin by which Eastern won on that occasion boosts the Lincoln Park Lotharios to the position of heavy favorites.

Colley to Return.

The addition of big, gawky Chick Colley to the Eastern line-up betters Roosevelt's chances not at all. Playing soldiers on the counterpanes has been the chief occupation of dour "Farmer" Colley, instead of basketball, confined as he has been for a week to his cradle with influenza.

Yesterday, however, the Farmer was back in school and though appearing a trifle blue around the gills appeared strong enough to start against the Rough Riders in view of the seriousness of the occasion. Coach Mike Kelley has been hard put for reserve strength of late, what with Colley incapacitated and Otts Miller, another veteran of last year's team, out for the season with a defunct kneecap.

Physically speaking, Roosevelt will have no apologies to make to the champs. Capable Capt. Joe Comer at center will provide an interesting individual situation when he matches shots with Clint Quantrille, the Eastern pivotman with the neatly curled locks. As for the burly Colley, rambunctious Ray Fredrich, of Roosevelt, 185-pound footballer, is even more imposing in more ways than one; in fact, his rough and ready tactics under the basket have imposed on the opposition legitimately all season.

Frank Bailey, the Dead-eye Dick of the Rough Riders, Irving Wicklein and Irving Fogel will complete the Roosevelt cast. Lee Lusby, Carroll Colton and Russ Lombardy, as usual will bear the brunt of much of Eastern's part of the spectacle.

Tech enters the game still weakened by the loss of brainy Dick See, the capable guard whose dislocated ankle is still on the repair. With Capt. Gerald Burns, George DeWitt and Paul Heil tossing for Western, Tech will need all the guards it can get. A win for Tech will give it a fighting chance to tie for the championship.

Hardwick, Navy's Grid Coach, Arrives

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 15.—Lieut. Harry Hardwick, who will succeed Lieut. Tom Hamilton as head coach of football at the Naval Academy, arrived in Annapolis today, having been detached from the U. S. S. Arizona, on the Pacific Coast. He will be attached to the Department of Physical Training and Athletics, and will have no duties at the academy except as football coach.

For the present, Lieut. Hardwick has nothing to say as to his plans, but he will confer with Commander Andrew C. McFall, graduate manager of athletics, tomorrow upon matters relating to the development of next year's team. In particular, the matter of spring practice will be discussed and the period during which it will be conducted will be determined.

Gomez Refuses $10,000 Offer Of Yanks

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 15.—Vernon Gomez may be "goofy," but not enough to pitch for the New York Yankees for $10,000.

Togged in his most conservative gray suit, Gomez spent a stormy 10 minutes crying in Col. Jake Ruppert's brewery today. The colonel boosted his original offer to $10,000. Gomez termed this "ridiculous" and walked out.

The Yankees already had announced the signing of Pitcher Pat Malone and Outfielder Myril Hoag when Gomez telephoned the colonel.

"He told me to come over at 11 o'clock," explained "Lefty." "I was there 15 minutes ahead of time; he told me to come right in, and I was out of there before I was due."

Gomez last year received $20,000. He did not have a good year, though he won 13 games and lost 7. The Yankees offered him $7,500 in his original 1937 contract.

"I was on the fourteenth hole of a golf course down in Bermuda when that contract arrived," described Lefty. "They brought it out to me on the course. I read it and didn't play another stroke. I hit my ball into the trees and started for the clubhouse."

Gomez said the contract ruined his vacation, and added: "But it's just as well I came away from there. Guys making $7,500 have no right taking vacations in Bermuda."

The Yankee pitcher said he will go back and talk to Col. Ruppert again.

"I can see the colonel's point of view. He has paid me $40,000 in the last two years. He told me this morning he paid me that because in 1934 I was the best pitcher in the American League. He also told me he didn't think I was the best in the last two years. I agree with him, and I agree I ought to take a cut, but not a cut like he suggests."

Gomez pointed out that he made more than $7,500 with the Yankees in 1932. He reasons that he is more experienced and worth more now than he was then.

As "Lefty" remembers it, he has made $98,957 with the Yankees since 1930, $83,500 in salary and the rest in World Series money. He says the Yankees paid him the following salaries: 1920, $5,000; 1931, $6,500; 1932, $8,000; 1933, $12,500; 1934, $12,500; 1935, $20,000, and 1936, $20,000.

Lefty admits this is good money, but describes the Ruppert offer as "humiliating." He says he pitched some ball when he was in Bermuda and never felt better in his life.

"In fact, I lost almost 10 pounds," he added, "and that's another reason why I need more dough. My suits don't fit me now."

Gomez said he was embarrassed by reports that he is "demanding" this and that from Ruppert.

"I'm not demanding anything. In fact, I didn't even tell Mr. Ruppert what I wanted when he asked me."

Ruppert himself verified and condemned this. "I don't see how I can dicker with a fellow who won't say what he wants," the Colonel groaned.

Eastern High's Champions Of 1936 to Enter A. A. U. Court Tourney En Masse

SHANER. HOLLIDGE. BUCKHOLTZ. DEAN.

A new and formidable threat for the A. A. U. unlimited championship of the District appeared on the basketball horizon last night in the person of Eastern High's great team of the last two seasons. Composed of Lavelle (Dopey) Dean, Chick Hollidge, Buddy Shaner, Gay Edelin and Bill Buckholtz, the Northeast stars are entering as the Eastern A. C., or under a similar emblem.

Only Reds Scheible, who has been enlisted by Commissioner George E. Allen's WPA five, is missing to make intact one of the greatest schoolboy line-ups the Capital has seen. But no longer are these famous five of mere schoolboy quality.

Edelin has had two years' experience at Georgetown, Dean has been attending the same highly respected school of basketball all season and both Shaner and Hollidge have been picking up the fine points of the game as taught by the equally famous George Washington classes of the court. Buckholtz, meanwhile, has been traveling in the fastest amateur circles and the five are anxious to get going.

The boys are particular about whom they add to the squad and only Bodie Morgal, who played with the Bovello Plumbers' 145-pound champs of last year, has been admitted to the select circle to date. One and possibly two other experienced men may be added.

The team wants games immediately with fast, unlimited teams having gymnasiums. Eastern High officials have lent their support to the boys and is supplying uniforms to their former celebrities.

Meanwhile, another team involving well-known sports figures, barged into the unlimited class to be known as the Tennis Shop five. Managed by Bill Shreve, this combination will comprise Hugh Lynch of Princeton; Gilbert Hunt, another tennis star; Happy Jacobs of Georgetown; Art Simmons, of Internal Revenue; Ted Pierce of the Government League, Alan Staubley and Stan McCaskey.

Interest in the 100-pound, 115-pound, 130-pound and 145-pound was attracting teams from all sections of the city and in a 15-mile radius.

In the girls' division, the "two-court" plan will prevail. Miss Helen B. Lawrence, of George Washington University, who is in charge of the tournament, announced. Of vital importance is this to most girls' teams intending to enter, the Community Center League this year using the "two-court" plan, but some other teams playing under the "three-court" ruling.

The latter was used in the A. A. U. tournament last year, won by Sandy Springs, Md., but since the National A. A. U. has prescribed the two-court system for universal use.

Football Rules Clarified at Meeting

No definite action was taken but the following note was adopted: "Unless coaches assume the responsibility of keeping ineligible players away from that part of the field to which the forward pass is thrown, it will be necessary to adopt a rule requiring ineligible players to remain on the line of scrimmage."

"Kicked Ball" Clarified.

To clarify the rule against kicking a free ball, the present approved ruling was superseded by the following:

"A free ball strikes or is struck by a portion of a player's body other than his foot. Ruling: This is not to be considered as kicking a free ball."

Thereby the rules makers acted to outlaw any repetition of the famous "soccer kick" made by Yale's Larry Kelley against Navy last season. Kelley booted a fumble ball 22 yards and recovered it just short of the Navy's goal line, paving the way for Yale's winning score. It was allowed under the ruling, now eliminated, which reads: "A player in endeavoring to recover a free ball accidentally strikes it with his foot or leg. Ruling: This is not to be considered as kicking a free ball, the prohibition being against a positive act."

One Kick-off Allowed.

As a result of the new ruling, the question of intent will not have to be reckoned with and the penalty, involving loss of ball to opponents, will be enforced, regardless of whether the ball is kicked purposely or accidentally.

The new kickoff rule reads as follows:

"Hereafter only one kickoff will be allowed and, if the ball is kicked off out of bounds, it is to be put in play by opponents from scrimmage on their own 35-yard line or 10 yards in from the point where it crossed the side line, whichever is more advantageous."

In addition to speeding up the game, the committee felt this would simplify the rule which previously provided for a second kickoff, if the first went out of bounds under its own power. Under the old rule, if a second kickoff went out of bounds, the ball was awarded to the opponents to be put in play on their own 40-yard line.

Numbering of players, both front and back, will be mandatory under the 1937 rules. The committee acted upon a recommendation made by the Coaches' Association. Previously this detail of equipment was the subject of nothing more forceful than a footnote. It was urged primarily for the benefit of spectators and football writers.

Eleven members of the football rules committee, headed by Chairman Walter R. Okeson, of Lehigh, met with advisory groups representing the officials and coaches. Others in attendance were:

Rules committee—W. S. Langford, of New York, secretary; A. A. Stagg, of the College of the Pacific, life member; William J. Bingham, of Harvard; Wilmer G. Crowell, of Philadelphia; W. A. Alexander, of Georgia Tech; Fielding H. Yost, of Michigan; Dana X. Bible, of Texas; Morley Jennings, of Baylor; L. H. Maloney, of Denver; and Willis O. Hunter, of Southern California.

Officials—A. W. Palmer, of Philadelphia; A. R. Hutchens, of Lake Wales, Fla.; Herb Dana, of Oakland, Calif., and E. C. Krieger, of Columbus, Ohio.

Virginia Schools Seek Rule Change

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Feb. 15.—Floyd E. Fowlkes, faculty adviser of athletics at John Marshall High School, said tonight John Marshall and Petersburg High Schools would seek an amendment to rules of the Virginia Literary and Athletic League requiring simultaneous scholastic reports among member Class A schools.

The league will hold its annual meeting in Charlottesville Saturday.

Fowlkes said they would ask specific revision of the fourth eligibility rule which reads:

"A student must on his last regular report make passing grades on at least three subjects, carrying full unit credit, or in two such subjects and one other, except physical education, requiring full time in the regular schedule of classes."

The John Marshall adviser said some schools give out only one report during a half semester, and that they consequently held "a distinct advantage in athletics over John Marshall,' which issues reports every month.

"When a boy is playing football, basketball or baseball at a school where he receives only one report during a half semester, he doesn't have to worry about passing his classes to participate in athletics," he said. "At John Marshall, we stand three chances of losing an athlete in each sport as he gets three reports while playing either sport."

U. S. Defeats England In Table Tennis Play

Birmingham, England, Feb. 15 (AP). United States table tennis players won two out of three games in a team match against English stars today.

Mrs. Dolores Probert Kuenz, of St. Louis, defeated Mrs. L. Booker, 21—19, 17—21, 22—20. Sol Schiff, of New York, beat E. J. Filby, 21—19, 15—21, 21—15. The English team of Lurie and Bubley turned back Jimmy McClure, of Indianapolis, and Bud Blattner, of St. Louis, 21—15, 16—21, 21—19.

Chicago, Feb. 15 (AP).—Ken O'Dea, young catcher, sent his signed contract to the Chicago Cubs from his home in Lima, N. Y., today, leaving seven Cubs still out of the fold.

Columbus U. to Box Citadel Next

Out of the frying pan and into the fire is what the boxing team of Columbus University will be doing tomorrow night, when the undefeated battlers meet the undefeated Citadel College at Joe Turner's Arena.

Barely over its great battle against King College Friday night, which the local scrappers won, 5-3, after an evening of bitter fighting, the Barristers tomorrow night will meet a well-armed team, fit and rarin' for action.

The South Carolinians are undefeated in three meets thus far this season, scoring impressively over the University of Georgia, Tennessee and South Carolina, all by the score of 5-3.

Bobby Grimm, Columbus University's battling 175-pounder, absent from Friday night's meeting due to an attack of the flu, will be back ready for action. His opponent, Hugh Rogers, holder of many Golden Glove A. A. U. titles, is undefeated in three meets this season. Rogers, a hard-punching battler, had both of his last two opponents on the canvas for the count.

While, speaking of Rogers, it might also be well to mention little Hughie's brother Orville, who also will make the trip up from Charleston this morning. Orville, towering over 6 feet, weighs 208 pounds and has scored six victories, battled one draw and has never tasted defeat.

Buddy Lazear, Columbus University's hard punching 147-pounder, held to a draw Friday night against Eddie Sweet, of Kings College, will be out for revenge tomorrow night at the expense of Ripper Todd, Citadel's hard punching welterweight. The Ripper is undefeated thus far, scoring three knockouts, two technicals and has fought one draw, which leads us to believe that Mr. Lazear has possibly chosen a very inopportune time to seek revenge. Regardless, revenge or no revenge, a great battle looms.

Jimmie Willis, sensation of the last meeting against King College, will have his hands full once again when he meets Skeet Melfi, undefeated 126-pounder. Melfie, a smooth fighter with plenty of class, packs a mean wallop and should supply plenty of action for the undefeated Columbus battler.

Scholarships For Va. Aim Of Alumni

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Feb. 15.—Richmond alumni of the University of Virginia next Monday will be asked to approve a plan of scholarships for young men of good academic standing and "exceptional athletic distinction."

Guy Hazelgrove, president of the Richmond chapter, said the proposal was to provide $800 apiece for one to five students a year with the aim of "encouraging men of all-around ability to enjoy the privileges of the University of Virginia."

He said it was hoped that not only the Richmond chapter would approve the plan, but also that others of the university's approximately 40 chapters will do the same. He said Capt. Norton Pritchett, university athletic directors, and 500 Virginia alumni had been invited to be present at the assembly.

He thought it unlikely that Frank J. Murray, Marquette mentor whose appointment as Virginia's football coach was announced Saturday, will be in Virginia in time to be at the dinner.

Hazelgrove, declared the plan drawn up by the committee said the recent withdrawal of the university from the Southern Conference "seemed to present an opportunity" for alumni "to render material and practical assistance to the university."

Under the proposed alumni-assistance plan, recipients of the scholarships would be selected on qualities of manhood, force of character and leadership, preparatory school records, physical fitness, athletic distinction, and good sportsmanship. A committee of five members of the Richmond chapter shall serve as a selection commission.

On The Air Today

Walter Donaldson, who turned out one big song hit after another not so many years ago, has lost none of his touch. He still makes sweet music fit the lyrics of moonlight-and-caresses in a most superior way, according to Carl Hoff, maestro of the "Hit Parade" programs. Hoff has been checking up on the tunesmiths who have been successful in landing their wares at the top of the weekly popularity lists.

Two others, Billy Hill and the team of Gordon and Ravel, have succeeded with Donaldson in placing songs at the head of the list on two occasions since the Columbia "Hit Parade" series started ten months ago.

Hill's two bellringers are "Glory of Love" and "Chapel in the Moonlight." Gordon and Ravel's twin successes are "When I'm With You" and "Goodnight, My Love." And Donaldson's are "You" (from "The Great Ziegfeld") and "Did I Remember?"

It is this last named that raises Donaldson to Hoff's highest regard. At least so far as the "Hit Parade" is concerned, Donaldson is tops because of the great hit from "Suzy." The tune took the lead on the "Hit Parade" on August 29 and stayed on top through October 17, when it gave way to "When Did You Leave Heaven."

Stoopnagle and Budd are going overboard all at once in assembling a troupe. First it was Joan Banks, signed to read lines here and there in their Sunday afternoon tomfoolery.

Now it is GoGo Delys. The Columbia songstress has been signed to appear regularly with Don Voorhees and orchestra. She really is an old pal of the Colonel's and Budd's because she sang regularly with them when their slogan was "Watch the Sponsor's Go By," meaning they were "at liberty" for the time being.

GoGo Delys began her radio career with Meredith Willson, West Coast maestro for the National Broadcasting Co. Phil Baker liked her singing (he was then doing a program for N. B. C.) and signed her for his own broadcast. Later he made arrangements for her to come East.

Winter Wheat Advances With Dust Storms

May Deliveries Lower With Weakness at Liverpool.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Feb. 15.—Reported increasing severity of dust storms in domestic winter wheat territory Southwest lifted prices today for new crop futures, but failed to overcome May losses.

All future deliveries of wheat there, both new and old, dropped temporarily a cent or more a bushel, responsive to complete failure that the Liverpool market showed to reflect Saturday's steep upturn in Chicago quotations.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures ranged from ⅞ of a cent lower to ⅝ higher compared with Saturday's finish; May, 137⅛@137¼; July, 119⅛@119¼; September, 114¾@114⅞, with corn ⅜ off to ⅜ up; May, 109⅞@110; July, 104¾@104⅞; September, 97¾; oats at ⅜ decline to ⅛ advance; May, 51¼, and rye showing ¼@¾ bulge; May, 114¼. The outcome in provisions was unchanged to 32 cents decline.

Court Calls for Plan On Seaboard Air Line

Norfolk, Va., Feb. 15 (AP).—Federal Judge Luther B. Way today ordered receivers of the Seaboard Air Line Railway to draw up and submit to the court "a comprehensive plan" for reorganizing the road's financial affairs.

The Seaboard went into receivership seven years ago, and its operations along the length of the Atlantic Coastal Plain have been directed by the two receivers, Henry W. Anderson, of Richmond, and Legh Powell, of Norfolk.

Stocks Decline as Monetary Managers Promise Action Against Foreign Funds.

New York, Feb. 15.—Stocks were heavy on a turnover of around 2,000,000 shares, the smallest of the month. Prices were poor at the start, lacked rallying power, but closed above their worst of the day. May wheat lost ¾ of a cent at 137¼ cents a bushel.

Government and other gilt-edged bonds continued to work lower, as they are doing in anticipation of higher money rates when the increase in bank reserve requirements goes into effect. Without that the signs of the times are for higher money. Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau said publicly today that he expected stiffer interest rates, and few will argue the point with him. To hold up the price of its bonds under such conditions will be the problem of the Administration which found no great trouble in devising means for spending the money in the first place, and which continues to do so.

Commodities were forced to swallow a price mixture and along with stocks gave some evidence of hookworm. Consistent strength was shown by only a handful of common stocks, and mostly for special reasons. Canada Dry moved up 2 points. Anaconda Wire, American News, New York Airbrake, Newport, New Haven, Swift and Mohawk were firm.

Steel, metal, motor and railroad shares dropped from 1 to 3 points. In other districts the price changes were mostly fractional. Opening prices for the leading industrials were down a point or so and after another had been chopped off before noon little further damage was done. Acme Steel was an exception, rising smartly. Coppers were under a good deal of pressure. Magma lost 2 points.

General Lethargy.

Motor shares suffered a relapse from the emotional stimulus of the strike ending. General Motors, Chrysler and Mack led the decline. Santa Fe was a soft rail. Selling was consistent in Central, Chesapeake & Ohio, Southern Pacific and Southern Railway. The spurt in Lehigh and Lackawanna subsided. New Haven preferred rose briskly.

In other directions the trading was desultory. Pure Oil broke more than two points on proposed stock changes. Phoenix preferred dropped half a dozen points on a poor earnings statement. Atlas, which began its activity on the big board, was given the customary good sendoff. Another newcomer, Smith & Corona, had a less pleasing experience. General Electric and Westinghouse were poor performers.

With the motor strikers going back to work, with the steel industry's operations mounting to a new high level since the end of boom years, and with trade reports generally favorable, the heaviness of stocks was not easily explained. Casting about for possible excuses, Wall street was inclined to show concern over the meeting of the monetary authorities in Washington this morning, for the purpose of taking action to discourage the investment of foreign funds in our securities. After the meeting Governor Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board hinted that "something concrete" would come of the meeting.

Silver Mining.

A nice new mine— that is, a big hole in the ground—is to be dug by the Government somewhere in the vicinity of United States troops, according to the Director of the Mint. Into the hole will be shoveled the $1,139,000,000 of silver taken out of other holes in the ground and bought by the Treasury under the silver purchase act. Aside from the fact that returning silver to nature will involve considerable expense, the idea is not a bad one. Just as much good will be done by the metal under ground as above ground in the various Treasury warehouses, it won't need much guarding, for the metal trades now use mostly nickel and stainless steel, the former silver standard countries are now on paper standards and only a small fraction of the stuff ever can be used for money. The silver purchase idea has been rather a costly experiment for taxpayers, but a beautiful one for the enrichment of a handful of Westerners. Its two main purposes have signally failed; it has not jacked up commodity prices nor brought up the world price of silver to $1.29 an ounce.

Du Pont Declares 75-Cent Dividend

New York, Feb. 15 (AP).—Directors of E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. declared a dividend today of 75 cents a common share. In December a year-end payment of $2 was made, while in the preceding two quarters' regular dividends of 90 cents were supplemented by extras of 70 cents. Total payments in 1936 were $6.10. The latest dividend is payable March 15 to holders of record February 24. The company recently announced it was abandoning its traditional policy of making regular quarterly payments and that hereafter it would pay interim dividends with a final at the year-end.

Dulin Named Reception Head At Bank Dinner

Local A. I. B. Will Hold 32d Annual Event on Saturday.

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Appointment of James C. Dulin, jr., treasurer, American Security & Trust Co., as chairman of the reception committee for the thirty-second annual banquet of Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, Saturday, at the Willard Hotel, was announced yesterday by Frank M. Perley, general chairman of the banquet committee. Mr. Dulin is a past president of the chapter and a member of its faculty.

J. C. DULIN, Jr.

Serving with him on the reception committee are:

Francis G. Addison, Security Savings and Commercial Bank; Willard G. Barker, Morris Plan Bank; Harold Burnside, Riggs National Bank; Clarence F. Burton, City Bank; M. F. Calnan, Liberty National Bank; Victor B. Deyber, Second National Bank; Charles H. Doing, Washington Loan & Trust Co.; Robert V. Fleming, Riggs National Bank; H. Prescott Gatley, National Savings & Trust Co.; Thomas J. Groom, Bank of Commerce & Savings; Hilleary G. Hoskinson, Riggs National Bank; Hans W. Ireland, American Security & Trust Co.; C. F. Jacobsen, National Metropolitan Bank; H. H. McKee, National Capital Bank; Lanier B. McLachlen, McLachlen Banking Corporation; J. Earle McGeary, W. B. Hibbs & Co.; Howard Moran, American Security & Trust Co.; C. H. Pope, Munsey Trust Co.; Ord Preston, Union Trust Co.; F. P. H. Siddons, American Security & Trust Co.; Frank J. Stryker, Columbia National Bank; George O. Vass, Riggs National Bank; Wilmer J. Waller, Hamilton National Bank; J. Frank White, National Bank of Washington.

Cost Accountants.

Maj. Daniel J. Donovan, auditor of the District of Columbia, will be the speaker at the February meeting of Washington Chapter, National Association of Cost Accountants, to be held tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock in the Gold Room of the Hamilton Hotel. The meeting will be preceded by a dinner beginning at 6:30 o'clock.

Maj. Donovan will talk on the cost of administration of the District of Columbia. The District, being a unique territorial division of the United States, presents many interesting and intricate problems of finance and accounting. Maj. Donovan, speaking from his 46 years' experience in the District Government, will discuss these problems.

Coming at a time when the old question of fiscal relationship of the District and Federal Government is again in the foreground as a result of the Jacobs committee report, the meeting is attracting wide interest. In addition to the membership of the local chapter of the Cost Accountants' Association there will be present members of the various citizens' and business men's associations, the Washington Real Estate Board, the Auditors Section of the District of Columbia Bankers Association and the National Capital Group of Controllers.

Following the principal speech a lively discussion is expected of the three-point formula of the Jacobs committee. In the absence of C. Milton Clark, president of the chapter, Walter R. Raymond, its vice president, and chief accountant of Griffith-Consumers, Inc., will preside.

D. C. Life Underwriters.

The February luncheon meeting of the District of Columbia Life Underwriters Association will be held tomorrow afternoon at 12:15 o'clock at the Willard Hotel. President Laurance H. Riggles will preside and the guest speaker will be Irvin Bendiner, Philadelphia, agent of the New York Life Insurance Co.

In addition to having written an enormous volume of personal life insurance business, Mr. Bendiner is a member of the faculty of the Wharton School of Finance, University of Pennsylvania, and a specialist in life insurance law.

W. E. Schooley to Speak.

William E. Schooley, assistant treasurer of American Security & Trust Co., will give an informal talk to members of the Loudoun, Fauquier and Prince William Clearing House Association at their meeting at Remington, Va., this evening at 6:30 p. m.

The subject to be discussed relates to the 1936 income tax return which is to be filed by banking institutions. The association comprises the banks in the foregoing three counties of Virginia. A dinner precedes the talk.

Call Carl, Inc., Directors.

Cotton Consumption Sets January Peak

The previous high was 668,286 bales in January, 1929.

Employment Only 3,500,000 Under '29 Top

Jobless Below 10,000,000 for First Time Since Recovery Began.

New York, Feb. 15.—The number of persons unemployed in the United States in December dropped below the 10,000,000 mark for the first time since the recovery movement started, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute. The actual figure was 9,412,000 as against 10,029,000 in November and 11,346,000 in December, 1935. The December, 1936, figure represented a decrease of 7,237,000 from the unemployment peak of 16,649,000 in March, 1933.

The number of persons employed rose to 41,817,000 in December from 41,170,000 in November and from 39,523,000 in December, 1935. Thus, 2,294,000 persons found positions during 1936. There were 8,552,000 more persons employed at the end of 1936 than at the low for the depression in March, 1933, when only 33,265,000 persons were employed. Unemployment was not reduced by a corresponding amount because of the increase in the supply of workers which resulted from the gain in population.

In December, 1936, only 3,677,000 fewer persons were employed than at the predepression peak in September, 1929, when 45,494,000 persons were employed. At that time, however, there were 2,951,000 persons unemployed and since then 2,784,000 persons have been added to the supply of workers. This is why there were 9,412,000 persons unemployed in December, 1936, when employment showed a decrease of only 3,677,000 from the predepression peak.

Retail Advertising Gains 8.5 Per Cent

Chicago, Feb. 15.—For the week ended February 6 retail display advertising carried by newspapers in 74 major cities was 1,331,797 lines greater than that of the corresponding week in 1936, Advertising Age, national advertising newspaper, reported today.

In the week reported, retail advertising in newspapers in the 74 reporting cities totaled 17,061,385 lines against 15,729,588 lines carried in the similar week of last year. This is an increase of 8.5 per cent.

United Stock Yds. Plan Expansion

New York, Feb. 15 (AP).—Plans under which it is expected the recently organized United Stockyards Corporation will acquire the holdings of the $4,000,000 General Stockyards Corporation were announced today by John De Witt, investment broker, who recently formed and financed United to acquire the Swift & Co. stockyards holdings.

De Witt said that through purchase from Philip D. Armour and Lester Armour of their holdings in General Stockyards Corporation he had acquired 51 per cent of the common stock of that company. Upon acceptance by two-thirds of the common stockholders, United, De Witt said, is expected to purchase the General Stockyards portfolio for cash.

Should the deal go through, United will own majority blocks of stock in St. Paul Union Stockyards Co., Sioux City Stockyards Co., Fort Worth Stockyards Co., Portland Union Stockyards Co., South San Francisco Union Stockyards Co., and Brighton Stockyards Co.

Boston Wool Market.

Few inquiries were being received for domestic wool, and holders, on the other hand, were not making an effort to move spot wools.

Asking prices on spot domestic wools were unchanged from last week. An occasional house was showing a willingness to make slight concessions from their asking prices in view of the quiet demand and the irregular price tendency abroad.

Dulin Named Reception Head At Bank Dinner

dent, Herman F. Carl, revealed a 20 per cent increase in volume of business over 1935 to a total of nearly $350,000. He also reported the establishment last April of the Washington Motor Sales Co. as a subsidiary corporation for the sale of Hudsons and Terraplanes. General Manager Edward O. Carl reported the handling of 42,701 repair orders and 21,844 street calls, besides 9,033 tire and battery jobs.

Fidelity Storage Election.

At the annual meeting of stockholders of the Fidelity Storage Corporation the following were elected to serve as members of the board of directors for the ensuing year: Philip P. Campbell, former chairman of the Rules Committee of the House of Representatives; H. H. Darneille, of Auchincloss, Parker & Redpath; David B. Karrick, president; James L. Karrick, jr., Eugene B. Roberts, of Randall H. Hagner & Co.; James McD. Shea, of Alonzo O. Bliss Properties; Charles F. Wilson, of Sherley, Faust & Wilson; Mark Winkler, manager of the real estate department of the company, and W. C. Woodward, secretary-treasurer.

All of the members of the new board are continuing to hold office from the preceding year except Mr. Shea, who was elected to the board to take the place of Harry S. Plager, who has retired to look after his new interests in the coal business.

Swift & Co. Vacation Plans.

Vacations for all hourly-paid employes of Swift & Co. at Washington now have a minimum of two years' service were announced yesterday by A. H. Thompson, manager of the local Swift plant. These vacations, planned well in advance of the spring and summer season, are not the payless kind.

Approximately 85 local employes will receive vacations of one, two or three weeks, according to Mr. Thompson. The plan, which goes into effect immediately, is an expansion of the vacation program which has been in effect for 14 years.
